Hedley trying to get new people hired

The City of Hedley hopes to name successors this week to take the place of City Secretary Randy Shaw and two other city employees who turned in their resignations July 1.

Mayor Dusty Wilkinson said the city has received several applications for Shaw's position and for those of City Clerk Rhonda Shaw and city maintenance worker Roger Hagar.

"We got a whole lot of interest, and they're still calling in," the mayor said. "We'll try to get someone hired this week, hopefully one (position) or two or maybe all three."

City aldermen met in called sessions Thursday and Friday of last week, but did not fill any of the positions.

Wilkinson said a two-person committee consisting of Aldermen Travis Ruthardt and Lonnie Roby are in charge of interviewing candidates. Four people were interviewed last week and more were interviewed Monday evening. City aldermen were scheduled to meet again in called session Tuesday night as the ENTERPRISE went to press.

Randy Shaw's resignation becomes effective August 1, and his wife and Hagar are following his exit at the same time.

Enterprise receives awards from WTPA

THE CLARENDON ENTERPRISE received three first place honors in the West Texas Press Association's 2009 Better Newspaper Contest last Saturday.

Results of the contest were announced during the WTPA's 79th annual convention at the MCM Grande Dome in Odessa.

The ENTERPRISE won first place in Advertising with a Cornell's Country Store ad designed by Julie Shields, which judges praised for its ability to attract the right target audience through the good use of photography and copy.

Roger Estlack earned a first place plaque for Editorials about last year's sheriff's contract with the city and about the impact to the community when Stanley's closed its General Motors dealership last spring.

The local paper also received first place honors for Photography from last year's basketball playoffs, and Estlack received a third place recognition for Column Writing.

The ENTERPRISE competed in Division D for small weeklies. The ALBANY NEWS was recognized as the top paper in that division.

Summer Celebration to spotlight Clarendon

Clarendon will be in the spotlight this Thursday evening as News-Channel 10 comes to town with its 2010 Summer Celebration on the Donley County Courthouse Square.

The Clarendon Tourism Committee invites everyone to be on hand as the news team broadcasts live at 5:00, 6:00, and 10:00 p.m. Activities scheduled from 4:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m. KEFH and KLSR radio stations are also going to be broadcasting from the celebration.

This fun-filled event will showcase Clarendon as a progressive community with a rich heritage of Agriculture, Education, Religion, and the Arts. The Celebration promises to have something for everyone including local musicians, an antique car show, a Farmers' Market, demonstrations, and raffles.

One of the highlights of the celebration will be the Amarillo Star contest, which is reaching out this year and opening auditions to soloists, duets, trios and quartets.

"We thought it would be fun to add more competition to the event this year by opening the contest up to more than soloists," said Maryann Hueston, Amarillo Star Chairman. "We look at this as an event to showcase our areas talent and since we encompass the Tri-State area we wanted to open the competition up to groups."

For more information about the Amarillo Star contest, call (806) 376-7767.

Summer Celebration organizers have also planned games for kids of all ages, such as a dunking booth, water games, a bounce house, a Busy Town Mystery, a greased pig catch, a stick horse rodeo, horseshoes, washers, marbles, sack races, limbo, red-neck golf, wagon rides, marbles, a cow train, watermelon seed spitting, and more.

Food vendors are scheduled to offer a wide variety of tasty morsels, including candy, sausage wraps, chopped beef sandwiches, stuffed jalapenos, burritos, pizza, cotton candy, nachos, cakes and pies by the slice, funnel cakes, ribbon fries, corn dogs, and brownies.

The evening will conclude with a special movie showing of The Karate Kid at the Sandell Drive-In from 11:00 p.m. to 1:00 a.m.

Good beef... naturally

By Ashlyn Tubbs, Clarendon Enterprise

All Natural Beef. It's what's for dinner at the 3-H Beef Ranch.

The Gene and Kathy Hommel family are in their ninth year of raising and selling USDA Certified All Natural Angus and Charolais Beef on their certified USDA All Natural Age and Source Ranch.

Each calf born on their ranch is under the All Natural Program, meaning they are personally cared for all the way through harvest and are never given growth additives, hormones, or antibiotics.

"These cattle are under strict guidelines," said Gene, owner and manager of 3-H Beef Ranch. "You can't give them anything that will leave residue in their system. Once a calf is doctoring from a sickness, it can't go back into the program."

Gene cooked up the idea to grow and sell All Natural Beef about 11 years ago.

"I just wanted to get premiums and grow the best product we can produce," Gene said. "There is a new market for it, and we decided we wanted to tap into that."

To get into the program, the USDA had to audit the Hommels' management system.

"They check records of when you turn your bulls out, when the first and last calf is born, how you identify calves you doctor, your cattle handling techniques, pens, water, working facilities and grass management," Gene said.

"There's a standard for everything you do when raising these cattle."

The Hommels first marketed their all natural cattle through the US Premium Beef and Myers programs, but last year they decided to get a label and package their own brand of beef.

"Packaging our own beef is a way to take advantage of our genetics and what facilities we have," Gene said. "It's been a challenge getting our own label though. You have to prove everything on it, even that we have five generations in our family."

In order to follow one of the many rules, the Hommels have to substitute paddles for hot shots and incorporate new techniques for handling their cattle.

"In the USDA guidelines, it says that 'cattle must be handled quietly and firmly to avoid unnecessary distress or pain'," owner and bookkeeper Kathy said. "There is even a certain way we have to put them down if we can't get them well, like a Hospice Center."

Each animal in the program has an Electronic Identification (EID) tag that keeps record of them from their birth to when they are packaged.

"We have been EID tagging our cattle for several years now," Kathy said. "Gene has truly been on the cutting edge of everything new that has come out."

The EID tags and the All Natural Program helps consumers know exactly where their beef comes from and what processes the animal has been through up to harvest.

City aldermen discuss issues with water lines

The Clarendon Board of Aldermen were meeting in called session to discuss water lines as the ENTERPRISE went to press Tuesday night after the topic generated comments at last week's regular meeting.

Following a public hearing last week on the city's application for a state grant to replace an aging main sewer line, Alderman Kyle Davis inquired as to why a grant couldn't be applied for to replace water lines in problem areas of the city. A representative of the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission responded that grants are most likely to be awarded in neighborhoods with the low incomes.

As the meeting drew to a close, Davis again brought up water issues and asked if residences in the west side of the city were all tied in to new water lines yet.

Interim Administrator Phyllis Jeffers replied that the city only had two men to do that work and discussed some of the delays they have had in working on that.

Several aldermen said they understood the constraints of time and being understaffed, but they expressed a desire to see more attention paid to tying into the new lines.

"I have been chewed out royally about it," Alderman Larry Hicks said, noting that there are many residences with black pipe stubbed up in their yards.

Alderman Will Thompson said

Jury finds Randall guilty of assault

A Donley County jury convicted Michael Randall of the second degree felony offense of sexual assault of a child last Thursday, July 15, and sentenced him to 13 years in the Institutional Division of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice.

Randall, a 22-year-old Clarendon resident, was arrested for the offense of burglary of a habitation with intent to commit a sexual assault on May 29, 2009. The Donley County Sheriff's Office earlier that day had received a report that a man had forced his way into an apartment on Rosenfield Street and assaulted a 15-year-old girl.

Randall was indicted by a Donley County Grand Jury on June 22, 2009, for three different felony counts that occurred on May 29, 2009.

The trial began last Tuesday morning with jury selection taking most of the day. At four o'clock, District Attorney Luke Inman presented the opening for the State to the 12-member jury of Donley County residents.

Late Tuesday afternoon, the State called its first witness, the victim to the sexual assault, which had occurred on the last day of school for Clarendon ISD in 2009.

"It takes great courage to get up before your attacker, your family, members of the court and 12 complete strangers and tell them all about the horrific events that you just want to forget," said Inman. "Our victim is a courageous young person and made this guilty conviction possible."

After the victim testified on Tuesday afternoon, the court recessed.

On Wednesday morning, the State continued its case by calling five more witnesses. State's witnesses included Virginia Young, Sexual Assault Nurse Examiner, Sheriff Charles "Butch" Blackburn and Chief Deputy Randy Bond.

The Donley County Jury deliberated on Thursday morning before returning their verdict of guilty to the lesser included offense of sexual assault of a child.

"Like always, the Donley County Sheriff's Office did an excellent investigation and provided this office with all the information to proceed in this very serious trial," Inman said. "Sheriff Blackburn and his deputies, along with the SANE nurses in Amarillo, place high importance on offenses involving

Government will monitor your fatness

Uncle Sam wants to know how fat you are, and he's going to make your doctor report your tonnage. Reports are now circulating that new federal guidelines have been issued that will make it mandatory for health care providers to include your Body Mass Index in electronic records that all Americans will have to have by 2014.

And while one would think that such a rule would be part of the health care reform bill, the records requirement is actually part of last year's stimulus law.

Doctors and hospitals that refuse to comply with the new rules will risk penalties such as reduced Medicare and Medicaid payments, according to CNSNews.com and FoxNews.

Nutrition expert Mitzi Dulan told FoxNews: "The fact we're now tracking BMIs, I think knowledge is power for us. There are a lot of people that don't know their BMI and it's denial."

Dulan unwittingly hit the nail on the head with her analysis – knowledge is power. And in this case, it is power for the federal government to further meddle and control our lives.

There is no good reason for the federal government to have this information. There is no constitutional activity that requires it. But this is what the American government does now instead of doing important things like – oh, I don't know – say securing its international borders.

The FoxNews report also cites Dulan as noting that that $147 billion is spent annually on obesity-related costs.

Now why is this significant? Just as this column has warned before, the Food Nazis are taking pages from the War on Big Tobacco years ago. Remember how much tobacco-related illnesses cost the nation? Remember how tobacco manufacturers were accused of marketed their products to kids? All of this and more was used as fodder for lawsuits against tobacco companies and as a means to control and suppress tobacco consumption.

Now, we learn that billions are spent on obesity related costs; health nuts are targeting McDonald's and others for marketing to – altogether now – the children; and the feds believe they have a vested interest in what you eat.

This is just the beginning. The government is here to help us, and the powers that be are determined that you will be healthy whether you want to be or not.

Meanwhile...

I swear I don't know what the world is coming to. The end, perhaps. Things just get stranger and stranger, and sometimes seem to go from bad to worse.

Case in point, I'm perusing the Internet Monday morning and learn that, in honor of its 65th anniversary, Baskin-Robbins is pulling the plug on one of its longest running flavors, French Vanilla. Sort of like, Coca-Cola celebrated its centennial back in the mid-1980s by changing its 100-year-old soda formula. A simply brilliant example of public relations stupidity. Why this has been done is this beyond me. Obama probably has something to do with it. I'm sure.

I grew up with Baskin-Robbins; it was part of the excitement of going to Amarillo back in the day. As I recall, there were at one time three locations to chose from, and my family ate at all of them depending on which was closest. We would eat at the Zuider Zee, Myer's Drumstick, or Shakey's Pizza; and then have dessert at Baskin-Robbins. And there, I always, always got French Vanilla. Sometimes I'd put something else with it – Mint Chocolate Chip or Strawberry Cheesecake or something – but there was always a scoop of French Vanilla in my cup.

B-R sent my brother and me birthday cards every year, provided him with some sweet treats during some rather unpleasant dental procedures, and also was the source of the dry ice that he used to burn a wart off my hand very unexpectedly when I was about 13... but I digress.

I guess it has something with my approaching 40th birthday, but the things of my youth now seem further and further away and some of the things I loved the most have almost disappeared entirely. Baskin-Robbins wounded me deeply about 10 or 12 years ago when they suddenly pulled all their franchises out of Amarillo and Lubbock, but one did finally re-open in Lubbock just a couple of years ago.

But now comes this news, the end of B-R's French Vanilla. I don't know how much more I can take really. I've joined the Facebook page that is trying to save this beloved flavor and coerced my employees into doing the same. The page started last Thursday and by Monday morning it had more than 900 followers and that grew to more than 1300 by Monday evening, and they are all as outraged as I am.

For example, Glenn Causer of Ruckersville, Virginia wrote: "Keep French vanilla, fire the idiot that decided to get rid of it."

But it was Gary Brefini of Dedham, Mass., who summed it up best: "You ba! <shaking my fist>...French Vanilla? Have you no conscience? No humanity?"

No, Gary. They apparently don't.

Middle ground needed on immigration

By Jonathan Moore

Most of those involved in the immigration debate agree that immigration policy needs to be reformed. How to reform the system exactly is a matter of considerably greater disagreement.

Immigration is a complex issue affected by numerous factors like welfare policy and public education. Thus, clear solutions to the conundrum are difficult to arrive at. What we can get at, however, is a broad set of principles (which some Christian conservatives have a difficult time grasping) that policy makers should consider in any reform effort to construct a rational, God-honoring immigration law.

1) God created man in his own image, and as such, human beings need to be treated in a compassionate, loving manner.

In short, a moral and just immigration policy should reflect God's attitude towards immigrants. To paraphrase Kepler, man is at his best when he "thinks God's thoughts after him."

One of the most loving ways to decrease global poverty is to create new opportunities for people to work themselves out of poverty and provide for their families.

Few foreigners have opportunities to care for their families in their home country like they would in the United States. Allowing them to come to here to better their lives is a Christ-like option.

2) The more people, the better. Conservatives hold this to be true in matters such as abortion, eugenics, and forced sterilization. More people produce more goods and services for society. Even those deemed a "drain" on society should be valued.

Yet on immigration, many conservatives find themselves on the same side of the issue as people who have values diametrically opposed to their own; population-control advocates.

In a puzzling twist, conservatives have recently found themselves using the same rhetoric as zero-population-growth advocates, arguing that allowing more people to enter this country is a net loss for society due to increased unemployment, increased consumption of social services, etc. They would never accept the same arguments as justification for ending the lives of (or deporting) disabled children, the elderly, or other individuals who consume more societal resources than they contribute.

3) Government regulation and control of any commodity through quotas or price control is always bad.

This is something most conservatives will agree on. They understand that government intervention in markets creates distortions, as seen by their stringent opposition to the stimulus package.

The American immigration system is a quagmire of quotas and controls that does nothing to reflect supply and demand. Not surprisingly, a thriving black market of illegal immigrants, who do not have the time or money to navigate America's prohibitively complex immigration system, has arisen to satisfy American employers' and consumers' need for inexpensive labor.

Most illegal immigrants are not breaking the law because they enjoy breaking the law. Most come here because they want to give themselves and their families a better life, free from oppressive government regulation.

4) Enforcing existing immigration laws is both futile and destructive.

In 2009, the Department of Homeland Security estimated that there were 10.8 million illegal immigrants in America. Deporting all or most of the illegal population is, frankly, impossible. It would be tantamount to rounding up the state of Michigan and deporting every one of its citizens.

Further, the Cato Institute estimated that if border enforcement were increased enough to stop the flow of immigrants, American economic output would be reduced by $80 billion annually for ten years. Coupled with the deportation of illegal immigrants already here, that number could double.

The Center for American Progress estimates that the administrative expenses of all these deportations would be roughly $200 billion over five years.

Laws should be enforced, but destructive laws should be repealed and replaced with new laws. In this case, it seems that having an immigration system based on arbitrary quotas is a bad idea both morally and economically.

So, what should we do? It is clear that neither amnesty alone nor increased enforcement are wise options to solve the immigration problem. Allowing illegal immigrants to stay without creating a path to entrance for new immigrants will only result in the same problems we face now. And stepped-up enforcement of bad laws could damage American prosperity.

A middle way between these two must be found. By following the principles and understanding the facts above, America can have a sensible, God-honoring, and prosperity-promoting immigration policy.

Military foundation built at home

For the future security posture of U.S. military forces and for the fiscal health of our nation, our military construction agenda should be guided by these words: Build in America. At the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military determined that our armed forces would be best trained and equipped for service when stationed at installations on U.S. soil. Thus, our military adopted a "force projection" strategy that allows our troops to deploy from home, rather than being based primarily overseas.

In 2005, the Overseas Basing Commission reaffirmed this strategy and lauded the Department of Defense's (DOD) efforts to transform the military and re-station tens of thousands of military personnel in the United States. Congress has invested more than $14 billion to build housing, stationing, training, and deployment capacities at major military installations, such as Fort Bliss and Fort Hood. We have proven we can best deploy from the United States – and we can do it more cost-effectively.

However, the DOD's current military construction proposal would begin a worldwide transformation of U.S. basing that would expand our overseas presence. DOD is pursuing expensive, and in some cases duplicative, construction projects in Europe, South Korea, and Guam without demonstrating adequate cost efficiencies or projected future costs. Plans include building facilities costing $3.5 billion in Germany over the next five years. This shift in global posture disconnects with stateside basing capabilities and reverses the Overseas Basing Commission's recommendations.

In Germany, massive plans are underway to move U.S. Army Headquarters from Heidelberg to Wiesbaden even though European and African Commands already have substantial infrastructure in Stuttgart, where efficiencies would be available.

These projects would create thousands of foreign jobs and require continuous taxpayer funding. This is a poor investment considering the serious limitations to U.S. military training and deployment capabilities overseas, and it would create duplicative headquarters. Furthermore, it costs 15 percent less to build in the United States than in Germany, and the work would be done by American workers.

Our troops must have access to training areas where they can maneuver freely, conduct live-fire exercises, and work with night-vision devices. Many overseas locations limit or prohibit such intensive training. These constraints hinder the readiness of our troops.

Deployment impediments also exist in Europe. During times of peace and war, our troops face restrictions traveling through many countries. In 2003, our NATO ally Turkey refused to let U.S. troops travel through their country during Operation Iraqi Freedom. Merely having our troops forward-deployed is no guarantee they will be available when and where we need them.

DOD is also planning to spend millions to build deployment facilities in South Korea. The Pentagon proposes expanding U.S. presence from 30,000 service personnel to approximately 84,000 including families. This will require substantial taxpayer funding to build adequate housing, schools, hospitals, childcare facilities, and commissaries. Investing these resources overseas makes no sense when we are already capitol comment

building up infrastructure and deployment capabilities at U.S. bases, where amenities to support military families are well-established.

Similarly, plans to shift Marines currently stationed in Japan to the tiny island of Guam are problematic. This proposal is fraught with environmental concerns, insufficient existing infrastructure, an implausible timeline – and staggering costs (now estimated at $16 billion). With these considerable barriers, better basing alternatives should be explored.

Some argue that U.S. presence overseas provides assurance to our allies and deterrence to our adversaries. History has shown otherwise. Russia did not hesitate to conduct military operations against Georgia in 2008. Having troops in South Korea did not deter North Korean aggression against a South Korean naval vessel last May. We should assure our allies and deter our enemies with strong military capabilities and sound policy, not merely by keeping our troops stationed overseas.

Instead of breaking ground on military projects abroad and advancing DOD's new goal of building "partnership capacity," we should be building American infrastructure. Following World War II, the U.S. constructed bases in Europe to establish a strong presence as nations rebuilt. We stayed in Europe and placed bases in South Korea to protect the interests of America and its allies during the Cold War. The world has changed, and with it, our nation's military priorities. Military construction investment should reflect strategic principles, meet the needs of families, maximize the force flexibility of our modern military, and protect taxpayers. I hope the Department of Defense will continue to build the foundation of our military right here on American soil.

Keep America's servicemen in your prayers

Laquita Cox had surgery last Thursday and is doing well. She had a cancerous kidney. She wants everyone to know how much she appreciates all the calls, visits, and cards. Please keep this family in your prayers.

Well, folks, I know there is Hedley news out there somewhere, but I can't seem to find it. So I will talk about the things that get me going - either God, Family or my Country.

The other day while I was in the Outpost at Clarendon I met a soldier all dressed in his uniform. I did not ask his name (which I am sorry that I did not), but he was from South Carolina going to camp. He is in the Air Force. I shook his hand and told him how proud I was of him and told him we are praying for him. He was so pleased and really thanked me.

See folks, just a little kindness will go a long way. He looked so young so please say prayers for our soldiers. They really need them now and don't ever forget why they are where they are. God Bless our Soldiers every one.

Praline Cake: 1 (18.25 ounce) package yellow cake mix, 1 cup light brown sugar, 1 tablespoon all-purpose flour, 1/2 cup butter, 1 egg, 3/4 cup chopped pecans, 1/2 teaspoon vanilla extract. Prepare and bake cake mix according to package directions for a 9x13 inch pan. When done, allow cake to cool and leave in pan.

Preheat oven to 400 degrees F (200 degrees C). In a large saucepan, combine brown sugar, flour, butter and egg; Cook over low heat for 3 minutes, or until thickened. Remove from heat and stir in pecans and vanilla. Spread over cake. Place in preheated oven for 8 to 10 minutes.

Grill pineapple or peaches for great backyard treat

Ole Jim has a small garden that is providing us with squash, cucumbers, peppers, and soon tomatoes. I love squash and this year we are grilling it and other vegetables along with the burgers and 'dogs. It is so simple, I slice the veggies about 1/2 in thick, sprinkle with salt, brush with extra virgin olive oil, slip on a skewer and grill.

We found small tomatoes don't work well but the larger cherry tomatoes do, sliced mushrooms nestled into bell pepper hold their shape and add a different flavor to the pepper. If you don't have the skewers, a small screen over the grill will prevent the veggies falling into the coals.

If you really want a treat, try fresh sliced pineapple or peaches sliced in half. In my opinion the pineapple is best, just make the chunks large and thick and expect a fight over the last slice. The peaches we used were from Monroe's peach orchard, and oh my goodness what flavor! If you like fresh peaches, these were heaven and what a peach should taste like. I think they will be at the Farmers Market Thursday night on the courthouse lawn, so check them out along with the other vendors.

Our neighbor, Dean Arnold is not doing as well as everyone hoped; he is under the care of hospice now so please put Dean and Dorothy high on your prayer list. They need all the help they can get.

Father of local man honored in New Mexico

The father of a Clarendon man has been named as one of two Pioneers/Distinguished Citizens in Union County, New Mexico.

Joel Like, the father of Clarendon's Henry Like, received the honor in June and was a grand marshal during the July 3 parade in Clayton.

Like was born near Folsom, New Mexico, on October 25, 1910, to Issac (Like) Like and Margaret Lawrence Like. He married Beulah Jackson in Boise City, Oklahoma, on March 23, 1936, whom he first met when he saved her from drowning in the Dry Cimarron River. Her parents had homesteaded south of the family ranch. When Beulah was 13 years old, she was left to babysit her brothers, Bobby, who was one year old and Buddy, who was about five. She missed Buddy and carried her little brother to look for him.

She finally saw him as he crossed the river and headed north. She set her little brother down under a tree and went to get Buddy. Just as she did, a wall of flood water came racing down the river. The water caught her and was carrying her down the river, entangling her in brush and tearing off most of her clothes. Joel was riding the river to pick up strayed cattle and heard cries for help as he spotted Beulah being carried down river. He pulled her out of the flood to bank by her hair and gave her his jacket off the back of his saddle to cover herself with then helped her and the little brothers back to their homestead. About four years later, they got married. She passed away on October 6, 2006 after 70 years of marriage.

Joel's granddad Isom Like had 5,000 head of horses, and Joel helped with the round-up every couple of years. He and his brother Chester would break the horses for their own use. Joel started his shooting practice with a BB gun shooting mice in the saddle house. Later he was allowed to kill the chickens for dinner by shooting their heads off with a .22 rifle. When Joel was about 15, he helped surveyors chain the Colorado-New Mexico line markers in the area around his dad's place. He attended the Valley School on the Dry Cimarron, which was located in various locations in the early years. In 1934, Joel and brother Chester bought a ranch adjoining their dad on the east end, and ranch and farmed together until Joel and Beulah bought a ranch adjoining his dad on the west end in April 1946.

Joel is well known for his alfalfa seed. He served on the Goodson School Board for several years and received the NCRS Best Steward of Land Award in the 1950s. He is a member of the Methodist Church in Kenton, Oklahoma.

Joel now lives with his youngest daughter Judy in Clayton, and enjoys telling hunting stories and visiting with anyone who stops by. He hasn't missed a 4th of July parade since he moved to town in 1994. Every parade you can find him sitting in a chair under the peach trees that he planted, waving and talking to the parade participants. Not this year however, he headed the parade and waved to the folks watching it.

Clarendon Church of Christ GOD IS LOVED HERE!

I've lived in a lot of places in my life. The decade of preaching I've done has been all over Mississippi and Texas. I've seen and lived in several towns and cities and can honestly say that Clarendon is the most God-loving community that I've ever been in. There are problems here of course. Anywhere there are people, you're going to have problems. Clarendon, in my opinion, is a throwback to the way people used to live. Matt. 7:12 is the golden rule that all of us were taught as children. "Treat others how you want to be treated. There are more people in Donley County that live this way than any other area I've lived in."

The senior citizens are cared for better than most places. From "Meals on Wheels" to the nursing home, there are a lot of caring people in our community. Our small clinic does a good job with and for our elderly. The churches seem to care and be involved also. James 1:27, "Pure and undefiled religion in the sight of our God and Father is this: to visit orphans and widows in their distress and to keep oneself unstained by the world." I believe much of that scripture is fulfilled in our midst today.

Our college and its staff are some of the best people in the world and will do everything possible to help bring students in and help them to stay. Many churches in this area try to make these new students feel at home and that is hospitality that is appreciated by the students and their worried parents.

I believe our city government, for the most part, does a good job with its limited resources. Our officials are accessible. We have a great sheriff's department, and I enjoy waking up in the middle of the night and seeing a deputy patrolling. It's hard to put a price tag on feeling safe.

As I said earlier, Clarendon is a great place to live and full of God-loving people. Also, I said earlier, we have a few problems. Although the majority of Clarendon residents are religious, we are fractured or divided over what the Bible says. The only cure is more study for us all. My prayer is that we not only be united as citizens but that one day we could be united on the word of God and what He would have us all to do. What a wonderful day it could be that we all are joined together with: one Body, Spirit, Lord, Faith, Baptism, and one God and Father of all....Eph. 4:4-5.

I am proud to be a citizen of Clarendon, and I hope we can all be citizens together in God's kingdom one day. God bless and keep us all.

Foundations' head to retire

Amarillo Area Foundation Board Chair Mark Bivins and Don & Sybil Harrington Foundation Board Chair Glen Parkey have announced their acceptance of President/CEO, Jim Allison's intent to retire at year end, concluding 21 years of service to both Foundations.

Under Mr. Allison's leadership, the foundations, which serve the northernmost 26 counties of Texas, continued to expand their efforts as the region's trusted leader in philanthropy. Allison's passion for improving the quality of life throughout the region resulted in the facilitation and funding of many successful projects, including grants in Donley County. However, in his own words "philanthropy is an act, not a gift. It is more than giving money, getting money, building monuments, and creating nonprofit programs. In the end, it represents the passion of people for quality of life and living. No amount of money can replace the power of a committed individual or community."

According Bivins, "Jim has been invaluable to the Foundation and the entire Texas Panhandle. In his own right, he has been one of the biggest leaders in philanthropy due to his wise guidance, business acumen and ability to work with so many people."

Allison

Parkey, stated "the imprint that Jim as made on the Foundations will make it easier to attract another outstanding person to lead this organization at the top position. The Foundation has a strong and successful history and is one of the most outstanding community foundations in the country."

The Foundations' Boards of Directors and Allison will transition during the remainder of the year in preparation for a search for Allison's successor.

Six teams participated in the Friday night scramble and the winning team posted a 29 to win the contest.

Tom Stauder, Jesse Lincycornb, Steve Hall, Manuel Ramirez, and Sunday Morris took first place in the 31-player field at seven under par. The other teams came in at six, four, and three under par.

Jeff Walker won the weekly men's game with a net 67. Butch Schollenbarger was second with a 70, and Tom Stauder was third with a 71. Sherol Johnston won low gross in the Monday's women's game with an 85. Ruth Jackson was first low net at 73, and Maxine McLaughlin was second low net with a 77. Johnston also won the Thursday women's game with a low gross score of 83. Judy Thornberry and McLaughlin tied for first low net with a 67.

The nine-hole scrambles are played each Friday night and begin at 6:00 p.m. You are encouraged to call the Pro Shop by 5:00 to enter. The pool and grill are open each day and the dining room is open each Friday night and Sunday at noon.

Drugs in the News

Outdated & Unused Prescription Medicines

An expert on taking outdated medicines and a biologist recently provided recommendations as to what people should do with old prescription products in their medicine cabinets. According to a recent report from a Professor at Virginia Commonwealth University School of Pharmacy, once the expiration date of a drug is exceeded, there is no guarantee that the drug will continue to provide its intended benefit. For persons taking medicines for asthma, or other chronic conditions, the loss of drug effectiveness could lead to significant and undesirable complications. One report indicates that of the approximately 4 billion prescriptions written each year, an estimated 40% go unused.

How outdated and unused medicines are disposed of has become an important environmental issue. According to a biologist at the US Fish & Wildlife Service, flushing medicines down the drain can lead to a pollution of lakes and rivers, as well as undesirable changes in fish and other water animal life. An alternative to flushing, available in some communities, is a pick-up service that collects and disposes (usually by incineration) of unused medicines.
