Study considers Greenbelt Lake's reliability

Greenbelt Lake is not likely to run dry, but steps need to be taken now to insure the lake's customers have an adequate water supply in the

That's the result of a study ented to the Greenbelt Water Authority Board last week by engineers from the Ft. Worth firm of Freese & Nichols, who spent much of the summer investigating the reliability of the Greenbelt reservoir.

"They started in June, and they assessed the reservoir and looked at other water sources," Greenbelt General Manager Bobbie Kidd told the Enterprise

A Draft Assessment of Potential Water Supplies presented to the Greenbelt board found that "the reservoir will not go dry at current demand levels if the historic hydrology (inflow) is representative of future hydrology." Kidd said springs which feed Greenbelt Lake were found to be producing about 3,850 acre-feet of water per year, but he also says evaporation has to be taken into account.

And it is uncertain what effect the current drought will have on the local streams.

'They think we're at the bottom of a five-year cycle," Kidd said. The engineers' report notes that: "In the historical records there has never been a low-flow period that lasted as long as five years."

The engineers found that deple-tion of the reservoir has slowed in the last several weeks, which may indicate that the spring flow is return-ing. However, if the springs were to stop running and the drought was to continue, the report says Greenbelt Lake "has one to two years' supply remaining."

"The long term solution is groundwater," Kidd said.

To that end, the water authority is already in the process of refinancing existing bonds in preparation of pursuing development of potential groundwater supplies, investigating the permitting process as well as looking at the acquisition of water rights and rights of way.

"We're still concerned and worried," Kidd said. "Fortunately, we to develop one of them for sure."

Freese & Nichols recommends Greenbelt develop a source that could "provide up to 2,000 acre-feet per year during drought" and might not be needed in all years.

Greenbelt says water customers need to be aware that the drought restrictions are still in place and likely will be for quite some time.

"Nothing is going to change until we have water in the pipeline or the lake reverses the triggers that set off the restrictions," Kidd said.

Taking a look beyond the next election

Whoever takes the oath of office as President of the United States in January of 2013 will inherit an economy facing multiple challenges:

Undoubtedly, still-escalating federal spending will have the government bumping up against the debt ceiling again. By then, total federal debt will be larger than our GDP.

Unemployment is likely to remain high

The supply and reliability of our power-generating infrastructure will be stressed and at risk due to President Obama's anti-energy policies.

Social Security and Medicare will still need to be reformed significantly to address long-term fiscal

And the economy will encounter new headwinds as the landmines of tax increases with which Obama has salted the economic landscape are detonated. These include new taxes for Obamacare, the scheduled expiration of the Bush tax cuts, and the end of Obama's temporary reduction in Social Security withholding.

Obama has shown no indication of modifying his policies or agenda. Presumably, any of the Republican candidates would favor change on these issues (although perhaps not on Social Security and Medicare), but would he or she actually be able to solve these problems, even if there were a veto-proof Republican Congress?

The big political question for election year 2012 is: How much change would Republicans want? Would they downsize government as much as Obama upsized it? Will Republicans nominate a safe, moderate candidate (think: Ford Bush and Dole)-a technocratic tinkerer who accepts the entrenched paradigm of Big Government, and seeks to manage Leviathan better than Democrats would? Or will they opt for an unabashed conservative, a major reformer with a radical vision for smaller government?

That question wasn't even conceivable a year ago, but the tectonic plates in the American political land-scape may be starting to shift. Whiffs of radical reform are in the air.

Herman Cain, who favors a three-step plan to replace the income tax with a national sales tax and the privatization of Social Security, has risen in the polls since his impressive victory in the Sept. 24 Florida straw poll.

On Sept. 27, Newt Gingrich unveiled his "21st Century Contract With America," proposing to replace such venerable bureaucracies as the National Labor Relations Board and the Environmental Protection Agency. In doing so, Gingrich dared to challenge two of the most powerful Democratic special interest groups in America, environmentalists and labor unions (the strangest political bedfellows in our country, since hardcore greens would eliminate jobs in industry if they

It is possible that the bold proposals of Cain and Gingrich are just so much noise—red meat offered by dark horse candidates designed to excite passionate conservatives but that are anothema to Republicans who believe that a more centrist nominee would be more electable?

Another possibility is that a majority of Republicans will regard the 2012 election as an existential crossroad for our country, a last chance to change direction before we end up like Greece—financially bankrupt, economically moribund, and politically con-

In this scenario, just as the Democrats in 2008 nominated a man of the left, Obama, rather than a more centrist candidate, so the GOP will nominate an anti-Obama, a true-blue conservative as committed to a radical swing to the right, just as Obama pushed a radical swing to the left.

If the political pendulum swings far enough to the right to produce a 2012 conservative electoral landslide, and then Republicans follow through with bold cuts in federal spending and power, the years 2013 and 2014 will be crucial.

conservative policies revive the economy quickly then Republicans could hold on to their 2012 gains in the 2014 mid-term elections. If not, or if they step on too many toes, then there could be an anti-Republican backlash for moving too far to the right, just as voters punished Democrats in the 2010 elections for moving too far to the left.

If a sizable Republican majority were elected in 2012, would they "roll the dice" and risk political suicide by instituting major reforms? I imagine there is some serious soul-searching going on now

I wonder how many of them are grappling with the dilemma that must confront every office-seeker in a democratic electoral system: Should I do what will get me elected or re-elected, even if I know that the policies I support will weaken our country, or should I vote for what I know will help the country, even if it costs my political career?

These next few years will be fascinating

Celebrating Life - The Memory Tree Service

They are especially difficult during the first year following the death of a loved one. Despite what Martha Stewart says, no one's holidays are a Maxwell House commercial, vet each year we try, egged on unrelentingly by retail and the media, to turn our messy lives into a Hallmark Channel Holiday Movie.

Add to this, the chaos that is grief and is it any wonder that many people just want to go to sleep on Halloween and not wake up until after New Year's?

As a Grief Counsellor, I am a huge believer in the healing power of ritual. Strictly defined, a ritual is an action or occasion that takes us as human beings from one state of being to another. Wed-dings, funerals, anniversaries, birthdays, religious services, even something as simple as a handshake - all these are rituals. Ritual speaks to us on a visceral level. It begins with the human animal, and through its power, through its link to ancestors through its connection to all other human animals in the world, it transforms us into Mankind. From this belief in the healing power of ritual was born The Celebration of Life Memory

It is a very simple service. All it takes is a location (even one without walls), a tree (not necessarily a tradi-tional Christmas Tree), music (absolutely vital), and a gathering of people who want who need to remember and our loved ones who have died.

The first year of The Memory Tree

Service is the only time the tree stands empty - lit with clear, white lights - but devoid of anything else. Music plays as people enter, then an Odyssey Chaplain offers a prayer and lights the central of the five pillar candles. The Odyssey Executive Director welcomes everyone to the celebration, then introduces each of the Odyssey Hospice disciplines: nurses, home health aides, social workers, chaplains, administrative assistants, marketers, and volunteers. The remaining four candles are lit by representatives of those disciplines while the ED reads words of Grief, Courage, Memory, and

Then comes the placing of the ornaments.

Each family, staff member, and in the community has business partner in the community has been invited to bring an ornament representing the loved one – or ones – they have lost in the past year. It doesn't matter whether or not the person was a Odyssey Hospice patient. What matters is only that they have been loved, have died, and someone wants to remember them.

The ornaments we get are amazing. Some are brought in, some flown in to us from out of state or out of country. Some are handmade, some incredibly expensive, some personalized and others anonymous, but each represents the love and life of someone who was - and is -- greatly loved. In fact, two years ago, year we had our first pet ornament – a bone encased photograph of a beloved Chihuahua. If someone is unable to bring an ornament, or finds that that once they are at the service, there are others they want to remember, we have simple ornaments available to personalize.

We ask only that the ornament be something the participant is willing to leave behind as a perpetual memorial to their dead loved one. After the first year, the tree is never again bare -- the ritual begins with the tree already holding the ornaments from prior years.

This year in Amarillo, we will have four trees bedecked with five years worth of ornaments. Simply decorating the trees before the service has become a ritual

Following the placement of the ornaments, the attendees are invited to oin us in a Litany of Remembrance, an interactive piece adapted from a poem by Rabbi Roland B. Gittleshon. Then comes the thank you, a closing prayer and an invitation to join the Odyssey Hospice staff for a small reception - tea and cookies and the chance to talk again with the care team who was with you at the end of your loved one's life.

This year, Odyssey Hospice v host Memory Tree Services at the fol-lowing locations: Tuesday, November 15, at 4:00 p.m. in Memphis, at Memphis Convalescent Center, 1415 North Eighteenth Street; and Friday, November 18, at 4:00 p.m. in Amarillo at Tascosa Road Fellowship, 200 Tascosa Road.

We hope that you will join us at any or all of these Celebrations of Life. If you have any questions or would like more information, please call Odyssey Hospice at 806 372-7696.

Offshore drilling just common sense

One year ago, the Obama administration officially lifted its moratorium on offshore drilling in the Gulf of Mexico. Nevertheless, an ongoing, heavy-handed regulatory environment has created a de facto drilling moratorium (a "permitorium") that is jeopardizing domestic energy production, hundreds of thou-sands of jobs, and a national economic recovery

Over the last year, the U.S. Depart-ment of the Interior (DOI) has granted only a few deep water drilling permits. It has been widely reported that paperwork required for drilling permits has skyrocketed from 30-40 pages per application to a staggering average of 3,600 pages. Not surprisingly, regulators' average response time has slowed down drastically, too – from 36 days to 131 days. At every step of the regulatory process, from application preparation to application review, new burdens and bureaucratic foot-dragging have resulted in dramatically fewer drilling permits.

Over-regulation has economic consequences. The Obama administration's slowdown on permits and drilling means fewer jobs in the energy industry for years to come. For the immediate future, the administration's actions mean lost jobs and lost tax revenue at a time of record-high unemployment and record-high federal budget deficits.

These are not theoretical losses Nearly 40 percent of the deep water drills located in the Gulf of Mexico prior to the moratorium have moved to other countries additional 60

These departed rigs alone could have drilled an comment wells, created private sector spending. Looking ahead the continuing regulatory slowdown and "permitorium" could result in 125,000 lost jobs by 2015, $70 billion in lost private investment, and $18 billion in lost government revenue.

Over-regulation of offshore drill-ing will inevitably lead to a significant decline in domestic energy production, and higher costs for American families and businesses. Based on projections by the U.S. Energy Information Administration, domestic oil production is expected to decrease 20 percent this year and 42 percent next year from 2008 levels. As a result, we will pay more at the gasoline pump, and our economy will be even more vulnerable to the instability of foreign oil-rich nations.

In the last three years, gas prices have already risen by 88 percent. Reductions in domestic oil production will only add to the pressure on prices for gasoline, fuel oil, and electricity

President Obama recently kicked off his "We Can't Wait" campaign for his proposed jobs legislation. Much of this proposal repeats the same costly, ineffective approaches that were tried in the president's 2009 economic stimulus ram: hundreds of billions of dolprogram: hundreds of billions of dol-lars in temporary spending, creating a staggering debt. These policies will not spur private investment nor create jobs. Instead, they are proven to do exactly the opposite, leaving tens of millions of American workers stranded by chronic nine percent unemployment.

The administration doesn't understand how to get our economy moving It fails to recognize the immediate economic opportunities in the Gulf of Mexico, which do not require deficit spending nor tax increases to create jobs. If the administration's permitting policies returned to pre-moratorium levels, 200,000 jobs could be created by 2013. This is a common sense and costeffective approach for real economic

Unless the current offshore drilling policies change, higher energy prices will continue to drive up operating costs for families struggling to make ends meet, and for businesses in every sector of our weak economy. With more than 14 million Americans currently out of work, we need sensible regulatory policies that will allow private investment and job creation.

Tis the season for new phishing scams approaching the scammers are becoming more active. Last week a Clarendon resident brought a post card by the Enterprise office. The postcard was addressed to her and had Dear H_____ offering her a opportunity to receive a $25 Wal-Mart gift card and a $25 gasoline card for taking a short survey. I checked with Wal-Mart and this is a scam. Another version is Sam's card offering money for a short survey.

If you receive an e-mail, phone call, or US mail, wanting to give you something, telling you that you have won a prize or money or sell you something, you should check with the Texas Panhandle Better Business Bureau, (806) 379-6222 or http:// txpanhandle.bbb.org/ for additional information before you respond. If a door-to-door salesperson comes to your door and you don't know them, ask to see their City Permit, if they can't show it where you can read it, then shut the door and call the Donley County Sheriff's Office at 806-874-3533 and ask them to check

Other scams working at this time are: Strange email from Stub-Hub? It's a scam. Consumers across the country are reporting scam emails that appear to be from ticket company StubHub. The emails try to lure recipients into sharing credit card information by falsely alerting consumers they are being charged for expensive boxing tickets to a match in Nevada.

A Warning from a woman who wants to warn others: She savs she spent hundreds of dollars she didn't have to spend. It all began with a phone call. The voice on the other end told this woman she owed them $945. He explained one of her checks had bounced. If not addressed, he warned she would be in real trouble "And he instructed if not, have your legal attorney contact

With the holidays fast us and you're going to be served,' She was instructed to put the money on the cards then she gave them information to access the cash.

"First of all. don't take these calls at face value. Take time to check who calling. When they're on the phone, get a bob's name, the name of the company, a phone number. address. When you can find a number for that company, not necessarily the number they gave you, but look for a number, a way to contact them," says The Better Business Bureau.

They say you should never agree to pay anything over the phone. If you wire money or buy debit cards, you're throwing money away. You can't track it after it's sent out.

Breast Cancer Awareness Also Means Being Alert To Scams, Pink Product Puffery, BBB Advises

BBB warns against bogus Facebook Sweepstakes

The Better Business Bureau also warns that a bogus email supposedly from Mark Zuckerberg at posedly from Mark Zuckerberg at Facebook is popping up in email inboxes. The scam email claims that the recipient is the winner of S1 million in "our 2011 Sweepstakes (Facebook Inc)." The lottery emails are not from Facebook, and the BBB warms recipients not to click on the warns recipients not to click on the link in the email to claim the prize.

BBB Warns of Unclaimed Property Scams

As people are becoming more aware of the different kinds of unclaimed property out there and the very real possibility that money could be waiting for them. Better Business Bureau reports of a scam that uses the promise of finding unclaimed money to lure people in

Howardwick residents receive rain, snow, cold temperatures

Wow, the last day of October! Thanksgiving is less than a month away, and Christmas less than two months. I think most people in Texas are anxious for this year to be over, but I will say we probably won't ever forget it. We received 1.25 inches of rain about with an inch of one morning so what will happen this winter. No one knows, but like the Scouts, "Be prepared."

Well finally the time change is near, Sunday, November 6, set your clocks ahead one hour. If you forget you will be one hour early for church or work and no one wants that to happen. The worst thing would be waiting at the door of a restaurant for an hour along with screaming, hungry children. You get the idea, set your clocks ahead one hour.

Congratulations to Corie and Jake Longan on their marriage. Good luck guys and many happy years together.

Election Day is Tuesday November 8, and as usual the off-year election is not very exciting unless you look at it from the true significance of changing the state constitution with those 10 amend-ments. If you don't vote, don't complain if they become law, so please vote

Advice Mystery Shopper
Mystery shopping is a valuable tool used by some of the largest retailers, restaurants and banks to understand and enhance the experi-ence they provide their customers. However, it is not a quick and easy way to make a large sum of money and receive numerous freebies. Check with The Mystery Shopping Provider Association has developed some of the following tips for those interested in becoming a mystery shopper: Prospective shoppers do not have to pay a fee to become a mystery shopper. Shoppers should be extremely wary of any mystery shopping offer that requests a fee.

Be wary of any letter you receive that is postmarked from any other Country, especially from Canada.

Be cautious of opportunities that offer large sums of money for simple tasks like cashing a check or wiring money. A typical mystery shopping evaluation will earn about $10 to $20. If an offer sounds too good to be true, it probably is.

Texas State Attorney General's Office offers tips to help you avoid being swindled by fake check scams: Be suspicious of any check from an individual or business that you do Independently verify the check is drawn from an actual account at a legitimate financial institution. Do not rely on the telephone number listed on the check Use directory assistance to get the telephone number of the financial institution and call them to verify the check.

CC runners qualify for nationals

After a strong finish at the Region V Cross Country meet this ekend, the Clarendon College Men's Cross Country Team has qual-ified for the National Cross Country Meet and the Half Marathon Classic

Coach Casey Kreger and the squad are passing on the Cross Country Nationals to shoot for a strong finish at the NJCAA Men's Half Marathon Classic November 19, at Chattahoochee Technical College in Marietta, Georgia.

Team members Becerra of Harlingen, TX, Emanuel Barron of Hart, TX, and Joshua

Olvera of Abilene, TX.
The team is running around 100 miles a week in preparation for this event.

"I am thrilled at the success these student athletes are bringing to CC," CC Athletic Director John

Green said. "It is incredible this squad has set themselves up for success in both running events. I could not have dreamed we would have the opportunity to compete in both, but completely support Coach Kreger in his decision to go for the gold at the NJCAA National Half Marathon."

Broncs slam Longhorns secure spot in playoffs

By Sandy Anderberg
The Broncos knew exactly what they needed to do Friday night at Lockney to secure a playoff spot; and for the fifth year in a row, the Broncos did exactly that. With their 39-12 romp over the Longhorns, the Broncos sealed the deal in post-season play.

According to head coach Gary Jack: the Broncos played a solid game

"We did exactly what we needed to do," he said. "It set us up for the game with Panhandle this week. There is no scenario that can take us out of the playoffs."

Jack praised the team offen-

"Our offense ran the ball well,"

"Our offense ran the ball well," the ball well and our receivers did a good job. The line gave us good protection" protection.

Defensively, the Broncos were

"Lockney only had three plays that did anything for them," Jack said. "Two were for touchdowns and one was a long run. Other than that our defense shut them down and did a good job.'

On the move

Charles Mason carries the ball for the Broncos Friday night against the Lockney Longhorns. The Broncos won the game 39-12, and secured a spot in the playoffs and a sack; Charles Mason and Trajen Johnson each had a fumble recovery; Jonah Sell had an intercep-tion; and Tyler Smith, Jerami John-cos came through the game almost injury free.

The Broncos will take on Panhandle at home Friday night at 7:30 son, and Jayson Pigg all did a good p.m. in their last regular season a good game against the Panthers, and it is an important game for both teams in the playoff race.

"We've put ourselves in a good position for week 10," Jack said.

Drugs in the News

Protection Against Bone Loss while using Chemo-type Drug

Bone loss is most often heard about in postmenopausal women.
Being diagnosed with osteopenia (low bone mineral loss as measured by bone mineral density testing) and osteoporosis (a higher level of loss that can lead to bone fractures) may prompt health care providers to prescribe preventative calcium and vitamin D. Treatment of osteoporosis involves the use of drugs called biphosphonates (examples include Fosamax, Boniva, and Actonel) and other drugs.

Aless common cause of bone loss involves the use of chemotherapy drugs. The good news is that another biphosphonate called zoledron acid (Reclast) may help reduce the bone loss associated with the drug letrozole (Femara). This chemo-type drug is prescribed for breast cancer and works to control the production of estrogen in the body. According to a recent study published in the medical journal, Cancer, zoledronic acid was found to be effective in treating bone loss in postmenopausal women who were undergoing early stage treatment of breast cancer with Femara.

THANK YOU

Students and Staff at Clarendon CSD and Hotidey SD would be no thank ton Howard for her generous donation that allowed Aim for Success to come present their anti-bullying program, "Empowered to Defend". This program was presented to grades 5°m through 12"h. It was an excellent presentation which provided hope to those being builled and confidence to those who may be witnessing others being builled. Students were given tools and skills needed to help put a stop to bullying in our schools and community. We expect positive results from the experience. A big thank; you to Robertson Funeral Directors for buying logo bracelets for every student that attended this program. These popular bracelets will remind students they have a very proportant role in preventing bullying several that the field tools that will encourage she students to stand up for one enother. Clarendon and Hedley communities are very lessed to have people such as these who care deeply about our young people and their futures.

May God bless each of you for your generous gifts, it is greatly appreciated.

Clarendon Church of Christ YOU CAN'T BUY IT

YOU CAN'T BUY IT

A well-dressed couple came into a toyshop with their two children. "We want some toys that will keep the children entertained," the mother said. "My husband and I both work and the children are alone a great deal." The salesgirl showed them a variefy of games and play equipment, but to each there was some objection. "It seems to me," the mother finally said impatiently, "that if you knew what we are really looking for, you could find it among all of these toys."

The salesgirl sighed, "I'm sorry, madam, but I believe what you are really looking for-what your children want-is a mother and father, and we don't sell those here." (borrowed from Jack Exum)

The little story makes a great point. There is no substitute for parenting and the love and time that should be spent with our children. Video games, toys, etc. will never teach a child lessons of life best delivered by mom and dad. Toys will not raise your children in the "admonition of the Lord," Ephesians 6:4.

and dad. Toys will not raise your children in the "admonition of the Lord," Ephesians 6:4.

Yet, we all at some time have tried to buy their love, substitute things for proper time spent with them. Some go much further and give everything under the sun so as to try and salve their conscience for not being there for their kids. What is the solution?

Jesus said in Matthew 6:33 to "seek first the kingdom of God". If that is done, everything else seems to work out for the better. How many of us actually do that? Sadly, very few and at best it is not consistent. Children need and want time with their parents. They need our love, wisdom, and concern. They need to be guided in their spiritual lives and helped with things like peer pressure. They need boundaries, but if we aren't near them enough, they will set their own boundaries. When given a choice, they'll pick ice cream over their vegetables everytime.

Children are precious gifts from God. They need and God demands our very best to that end. We are responsible for helping to mold them into God-fearing, and productive citizens. Their morals and ethics will mirror what we taught or relationship with God. You can't buy time not spent with them, and do it right later. Time lost with them is lost forever. I pray that we would all try to appreciate our children more and try to do right by them in God's eyes.

CLARENDON CHURCH OF CHRIST PO Box 861 / Clarendon, TX 79226 Minister: Chris Moore / 874-1450 If you have any Bible questions, please write or call.
