Veterinarian urges vaccination of pets

"Rabies kills people." That's the message from Dr. Guy Ellis of the Clarendon Veterinary Hospital this week, reinforcing an earlier plea from city officials for people to have their pets vaccinated for the disease.

Ellis says the cases of rabies in the Texas Panhandle have doubled from what they were last year, and he says this year's drought is making things worse as wildlife come into populated areas.

"We are in an area very prone to rabies right now," Ellis says. "The chance of pets being near a rabid animal is high."

A person bitten by a rabid animal, if not treated right away, is almost certain to die from the disease, Ellis said.

Ellis says a rabies vaccine costs just $12.50. The shot lasts up to three years, but Ellis says yearly boosters are needed under current conditions.

"Vaccinating your animals should be as common as giving them food and water," Ellis says.

Voters can begin balloting Monday

Early voting begins Monday, October 24, for this year's General Election, which will decide the fate of ten proposed amendments to the Texas Constitution.

Early voting by personal appearance will be held in the Clerk's Office in Donley County Courthouse Annex and will end on November 4. Election Day will be Tuesday, November 8.

United Christians to meet this Thursday

The United Christians will have their monthly breakfast Thursday morning, October 20, 2011, at 7 a.m. in the Fellowship Hall at the First United Methodist Church. Rev. Anthony Knowles, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Estelline, will give a devotional. Everyone is welcome.

CHS to host dinner theatre Saturday

The Clarendon High School Theatre Department and the FCCLA will hold a dinner theatre, "Death!!! Before Dessert!!!", on Saturday, October 22.

The meal will begin at 6 p.m. in the school cafeteria. The play will begin at approximately 7 p.m. in the Clarendon High School Auditorium. Tickets are $15 each or $25 for a couple. Contact the CHS office for tickets.

Award-winning arts festival begins Thursday

The third annual Clarendon Arts Festival will be held this week October 20-23 at the Donley County Activity Center.

The event, sponsored by Clarendon's Les Beaux Arts Club, continues to grow each year and was recognized by the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce this spring with the prestigious Golden Nail Award. The award, established in 1982, honors financial, in-kind, and volunteer contributions to the fine arts in Amarillo and the Panhandle. Out of 425 nominees, the Clarendon Arts Festival was one of six award recipients in 2011.

This year's festival begins with the Preferred Buyers Reception held Thursday evening, October 20, where buyers will be delighted with the variety being offered at the Clarendon Arts Festival this year.

Many art works were checked in on Sunday and Monday at the Clarendon Arts Festival including oils, acrylic, gouache, pastels, collage, watercolor and pottery. Anyone is welcome at Thursday's reception; and if you haven't already pre-paid as a preferred buyer, you can pay that night at the door.

As well as the large selection of art being offered, buyers will be treated to an elegant evening of live music by Chamber Music Amarillo's String Trio and heavy hors d'oeuvres prepared by the ladies of Les Beaux Arts Club.

Several students from the Texas Panhandle have submitted art, which will be judged for ribbons in time for the Student's Free Fine Arts Day, Friday, October 21.

Also on Friday, Middle School and High School students will tour the show, watch acrylic painting demonstrations by Roylynn Evans of Amarillo, pottery making demonstrations by Bill Dunn of Amarillo, and pottery building demonstrations by Rafael Canizares-Yunez of Amarillo. More than 300 students and faculty have responded with reservations to attend sessions by Rafael Canizares-Yunez on the construction of various types of pottery, Patrizia DaMilano on color theory and creative processes through the expression

Aldermen consider revitalizing downtown

Grant funds could pay for sidewalk and lighting improvements in downtown Clarendon, according to a presentation at last Monday's meeting of the Board of Aldermen.

Representatives of KSA Engineers discussed the possibility of the city applying for the Texas Capital Fund grant and gave city officials an overview of their company's services.

In addition to sidewalk and lighting improvements, the project would involve replacing aging waterlines currently located under the bricks of Kearney Street with new lines placed beneath the sidewalks.

The total project could cost between $450,000 and $900,000, depending on if the waterlines and electrical work are included.

The maximum award under this type of grant is $150,000, which means the city would have to have multiple successful grant applications over at least a six-year period to do the entire project.

The city would have to provide matching funds of up to 30 percent for each grant.

City Administrator Lambert Little says the proposal is in its very early stages. The deadline for the application, if the city decides to pursue the grant, is not until summer of 2012.

Sweet sounds!

Audrey Shelton (right) and Skyler White perform during the winning show put on by the Bronco Band last Saturday at the district marching contest in Amarillo's Dick Bivins Stadium. Clarendon was one of seven bands to receive a Division One rating and the opportunity to advance to area competition on October 29 in Amarillo. This is the first time in six years that the Bronco Band has advanced. Congratulations!

Clarendon's sales tax revenue on the rise

Clarendon's sales tax revenue increased modestly last month as Hedley and Howardwick both saw their income decline, according to figures released last week by Texas Comptroller Susan Combs.

The comptroller distributed an October allocation to Clarendon of $23,886.43, which is up 0.81 percent from the same period one year ago and puts the city at being up 6.71 percent for the calendar-year-to-date. Total sales tax revenue for the city so far in 2011 stands at $271,756.77 compared to $254,654.59 at this time in 2010.

Hedley's allocation dropped 14.21 percent in October to $287.40 and puts that city down 1.28 percent for the year at $6,018.64. Howardwick was down 5.84 percent to $1,231.44 for the month and is almost even for the year with a total collection of $11,286.97, which is only 0.05 percent less than in 2010.

Combs said that state sales tax revenue in September was $1.76 billion, up 11.8 percent compared to September 2010.

"Texas sales tax collections have now increased for 18 straight months," Combs said. "All sectors showed increases in September, led by business spending, especially in the oil and gas-related sectors. Consumer sectors like restaurants and retail trade were also up."

"The recovery in Texas has brought sales tax collections almost back to peak 2008 levels, however the near-term outlook remains clouded due to the uneven performance of the U.S. economy."

The sales tax figures represent sales that occurred in August.

For details of October sales tax payments, locate the Monthly Sales Tax Allocation Comparison Summary Reports on the Comptroller's Web site at www.window.state.tx.us.

Government not Wall St. drives up student debt

By Neal McCluskey and Vance Fried

One of the major complaints of the Occupy Wall Street crowd, many of whom have taken on significant student debt, is that the cost of college is too darn high. And they're right, but not because of greedy corporate fat cats. No, the real guilty party here is federal politicians, who for decades have been fueling high profits — and prices — at both for-profit and nonprofit schools.

Wait. Big profits at nonprofit colleges? Yes, money has been piling up even at schools you thought had no interest in profit. And Washington, D.C., is the biggest hand feeding the beast.

Thanks to recent congressional hearings and battling over new regulations for for-profit schools, most people — including many college-aged, profit-disdaining Wall Street squatters — are probably at least vaguely aware that for-profit colleges are making good money.

But not just openly profit-seeking schools are making big bucks. If we define profit simply as revenue derived from providing a service exceeding costs, putatively nonprofit colleges actually have much higher margins than for-profit schools.

How do we know that? It's tough, because nonprofit schools typically report all their profits as expenses. Basically, they take excess revenues coming from undergraduate education and distribute them throughout the college in subsidies for research, graduate education, low-demand majors, low faculty teaching loads, excess compensation or featherbedding. In other words, rather than rewarding investors, colleges pay themselves.

Given this surplus-into-costs alchemy, there are just a few ways to get at schools' real costs. One is the buildup method, in which you calculate all the inputs required to educate undergrads, from market-rate professors' salaries to photocopying costs. The second is to get the best internal accounting of actual college expenditures you can, which a few states furnish, and estimate costs from that.

Using both methods reveals that it costs roughly $8,000 to educate an undergraduate at an average, residential college.

Now look at your college bill, including room and board: An average of almost $37,000 at a private four-year university, and $16,000 at a public equivalent.

So what's the profit? The average tuition and fee charge at a private bachelor's college, minus institutional aid, was $13,515 in 2008. Subtract $8,000 from that, and just from tuition and fees the school made about $5,500 per student, a margin of 41%. Add donated money like endowment funds, which are often intended to help undergraduate students, and the margins become even bigger.

Profits are similar at public institutions — only what schools don't get from tuition they make in state subsidies.

This is where Washington's policies come in. Colleges have been able to achieve these stunningly high profit margins by radically increasing the prices they charge students. Inflation-adjusted tuition and fees have tripled in the last 30 years.

Politicians have enabled schools to charge these skyrocketing rates in the name, ironically, of helping students. Indeed, inflation-adjusted federal aid to students has quadrupled since 1980, going from $35.4 billion to approximately $146.5 billion. Meanwhile, total student debt has leapt ahead of total credit card debt, blowing past the $800 billion mark.

In other words, the feds have been blasting helium into the college-cost bubble, enabling profits — which, if driven by undistorted demand, could be good — to balloon at the expense of students and taxpayers.

Fortunately, since Washington has been a big part of the problem, it can be a major part of the solution. One relatively easy thing it can do is change financial aid rules that give schools sizable advantages over students when setting after-aid prices. Basically, when students apply for aid the feds give schools students' total financial pictures, enabling colleges to change their after-aid prices on a student-by-student basis. Students have no such insider knowledge about schools.

The politically tougher, but essential, move would be to phase out the big subsidies to students that enable schools to raise prices with impunity. That means reducing everything from Pell Grants, to cheap student loans, to tuition tax deductions.

The outcry would be that this will hurt students, an objection that would probably issue loudly from the people raging against the financial machine. But it would do the opposite, forcing schools to keep their prices in line with the real cost of providing education, and saving both students and taxpayers big bucks. And that is what everyone should want.

Obama still has a shot at re-election

By Martin Frost

There appears to be a fundamental disconnect between the Obama campaign and the Obama White House. It is not too late for this to be corrected and President Barack Obama still has a legitimate shot at being re-elected. However, time is a wasting.

Let me be specific. The Obama campaign believes that the path to reelection is high minority turnout, high turnout among young voters and unusual Democratic strength among independent, college-educated suburban voters. This is not the path to 350 electoral votes — but it could get Obama the 270 electoral votes he needs for reelection.

However, the Obama White House is advocating positions that undercut the Obama campaign reelection narrative.

Obama has upheld the rhetoric designed to inspire the Democratic base. One part of this has been to advocate a millionaire's tax increase. So far, so good.

At the same time, however, the Obama White House has sent Congress a jobs plan that would be partially financed by increasing taxes on college-educated, suburban voters, who earn more than $250,000 in family income. This would be done, in part, by limiting deductions for charitable giving and home mortgage interest for taxpayers in that category.

So much for appealing to suburban voters in Northern Virginia, the research triangle in North Carolina, metro Denver, metro Philadelphia and metro Cleveland. Obama will need these regions to carry swing states — like Colorado, Pennsylvania and Ohio — in what could be a very close election.

There are two possible explanations for this apparent disconnect.

(1) The Obama campaign and the Obama White House don't talk on a regular basis. Something I find hard to believe.

(2) The Obama White House thinks that the media — and the public — won't notice if it pushes for taxes on millionaires and on upper middle class suburban voters. That the press will just focus on the former.

The problem with this second theory is that moderate Senate Democrats like Bill Nelson of Florida, Claire McCaskill of Missouri and Ben Nelson of Nebraska — all of whom are up for reelection in 2012 — are paying attention to this disconnect even if the press is not. As a result, they are unlikely to vote for the president's tax increases on college-educated, suburban independents.

Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid (D-Nev.) and Sen. Chuck Schumer

(D-N.Y.) have certainly noticed. They are urging an approach that abandons the tax increase on suburban independents and instead pays for the jobs bill solely with the millionaire's surtax. The question is whether the White House will follow their lead.

Polling indicates that Obama's assault on millionaires is working. The public is clearly with him on this. I have not seen any polling data on what college-educated, suburban independents think about Obama's proposal to raise their taxes. But the negative reaction to this proposal by moderate senators up for reelection would indicate someone has already polled the question.

Obama is far from being a lame duck yet. He certainly can be reelected. Everyone is assuming that this race will be similar to 2004, when President George W. Bush won a narrow reelection. The Bush campaign had no margin for error, and ran a very smart race.

Obama can do the same thing in 2012. But to do so, the disconnect between their reelection strategy and the legislation Obama sends to Congress has to end.

It's not easy subsidizing green energy

By Jarrett Skorup

The bankruptcy of "green jobs" darling Solyndra is still in the news because it could cost U.S. taxpayers $535 million due to a federal "stimulus" program loan guarantee. The Silicon Valley solar-panel maker's failure comes on the heels of another "green" corporate-welfare beneficiary going under, Evergreen Solar. These deals were big losers for Americans.

Both businesses reject claims that company management or the current market for "green" energy products were the cause of their failure. Instead, company officials cite intense competition from lower-cost Chinese manufacturers: "The solar power market is intensely competitive and rapidly evolving," wrote Evergreen Solar's chief executive officer, Michael El-Hillow. "In particular, solar manufacturers in China continue to receive considerable government and financial support and, together with China's low manufacturing costs, have become price leaders within the industry."

"Prices of silicon came down as the Chinese volume increased; they were able to get to very low costs and become competitive," said former Solyndra CEO Brian Harrison.

U.S. Department of Energy Department officials are promoting the same party line, saying that "less expensive solar panels made by government-subsidized companies in China undercut Solyndra's products."

"Chinese companies have flooded the market with inexpensive panels, and Europe—currently the largest customer base for solar panels—has suffered from an economic crisis that has significantly reduced demand and forced cuts in subsidies for solar deployment that were important to Solyndra's business model," said Jonathan Silver, who heads the Department of Energy's loan-guarantee program, to the House Energy and Commerce Committee.

Proponents of costly government "green jobs" subsidies—without which these firms would probably never have existed on such a scale—claim that select "clean" energy (wind, hydro and solar but not nuclear or natural gas) is the wave of the future, and worth risking taxpayer dollars to support.

If that is so, why wouldn't they welcome lower-cost Chinese versions of these products, which presumably would bring about our economy's transition from "evil" fossil fuels even more rapidly? Or at the very least, let the Chinese government, instead of American taxpayers, take the hits for allocating capital through politics rather than market realities.

Those favoring these energy subsidies may disagree, believing that sending taxpayer money to politically connected companies is actually a "jobs creator."

Disregarding the mountains of evidence that government is notoriously bad at picking economic winners, just looking at these two solar companies should show that this is a bad argument: The companies combined to employ about 1,500 people at the time of their bankruptcies (a few hundred for Evergreen Solar and 1,100 for Solyndra). On top of the federal funds, Evergreen Solar received $58.6 million from the state of Massachusetts and millions more from Michigan sources, while Solyndra got $535 million in federal aid and more from California. This is, in the words of my colleague Michael LaFaive, an expensive game creating the illusion of jobs.

State and federal governments should stop using selective economics and get out of this game altogether.

- Helps to keep vaginal tract healthy

Comprehensive Intestinal Support:

Probiotics is a term that means "pro life". Acidophillus and bifidus are our "friendly" bacteria that helps to keep our intestines and women's vaginas functioning properly and infection-free. Hence, probiotics are the healthy bacteria that help us, rather than harm us. Prescription antibiotics can kill of our helpful bacteria, thus allowing harmful bacteria and yeast to move in and flourish. Taking probiotics along with antibiotics helps keep a good balance of healthy bacteria in our vaginas and intestine, thus preventing unwanted microbial overgrowth.

Foreign exchange students ready for host families

Imagine the excitement of introducing your family to a new friend who can speak another language and can share his or her culture and experience with you.

Hosting is a wonderful way to explore the world without leaving home.

Students come from all over the world and have the desire to become an active member of your family and community. Students are carefully screened, speak English, are covered by medical insurance, and have their own spending money.

ACES Local Coordinator Kevin Foster will guide you through the application process, conduct host family and student orientations and will provide continued, to you and your student, support throughout the program.

ACES-American Cultural Exchange Service, a nonprofit educational exchange organization designed by the US Department of State to administer the high school exchange program, is currently seeking families to host students. There is no fee to apply or to host.

For further information about how you can become an ACES host family, please contact ACES local coordinator Kevin Foster at (806) 335-5857, the ACES national office at 1-800-661-2237 or visit www.ExploreTheWorld.org.

the lion's tale

The Clarendon Lions Club held its regular Tuesday noon meeting October 18 with Boss Lion Steve Hall wielding the gavel.

We had 16 members, the Club Sweetheart, and two guests this week – Tex Selvidge, guest of Lion Phil Shirley; and Anndria Newhouse, guest of Lion Roger Estlack.

Sweetheart MiKayla Shadle reported on the Bronco Band's Division One rating in marching contest, and it was reported that the high school cross-country team won its district contest also.

Next Tuesday, the club will forego its usual noon meeting in favor of the annual Charter Banquet that evening at 7 p.m. at the Lion's Club.

BBB warns of phone scam

The Better Business Bureau has published a warning regarding yet another phone scam. Consumers are receiving calls indicating they have won a lump sum amount of $3,500,000.

But before funds are made available, the scammers require their victims to wire $25,000 to cover insurance costs.

Consumers report that they were skeptical and asked for some sort of proof that they indeed have won the money. Their requests are answered with a faxed letter that appears to be from Bank of America and references the Better Business Bureau and the City of Las Vegas, Nevada. Included with the letter is a copy of a cashier's check made out to the victim and appears to be drawn from Bank of America.

The letter states, "This is to certify that Better Business Bureau is being a customer with U.S. Bank.

We 'Bank of America' satisfactorily maintained an account with the current balance of $3,500,000.00 US DOLLARS, with a pending balance of $25,000.00 US Dollar for insurance before the funds is made available to (the victim's name) attention through Bank of America."

The letter goes on to say, "This letter has been issued for the purpose to show proof that we withhold the above sum of money mentioned." In an attempt to come off as legitimate, the letter copies and pastes Bank of America, Better Business Bureau, and the City of Las Vegas, Nevada logos throughout and displays inaccurate return addresses for Bank of America, as well as, the Council of Better Business Bureaus.

Bank of America, the City of Las Vegas, Nevada and the Better Business Bureau have absolutely no affiliation with this fraudulent operation and advise consumers to be extremely leery of letters, faxes, emails or phone calls telling them they've won prizes, lotteries or sweepstakes.

Remember if it looks too good to be true, it probably isn't.

Library loses funding, forced to cut resources

This October in the Panhandle has been so nice! God has given us a little rest between seasons.

The rain we had last weekend has encouraged the spring weeds to come up so everything looks green. Peanuts and cotton are beginning to be harvested, children are happy and planning their Halloween costumes. And we all wonder what the future may bring.

Do you use the library? It is a great source and an asset to our community, but like all entities, it is dependent on funding from someone else.

It will soon be facing a crisis. Our library had received $4,000 a year from the state with a matching $4,000 from city and county for new books and material but that has changed. In the new budgets, the state funds will be $0 and the city and county funds are $3000.

Librarian Jerri Shields and staff are very good at stretching money, but we will not be seeing that latest novel everyone is discussing or that resource material you expected to find.

Fund raising events are being planned to prevent that from happening so stop by the library and ask what you can do to help. You know what they say, use it or lose it, the easiest way to lose a library is by having old material to read.

Texas troopers watching out for school bus safety

Texas law prohibits vehicles from passing any school bus that is stopped and has its flashing red lights activated to protect children getting onto and off of a school bus.

However, some motorists still break the law and place schoolchildren at risk of injury or death.

During National School Bus Safety Week (Oct. 17-21), Texas Highway Patrol Troopers in many rural areas of the state may be riding on or following school buses to catch motorists who break the law.

When a vehicle illegally passes a stopped school bus with the red lights activated, Troopers riding on the bus will radio ahead to other Troopers who will then pull over the offending motorist and issue a ticket that could cost up to $1,000.

Troopers will also be patrolling areas where school buses pick up and drop off children, looking for motorists violating the school bus law.

"The safety of children riding on school buses is important, and we will do everything we can to ensure that Texas drivers obey the law," said Steven C. McCraw, Director of the Texas Department of Public Safety. "Drivers will receive tickets if they do not stop for school buses as required."

In 2010, Texas Highway Patrol troopers wrote 414 tickets for passing a stopped school bus. There were 762 crashes in Texas involving school buses last year.

In those crashes, one person died and 89 people had serious injuries, according to the Texas Department of Transportation, which tracks traffic crashes.

Test Vaccine for TB Effective

According to a recent study in the journal Nature Medicine, an experimental vaccine consisting of a modified bacteria similar to the bacteria that causes tuberculosis (TB) has been found to be safe, and it protected test animals against the bacteria that causes this condition. Researchers at Albert Einstein College of Medicine (New York) connected with the study focused their efforts on genes in a bacteria that is known for its ability to outsmart the body's immune system. They removed these genes from the bacteria and then injected the bacteria into mice test animals. The immune system in the animals produced an immune response that appeared to clear the infection. They tried another approach with a different modified bacteria and then later gave another group of test animals the bacteria that causes TB. The animals that survived for more than 200 days showed no signs of the presence of TB-related bacteria.

According to information from the World Health Organization, TB infection affects one in three persons worldwide and just over 1.5 million people die from this condition each year.

Munitions Response Site Prioritization Protocol Texas Army National Guard

Taking into consideration various factors relating to safety and environmental hazard potential, the Texas Army National Guard intends to apply the Munitions Response Site Prioritization Protocol (MRSP) at the following Military Munitions Response Program sites:

- Non-Department of Defense Owned Non-Operational Defense Site (NDNODS) Kerens National Guard Target Range (TXHQ-002-R-01)
- NDNODS Lake Crook Artillery Range (TXHQ-008-R-01)
- Groom Weekend Training Site (TXHQ-010-R-01)
- La Reforma Training Site (TXHQ-011-R-01).

The Department of Defense (DoD) has conducted training and testing of weapon systems at active and former military installations throughout the United States to ensure force readiness and defend our nation. While the DoD has made great progress in addressing the potential hazards associated with former munitions-related activities, there remains work to be done. Through direction provided by Congress, the DoD has developed the MRSP which assigns priorities to defense sites containing unexploded ordnance, discarded military munitions or munitions constituents.

The Texas Army National Guard is in the process of completing a Site Inspection for the sites listed above and shall evaluate the sites by applying the MRSP. The MRSP includes criteria for evaluating the potential explosive hazard associated with munitions, as well as the potential hazard to human health resulting from releases of munitions constituents into groundwater, soil, and other environmental media. In accordance with the 32 CFR Part 179 requirements information collected will be used to apply the MRSP and will be made available for public review by requesting media through the office of Mr. David Boucher, Texas Army National Guard, Post Office Box 5218 Austin, Texas 78763-5218, 512-782-5753 or David.n.boucher@us.army.mil.

Anti-bullying program for local students & parents

Aim For Success, Inc., will present their nationally acclaimed anti-bullying program to the students and parents of Clarendon and Hedley public schools this month.

The Aim For Success motivational programs have educated more than two million teens, parents, and educators across America during the past 18 years on topics such as anti-bullying, drugs prevention, and abstinence education.

The parents' program for Clarendon and Hedley will be held at 6 p.m. on October 25 in the CHS Auditorium, and three programs for students of both school systems will be held during the school day on October 26 in Clarendon for kids in grades 5-12.

The Empowered To Defend live presentation informs students how they can overcome the words and actions of bullies by teaching the one proven way to stop bullying. The program will illustrate through riveting, true stories the effects bullying has on its victims and will empower students to defend those being bullied. Whether it's cyber-bullying or a face-to-face confrontation, students will learn how they can disarm their situation and turn it into good.

The Parent Program is a preview of the student presentation where parents will learn creative ways to talk to their child about bullying, encourage their child when being bullied and learn how to work with school leaders to prevent bullying.

Community guests are welcome to attend, and the schools extend a special invitation to church youth group leaders to also attend.

For more information, contact Debbie Thompson at Clarendon Public Schools.

BENEFITS THE ESA SORORITY

Clarendon Church of Christ ANGRY WITH GRACE?

What do you mean, "angry with grace?" Some people are angry for grace to abound, at least for it to abound for others. For example, you remember in Jonah, he was supposed to go and preach to Ninevah. He didn't want to because he hated those people. You know the rest of the story, he is swallowed by a great fish and changes his mind about doing God's will. He goes to Ninevah and tells them to repent, and they did. In Jonah 4:2, Jonah tells God that he knew that God would relent and not destroy these people. That was the reason he didn't want to speak to them, he knew that if they repented God would extend His grace to them.

How about the Prodigal Son? He came back home and there was much celebration except for one person, the elder son. "You never killed a fatted calf for me," he said. Instead of being happy for his brother, he was sullen and angry. He was angry with the grace the father had extended to his wayward son. Luke 15 tells us that everyday the father had watched for his son and looked for his return. The prodigal son "came to himself" in a pig pen and repented of his actions. The father extended grace to the boy when he came back.

Why would anyone be angry about God giving grace to others? They have their own idea of "who" should be getting it. Of course all believe that they should have grace but not so sure others "deserve" it. God extended His grace for everyone by sending His Son, John 3:16. Of course not everyone will be recipients of that grace because some do not really want it. God's grace does have some conditions to receive it. If you remember from the accounts of Ninevah and the Prodigal Son, all repented before they received God's grace. If repentance wasn't needed, why did God send Jonah to Ninevah? Why didn't the "father" send word to the Prodigal Son that he had been forgiven without a change in his life? Grace doesn't work that way. It is a free gift, but only to those who meet the qualifications set by Jesus. Hebrews 5:9 tells us that Jesus is the author of our salvation. That means He decided how it would be extended. "Not everyone who says Lord, Lord will enter heaven but he who does the will of My Father...", Matthew 7:21.

I pray that everyone would seek God and His amazing grace. It is free, but there are a few conditions. May God bless you in your life and may we all live a life that glorifies God.

Poster winners announced at Open House

The Clarendon Volunteer Fire Department and Clarendon Fire-belles held their annual Fire Prevention and Open House on Saturday, October 15 at 10 a.m. at the fire station.

After the poster winners were announced, all the children took a ride with the firemen on one of the fire trucks. Also joining the kids on the fire truck was EJ the dalmation, who came to the open house with his owners Blake and Erin Osburn.

The winners of the poster contest were: Headstart/Pre-K - 1st place Ben Estlack, 2nd place Kai Floyd, 3rd place Jackson Graves; Kindergarten/1st Grade - 1st place Piper Chambliss, 2nd place Taylor Halsell, 3rd place Morgan Johnston; 2nd & 3rd Grade - 1st place Kailee Osburn, 2nd place Emeri Robinson, 3rd place Josiah Howard; 4th & 5th Grade - 1st place Darcie Hunsaker, 2nd place Dalton Benson, 3rd place Gavin Word.
