County Judge warns of wildfire dangers

Donley County has not had rainfall for an extended period of time, creating hot and dry conditions which pose the threat of large, dangerous and fast-moving wildfires.

County Judge Jack Hall reminds everyone that such fires have the potential of endangering lives of property owners, firemen, and law enforcement, and damaging property on a large scale.

"I urge all residents to diligently curtail all outdoor activities that might possibly lead to a disastrous fire in the county," he said. "Please take an active part in preventing wildfires in our county."

Greenbelt hits Stage 3 on drought plan

By Roger Estlack, Clarendon Enterprise

A lack of rain and persistent hot, windy weather has pushed Greenbelt Lake into Stage 3 of its drought contingency plan.

With the reservoir falling below a depth of 51 feet, officials with the Greenbelt Municipal & Industrial Water Authority have begun lowering the levels in municipal storage tanks as a method of conserving water.

Dropping the water tower levels reduces pressure on municipal water systems thereby cutting back on the amount of water going through the system and even reducing leaks in the system.

Greenbelt General Manager Bobbie Kidd says the biggest conservation is coming from the City of Childress, which uses more than 50 percent of the water consumed from the lake.

"We dropped the level in their storage tank by three feet, and that is producing a significant savings," Kidd said.

The level in Clarendon's water tower has been dropped ten feet, but Kidd said that was primarily due to a pump at the filter plant being taken offline for maintenance.

Water usage in Hedley is not a problem, Kidd said, and tank levels in Quanah are only kept at 50 percent anyway.

The Greenbelt Reservoir reached Stage 3 on Friday, May 27, and the lake this week is at a depth of 50.91 feet.

Kidd said consumption has come down somewhat in recent days and the decline of the lake seems to be leveling off.

The next trigger in Greenbelt's drought contingency plan will come if the lake falls another three feet. If that happens, member cities will be asked to implement their own water conservation rules.

The water authority says Greenbelt has only received 0.48 inches of moisture since January 1.

Officials say the weather, not consumption, is the main problem facing the lake right now, but they still encourage everyone to conserve as much water as possible to help protect this vital resource.

Local man arrested for elder abuse

By Roger Estlack, Clarendon Enterprise

A Howardwick man remains in the Donley County Jail this week facing charges of assaulting and abusing an elderly woman in his care.

Richard Dennis Polmon, age 46, was being held on two bonds of $50,000 each, following his arrest on May 10 and later arraignment by Justice of the Peace Connie Havens.

Donley County Sheriff Butch Blackburn said his office was contacted by medical officials after an ambulance was dispatched to the residence at 414 Nocona Drive.

An investigation revealed that the 91-year-old woman had been neglected and had been suffering from unexplained bruises and other medical problems. She had also been sexually assaulted.

Polmon is charged with Injury to the Elderly and Aggravated Sexual Assault.

"The victim's age in this case makes it 'aggravated' and a first degree felony," Sheriff Blackburn said.

Clarendon resident faces charge of cruelty to animals

By Ashlyn Tubbs, Clarendon Enterprise

Clarendon resident Brandon Goodwin III is out on bond this week on a charge of animal cruelty.

The Donley County Sheriff's Office and city employees were dispatched to Goodwin's house at 223 S. Carhart St. on May 24 on a report of a dog hanging from the fence. The small female dog was dead when they arrived.

Following an investigation, Goodwin was arrested on May 25 on a Class A Misdemeanor; cruelty to non-livestock animals. If found guilty, he could possibly a maximum $4,000 fine and up to a year in jail.

"When we come up on something like this, we will prosecute to the full extent of the law," City Administrator Lambert Little said. "There is absolutely no reason for this."

The city also impounded two other dogs Goodwin had reportedly tied to a fence post. Little said that the dogs had no food and no water and were covered with ticks. One was so tangled around the post that it only had two feet of moving area.

"These dogs were so malnourished you could see their ribs," Little said. "We will keep them in our animal control facility for ten days. If they are not adopted by then, we will have to euthanize them."

Little said that the city will need to "pep up animal control" to encourage citizens to take better care of their animals.

"We're not nearly as strict as we should be about people taking care of their animals," he said. "The city rules concerning animal cruelty state that pets cannot run at large in the city, must have a rabies shot tag issued by the city, and must be provided food, water, and shelter."

The city has the right to impound dogs that are tied up by anything but a leash.

"It is not permitted to have dogs chained up, and if your dog is tied up, you must be out there to watch it," Little said. "It is permissible is they are tethered to something like a clothes line where they won't get tangled up. There must be 150 square feet of playing space per animal."

Pets picked up will have ten days of adoption time before getting euthanized.

"It will cost owners time and money to get their animals back," Little said. "They can also face a fine for ordinance violation."

City Clean up

City employees Mariah Benavidez, and Nathan Jaramillo were busy cleaning up Kearney Street Tuesday morning as the community gets ready to host its July Fourth celebration next month. The Clarendon Chamber of Commerce is asking everyone to help by holding a Clean-Up Day this Saturday, June 11. The Chamber will provide the trash bags, and volunteers are asked to bring their brooms, etc., to the Chamber office at 11 a.m. Saturday. For more information, call the Chamber at 874 2421.

Houston man dies following car accident at Lelia Lake

By Ashlyn Tubbs, Clarendon Enterprise

A single vehicle accident claimed the life of a Houston man on May 25 east of Lelia Lake.

At 8:00 a.m., 62-year-old Ramon Holloway was on his cell phone while driving his 2005 Chevy pickup on Hwy 287 by mile marker 184. He drove into the center median and hit the culvert, which caused his truck to flip end over end before landing on its top.

Holloway was transported to Northwest Texas Hospital, and then taken to Lubbock. He passed away on May 27. He was wearing his seatbelt.

Those who responded included Sergeant Chris Ward, troopers Kellan Roberts and Gary Davis, the Donley County Sheriff's Office, Clarendon Volunteer Fire Department, Texas Department of Transportation and Highway Patrol.

District court hears 29 pleas

Twenty-nine pleas took place which resulted in four convictions and twenty-five deferred adjudications when the 100th Judicial District Court met in Panhandle last Tuesday, May 31.

District Attorney Luke Inman prosecuted the cases for the State of Texas with the Honorable Judge Stuart Messer presiding.

A total of $67,000 in fines was assessed as a result of the pleas that took place on May 31, of which $18,000 was paid in full at the time of the plea.

Among the defendants appearing before the court was Martin Medina Ortiz, who was placed on probation for a period of three years for driving while intoxicated with a child passenger. Ortiz was convicted and sentenced to two years in the State Jail Division of the TDCJ, but the sentence was probated for a period of three years.

Ortiz, 32-year-old resident from Lawton, OK, was arrested in Donley County on April 17, 2011, by DPS Trooper Aaron Tamutzer and was later indicted by a Donley County Grand Jury on June 28.

Debt debate opens door to real cuts

By Chris Edwards, Cato Institute

The House of Representative's overwhelming rejection of a clean debt-limit increase means that the two parties must now find major spending cuts. House Republicans say that they will not support a debt increase unless the Democrats agree to equal-sized spending cuts. If Congress raises the debt limit by $1 trillion, then it must also find budget savings of at least $1 trillion, over either five or ten years.

The crucial question is: Will the proposed budget savings be real cuts or smoke-and-mirrors "cuts"? Many of the cuts in the 2011 budget deal were of the latter variety.

There are only two types of cuts that are "real": legislated reductions in entitlements and complete terminations of discretionary programs. Once enacted, those types of cuts have the best chance of shrinking the government permanently.

Let's look at entitlements. Real cuts could include increasing the Social Security retirement age, changing retiree cost-of-living allowances, and increasing patient deductibles under Medicare. Those are real cuts because benefits would be permanently reduced unless liberals could get a majority in the House and 60 votes in the Senate to reverse them down the road, which is unlikely given the huge deficits we face.

Rather than such real cuts, President Obama has proposed phony cuts, such as a "debt fail-safe trigger," which is just a promise that future Congresses will find savings. Indeed, because Obama's trigger is slanted toward tax hikes, it could embolden liberals to spend even more in the near term in the hope of triggering large revenue increases later on.

With discretionary spending, any debt-increase deal should terminate entire programs, not just trim them. The 2011 budget deal cut spending by $38 billion, but most of the savings were through reductions to ongoing programs. The problem is that advocates for those programs are now energized to undo the cuts, which they could do anytime through simple majority votes during the appropriations process.

By contrast, fully repealing a program and its underlying authorization would scorch the earth and likely prevent its revival. For example, the government spends $9 billion a year on public-housing subsidies. Lawmakers could trim the subsidy by $5 billion a year, which would theoretically save $50 billion over ten years. However, we could only be really sure of the first-year savings of $5 billion, because appropriators could easily restore the spending down the road.

If, however, Congress abolished public-housing spending and repealed the law allowing it, then we could be confident of saving $90 billion over the next decade. Reauthorizing the program would face numerous legislative hurdles, including the Senate's general supermajority requirement. In today's fiscal environment, if we kill a major subsidy program, it is not likely to come back from the grave.

For the debt-increase vote, fiscal conservatives should be suspicious of any discretionary-spending cuts that aren't tied to full repeal of particular programs. Any plan that shows major savings from assumed reductions in future discretionary spending is meaningless unless it is based on terminations, or is at least enforced by a rigid spending cap that requires a supermajority to void.

A final source of budget trickery to watch out for involves budget baselines. Leading up to the 2011 budget deal, the House leadership promised $100 billion in cuts. However, that number was based on the inflated spending level from Obama's never-enacted budget. So the GOP went into the negotiations with no more than $61 billion of real cuts in hand, and that total was whittled down from there.

Inflated baselines have played a prominent role in other budget deals, such as the infamous 1990 deal in which Pres. George H. W. Bush broke his tax pledge. Bush claimed that he received two and a half dollars in spending cuts for each dollar in tax hikes. But a lot of those "cuts" were against an inflated defense baseline that both parties knew was unrealistically high given the winding down of the Cold War.

In sum, Republican leaders have made an unusually explicit promise about spending cuts that must be passed this year. It is a great chance for conservative voters and tea partiers to hold GOP feet to the fire and really shrink the government. I trust that Republicans are sincere in their promises, but we need to verify that any budget deal delivers real and lasting cuts.

Oprah's appeal remains a mystery

By Daniel B. Kline

With Oprah Winfrey safely off the air, the women of America need to explain to me what their fascination with this egomaniac bore was in the first place. Despite being neither entertaining nor amusing, Oprah managed to become the biggest talk show host on the planet. Women love Oprah and, as a man, I just don't see the appeal. I get that she's flawed and faces struggles that normal women face. She's overweight and a lot of ladies are also overweight, so there's a certain solidarity there. That said, Oprah, after years of dieting with a team of experts on staff is still overweight.

Why would a normal woman who works all day, then has to take care of her kids relate to a billionaire with a private chef and personal trainer on call? Regular women gain weight because with everything they have to do, sometimes it's just easier to pick up a pizza instead of cooking healthy food. Kids, work and life can also make getting to the gym impossible.

Oprah does not face this struggle. If she wants kangaroo from that great place in Sydney for dinner, she simply has to tell someone in the morning. If she wants a gym and Richard Simmons acting as her trainer, she simply has to make a phone call. Actually, she doesn't even have to make the call, she has people who do that for her. Given her advantages it's stunning that Oprah is fat and it speaks to the deep level of emotional disturbance she must be under no matter how self-actualized she tells us she is. When you watch Oprah's show, the women in the audience hang on every word and scream with manic glee whenever she says anything mildly exciting. I understand the audience that got free cars freaking out. I don't understand why the audience that gets Oprah's favorite popcorn reacts the same way.

Watching Oprah actually makes me wince as her affected vocal patterns become grating very quickly. She lectures her audience as if her life offers some shining example and the people in the crowd – clearly the people in the nation – simply lap it up.

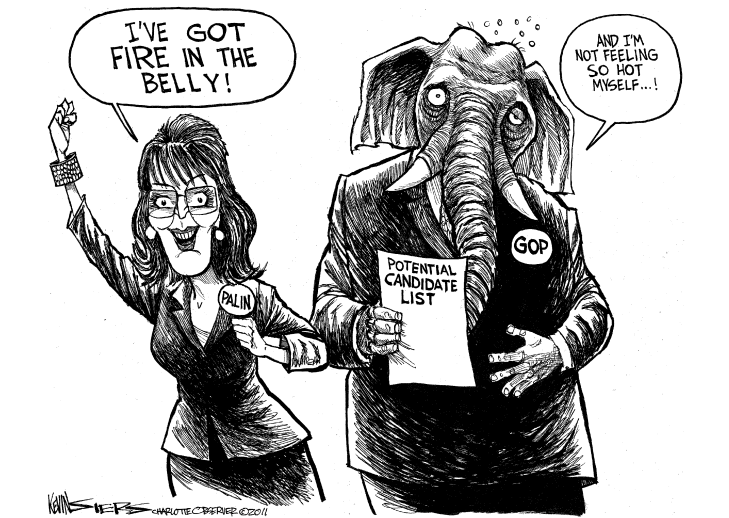

Of course, you have to salute Oprah for her book club because anyone who gets people reading deserves an amazing amount of credit. That said, can someone admit that Maya Angelou writes awful, unreadable poetry? I mean, pretty much all poetry is awful, but Angelou is the leader when it comes to stuff that isn't actually good that people like Oprah pretend is fabulous so they can seem like sensitive intellectuals.

Despite the year-long salute to herself, Oprah isn't actually leaving television, instead she's heading to her own network, the not-so-cleverly named Oprah Winfrey Network. Currently OWN – filled with shows from people in the Oprah universe – actually does worse than the network it replaced, Discovery health (a network filled with shows about enormously fat people).

That will probably change once the lady herself enters the picture, but it's hard to understand why. I know the show is not for me, but if Oprah couldn't entertain me with her talk show – the thing she supposedly does best – I can't imagine watching her travel the world (which is the premise for her OWN show, a show being produced by a close friend of mine, so I hope I'm entirely wrong). Of course, if that fails, she can always put the couch back and invite Tom Cruise to come over.

A nurse's perspective on cancer

By Valeri Williams, Texas Oncology–Amarillo Cancer Center

On Sunday, June 5, millions of people around the country will gather to commemorate National Cancer Survivor's Day – a celebration that honors cancer survivors and demonstrates that life beyond cancer can be meaningful and rewarding. At Texas Oncology, we support thousands of patients in the fight for their life every year, and we salute all cancer survivors for their perseverance, resolve, and courage.

The number of cancer survivors in the United States has continued to rise over the past four decades – the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and the National Cancer Institute recently reported that there are 11.7 million survivors as of 2007*. That's compared to only 9.8 million cancer survivors in 2001 and 3 million cancer survivors in 1971. A cancer survivor is defined as anyone who has been diagnosed with cancer, from the time of diagnosis through the balance of his or her life.

While this increase in survivors is due in large part to early detection and advances in treatment options, there is another factor that's important to consider when fighting cancer: emotional support.

Form a Strong Support System
Whether it's with family, friends, co-workers, or neighbors, a cancer patient with a strong support system in place is more likely to have a better treatment experience. Our patients tell us that having loved ones around to help with day-to-day tasks is a tremendous help, and allows them to rest and reduce stress. In addition, friends and family can help calm anxiety about a cancer diagnosis and treatment.

Connect With Other Cancer Patients
While fighting cancer, patients encounter any number of extremely difficult situations, which can only fully be understood by others experiencing the same thing. We continuously see that patients who attend cancer support groups have less anxiety and a more positive outlook on their situation. In support groups, patients can bring up subjects that may be too difficult to talk about with family and friends – from questions about the physical and emotional side effects of treatment to concerns about end-of-life decisions. Texas Oncology has many resources available to help cancer patients connect with each other. At Texas Oncology–Amarillo Cancer Center we currently offer support groups for patients with breast and gynecological cancer, and we plan to offer a new support group for patients with hematology disorders like leukemia and lymphoma in the near future. If you're not able to attend a support group, look for other ways to connect with cancer patients – whether that's through your community or even in the chemotherapy room during treatment.

Do What Makes You Happy
When patients undergo chemotherapy and radiation treatments, it can sometimes be difficult to remain positive. So, we encourage patients to do one thing every day that makes them happy. For some people, that's going to lunch with a friend that always makes them laugh. For others, it may be as simple as taking the dog on a walk or drinking a chocolate milkshake. We've actually had many patients who absolutely love going to work, so they do their best to make it to the office every day they can. By participating in activities that are enjoyable, patients are less likely to focus on their cancer and more likely to get something positive out of every day.

Know Your Oncology Nurses and Doctors Are Here For You
Finding the right oncology team is important to your overall treatment experience. You should choose a specialist that you are comfortable with and who has the expertise to treat your individual situation. At Texas Oncology, in addition to using leading-edge treatments and technology, it's our goal to make our patients feel secure. Our oncology nurses are here to listen and help guide patients through the treatment process.

Johnny Gaines (right) played in the Greater West Texas Baseball Coaches Association all-star game this past Sunday at Lubbock Cooper Field. Clarendon coach Brad Elam (left) was selected to be coach on the North side, and Johnny was chosen to play. The teams were made up of the best 1A-2A players in the region. We won the game 13-1 and played nine innings. Gaines started at shortstop and also played second base. He made several plays in the field including ranging deep down the right field line to catch a flyball that had the stadium buzzing. He reached base two times and scored a run in three at bat.

Senior Citizens to hold fundraiser June 17

The Hedley Senior Citizens is having a catfish or chicken strip fundraiser dinner on Friday, June 17, at 6 p.m. for $8 per plate. Come on down and enjoy a good dinner with us.

Please keep Laquita Cox and Anita Mitchell in your prayers.

The City of Hedley and the Rowe Cemetery Board would like to remind you that donations are needed for the maintenance and upkeep of the cemetery.

Recipe: Slow Cooked Bbq Beer Beef: 1 large onion, chopped, 4 cloves garlic, minced, 1 cup ketchup, 1/2 cup beer, 1/2 cup white vinegar, 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce, 4 drops liquid smoke flavoring, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon ground black pepper, 1 1/2 teaspoons chili powder, 1 teaspoon smoked paprika, 1 teaspoon dried oregano, 1/2 cup brown sugar, 4 pounds beef brisket, 2 teaspoons cornstarch, 2 tablespoons water, 16 potato buns, or as needed.

Place the onion and garlic into a large slow cooker. Pour in the ketchup, beer, vinegar, Worcestershire sauce, and liquid smoke; set aside. Combine the salt, pepper, chili powder, paprika, oregano, and brown sugar until evenly blended. Rub the spice mixture all over the beef brisket. Place the brisket into the slow cooker. Sprinkle the remaining spice mixture over top.

Cover, and cook on Low until the beef is easily shredded with two forks, 10 to 12 hours.

Remove the beef from the slow cooker, and place into a large bowl. Ladle the fat from the remaining sauce in the slow cooker and discard. Pour about 2 cups of the sauce from the slow cooker into a saucepan. Bring to a simmer over medium heat.

Dissolve the cornstarch in the water, and stir into the simmering sauce. Cook and stir 5 to 10 minutes until the sauce has thickened. Meanwhile, shred the meat into small pieces using two forks.

Pour the thickened sauce and remaining sauce from the slow cooker into a blender, filling the pitcher no more than halfway full. Hold down the lid of the blender with a folded kitchen towel, and carefully start the blender, using a few quick pulses to get the soup moving before leaving it to puree.

Puree in batches until smooth and pour into a clean pot. Alternately, you can use a stick blender and puree the sauce right in the slow cooker.

Stir the shredded beef and pureed sauce together in the slow cooker. Use tongs to serve the beef on the potato buns.

D-Day should be time to honor sacrifices

I hope everyone visited the garage sales and picked up some bargains this past weekend. People were wheeling and dealing. I can't help but wonder how much money changed hands, but I think the treasures and visiting with everyone were the best part.

June 6, 1944, also known as D-Day, was the invasion of France by the Allies on Normandy Beach in WWII.

Beginning at midnight on June 5 and 6, the air invasion began and around 6 a.m. 160,000 troops landed along the 50 mile stretch of Normandy beach. Including all the ships, Naval and Merchant Marines and aircraft almost 200,000 personnel were involved.

It was a bloody battle with around 10,000 casualties. About half were killed, and others were wounded or captured.

I was honored to take a bus tour from Paris to the Normandy Beach in 2002, and it was awe-inspiring as well as very sad. We made stops at the British Museum, telling of the gliders coming into France as the first wave and saw the bridge the British gliders were sent to defend, British and Canadian cemeteries, then to Omaha and Utah Beaches.

These sites are preserved with the landing barriers there with bunkers and machine gun sites still hidden on the beach.

The story unfolds as you walk around, and my mind was processing it all as fast as possible.

Then we visited the American Cemetery, and what a sight that is with the white crosses as far as the eye can see!

All American Cemeteries on foreign soil are the property of the United States, they are maintained and guarded by Americans and require a passport.

This is a day in history we should not forget. We can only pray it will not happen again.

We have a new family member, a three pound Yorkie puppy named Buffy. If you should call and ask what I am doing, the answer is getting her out of something. You will be hearing more about Buffy I am sure.

Please pray for our sick friends. Nancy Davis is fighting cancer again, and also Bill Selfridge is sick. Prayers are so powerful, and they work miracles.

The Classy Class, Part 12:

Clarendon High School Seniors at long last, 1960-1961

Editor's Note: This is the conclusion of the class history of the Clarendon High School Class of 1961 as compiled by Jo Shaller. Visit the Burton Memorial Library to read the complete, unabridged version of the history.

On August 26, 1960, thirty-eight bigger than life seniors stormed the front doors of Clarendon High School. Juniors and sophomores stood stock still in respectful silence. Some mere freshman actually fainted in recognition of our greatness. Faculty and staff were rightfully awed having never encountered such outstanding specimen of senior hood.

The Classy Class of 1961 had arrived. The CHS buildings and all of their inhabitants were ours.

Okay, okay. So this was only in our imaginations. But we thought we were pretty hot stuff. We had no doubt that our athletic teams would sweep all of the State meets; our academic records would not be broken for at least a century; our class and individual achievements would be the stuff legends are made of. Years later I realized this is the attitude of most first day seniors.

Some of our parents lamented about how quickly their babies had grown up and how fast our school days since September 1949 had passed. Some of our parents moaned because they had nine more months of living with stubborn, smart aleck, know-it-all teenagers. You know which category your parents fit into.

Senior class officers were Neel Carter, President; Philip Abel, Vice President; Sherry Montgomery, Secretary; Wilma Mann, Treasurer; Eugene Smith, Reporter; and Jerry Gray, Sgt.-at-Arms. Claudine Todd and Tom Jinks were our sponsors. Neel and Sherry were Student Council representatives. Jackie McClellan and Ronnie Tyra were our sponsors. Neel and Sherry were Student Council representatives. Jackie McClellan and Ronnie Tyra were Canteen Representatives. James Cox was our new Superintendent and Morris Ledger was the new principal.

Texas football was big way back in 1960, too. Philip Abel, Neel Carter, Jerry Gray, and Ronnie Tyra represented our class. Philip, Neel and Ronnie were named to the All-District team and Philip and Ronnie were 3rd team regional; however, we didn't win very many of our games.

Naturally the band was on the field every halftime. Drum major, Judy Thompson and twirler Jackie McClellan led the musicians. Sarah Antrobus, Johnny Rattan, and Norma Self won band awards during the year.

In the 1950s and early 1960s, Future Homemakers of America was important because we all wanted to get married as quickly as possible. Judy Thompson, Norma Self, Wilma Mann, Jackie McClellan, and Gayle Bones were officers. Jackie was the Valentine Queen, Gary Longan was FHA Beau. Jackie, Wilma, and Norma were winners in the Sew it with Wool Contest.

Future Farmers of America was our brother organization. Senior officers were Neel Carter, Gary Longan (also Outstanding Member and Star Chapter Farmer), Ronnie Tyra, Tommy Messer, Gus Havens, Jerry Gray, and Bob Hutton.

Sherry Montgomery and Mike McClesky represented our class in the Drama Club, as did Marie Richey, Gay Watson, and Beth Johnston in Chorus. Even if we were actually as great as we wanted to be, we knew how to be our own best agents by controlling the yearbook. The Annual Staff was made up of 14 seniors, so we gave ourselves lots of coverage.

Beauty and Brawn favorites were voted on by the entire high school. Neel Carter, Philip Abel and Ronnie Tyra were 3/4s of the handsome "men" choices. Our senior girls were so beautiful that the rest of the school refused to vote for them. But we know the truth. Neel and Jackie were named Mr. and Miss CHS.

I wonder if the present members of the CHS National Honor Society realize that our class was charter members of that prestigious academic organization. Those charter members were Philip Abel, Eugene Smith, Judy Thompson, Sherry Montgomery, Oveta Garman, and Martha Jo Risley.

Our classy class voted to present a play as a money raising and bonding project. Eighteen seniors participated. The Sweetheart of U Baka Pi was scheduled for February 4, 1961, but a bodacious blizzard caused it to be postponed until February 9. Every actor and actress gave Oscar worthy performances.

Basketball captains and only seniors were Philip Abel (6'2) and Howard Talley (6'). Probably due to having to rely on those younger players, the season was a bit disappointing. However, the Lady Bronchos led by seniors Marie Richey (All District), Gay Watson and Sharon Moore won District and came in second for Bi-District. To complete our athletic careers, Philip Abel, Neel Carter, Jerry Gray and Johnny Rattan ran track.

After graduation ceremonies, Mrs. Todd and Jinks oversaw our all night party at the American Legion Hall on Main Street. Ronnie Tyra's parents invited us out to their house for breakfast. I'm not sure what the statute of limitation on water tower painting is, but 50 years ago Gayle Bones McCaskill, Mike McClesky and Martha Jo Risley

Acetaminophen: New Guidelines for Young Children

An advisory panel of the FDA recently voted to recommend new dosing guidelines for acetaminophen (Tylenol) products for children less than two years of age. Their recommendation is based on the fact that liquid formulas of Tylenol and related products have only contained dosing guidelines for children greater than two years old. The panel indicated that not having specific guidelines for parents of children under 2 may have caused confusion and increased the risk that parents might give an overdose to their infants. The panel recommended dosing based on the weight of the child and that the dose be designated in milliliters, pointing out that some liquid measuring cups do not have adequate markings to guide parents or caregivers.

As a result of the FDA panel action, the manufacturer of Tylenol has announced that it will begin making only one type of liquid children's Tylenol. The company indicated that the product will carry dosing instructions for children under age 2, as well as those over the age of 2.

Panhandle-Plains Museum seeks Clarendon saddles

The Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum in Canyon is on the hunt for historic saddles made in Clarendon and elsewhere around the area.

Bill and George Arrington of Pampa and Canadian, respectively, donated a much-needed Reid Errington saddle to the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum.

Born in Oklahoma, Reid Errington moved with his family to Canadian, Texas, about 1922. After working as a cowboy, Errington learned saddle making from A. D. Seitzler in Silver City, New Mexico. He built saddles in California, Clarendon and Amarillo. Errington built saddles for singer Allan Jones and actor Leo Carrillo, who played "Pancho," in the television series "The Cisco Kid." After serving in World War II, he opened his own saddle shop in Canadian.

In the early 1980s, Bill and George Arrington each commissioned a saddle from Reid Errington. The brothers donated Bill's saddle, complete with Rocking Chair Ranch brand, in memory of their grandfather George Washington "Cap" Arrington.

While PPHM has several important saddlemakers from the region in the collection, the museum recently made a push to round up examples by noted area saddlemakers whose work is not currently represented in the collection. The effort is part of PPHM's mission to "collect, preserve, conserve, exhibit and interpret the historical...heritage of the Panhandle-Plains region." Certainly area saddle makers contributed to the heritage of the region.

In Clarendon, saddle-making has a long history starting with Jim H. Rutherford who ran Rutherford Brothers Saddlery from about 1900 to 1920. His was one of the first saddle shops in the Texas Panhandle. He became sheriff of Donley County by 1920, and sold insurance by 1930. His son Jack (1899-1938) worked in the saddlery before becoming an Amarillo mechanic. Both men were killed in automobile accidents. Jack was son-in-law of Walter H. Dyer (1855-1934), a founder of the T Anchor Ranch. The other brother in "Rutherford Brothers" remains unknown.

J.B. Annis apparently took over the Rutherford Brothers shop. Son of a preacher, Jerome Bonaparte Annis (1875-1954) painted buildings in Howard County, Texas, by 1900, sold harness in Mitchell County, Texas, by 1910, built saddles in Clarendon by 1920, was a leather worker in Groesbeck by 1930, and died in Kerr County. Annis custom-built a saddle for artist Harold Dow Bugbee (1900-1963) whose initials are on the back of the cantle.

B.F. Kirtley took over saddle-making in Clarendon from Annis after about ten years, when Turner M. "Red" Caldwell bought him out. Caldwell operated the saddle shop for about ten years from about 1949 to 1960, when Pete Borden took it over. Borden built boots in part of Caldwell's shop initially before opening Pete Borden's Boot and Saddle Shop in Clarendon. Borden past away in 1967.

PPHM will continue its efforts to acquire saddles from the remaining major saddlemakers from the Panhandle-Plains region: Junior Gray of Dalhart (who has promised to give one of his saddles); Pete Borden of Clarendon; Red Caldwell of Clarendon; Carl Darr of Paducah, and Potts Ingerton of Amarillo.

If anyone has information about saddles made by any of these men, they are asked to contact Michael Grauer at the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum at 651-2262.

This Western Stock Saddle was crafted about 1900 by Rutherford Brothers saddle makers in Clarendon. The "eagle-beak" tapaderos on this saddle are by F. M. Stern, a San Jose, Calif., saddlemaker who built Charles Goodnight's saddle in on display in the Panhandle Plains Historical Museum's Pioneer Hall. The museum is currently looking for other saddles made in Clarendon.

PUBLIC NOTICE

THE GREENBELT MUNICIPAL and Industrial Water Authority is announcing they have reached STAGE 3 - Moderate Water Shortage Conditions. This condition exists when the Greenbelt Reservoir reaches an elevation of 2631.00 (This occurred 5-27-2011). 1. Goal: achieve 30 percent reduction in total water use, and daily water demand. 2. Supply Management Measures: The water authority would lower the level in all storage tanks, thus reducing pressure on wholesale customers system. This in turn would help conserve an even greater amount of water. 3. The General Manager, or his designee, will contact wholesale water customers to discuss water supply and or damnd conditions and will request that wholesale customers initiate additional mandatory measures to reduce non-essential water use, and to initiate wholesale customer's drought contingency plan. The Greenbelt Reservoir has only received (0.48" of moisture since January 1, 2011). The Greenbelt Water Authority is asking every-one operation and efforts to help reduce the unnecessary use and waste of precious drinking water. This will be necessary until we have a change in the current weather conditions. 26-1tc
