Santa letters due: Early deadline set

Kids have until 5 p.m. this Thursday, December 13, to get their Santa letters to the ENTER-PRISE for inclusion in next week's Christmas Section, which will be mailed directly to the North Pole. And readers and advertisers are advised that an early deadline has been set for the December 27 edition due to Christmas falling on Tuesday. All news, ads, and photos for that issue must be in ne office this Friday, December 14, due to an early press date next week. We appreciate your cooperation

Countywide burn ban begins Monday

A countywide burn ban will be in effect next Monday folowing action taken by Donley County Commissioners this week

In their regular meeting December 10, the commissioners banned outdoor burning during 24 hours prior to or on the day of a forecasted Fire Weather Watch or Red Flag Warning issued by the National Weather Service in Amarillo Persons engaging in outdoor burning must contact the Donley County Sheriff's Office prior to ignition. The person doing the burning needs also to be present at the burn until it is completed.

All persons engaging in any form of burning is asked to burn with extreme caution. For more information, see the notice on page nine.

Sheriff says check scams underway

The Donley County Sher-iff's Office is reporting that senior citizens are being targeted with a check scam this month.

Sheriff Butch Blackburn said local citizens need to be on the lookout for mailings which claim to have a large cash awards or set-tlements, up to $300,000. A check for a portion of the "winnings" or "settlement" includes instructions to deposit the check and send a portion back to claim the balance. Blackburn said two local people have received checks on accounts supposedly belonging to "JB Hunt" or "Tax Free Shopping, LLC." The scams originate out of Canada, which makes prosecution very difficult, he said. For more information, contact the sheriff's office at 874-3533

Grand Jury issues two indictments

The Donley County Grand Jury handed up two indictments when it met December 5, 2012, according to information from District Attorney Luke Inman's office.

Tate Aulton Irons was indicted on the second degree felony of Aggravated Assault for an offense that allegedly occurred on July 6, 2012.

Bryan Darrell Henley was indicted on the state jail felony of Abandoning a Child for an offense that allegedly occurred also on July 6, 2012.

Merchants' prepare to give back next week

Shopping at home next Friday, December 21, will benefit the com-munity even more when several Clarendon merchants donate part of their sales to the Donley County Senior Citizens Center.

Fifteen local businesses have signed up for a special promotion to help raise funds for the senior citizens.

Clarendon merchants have always given money to charitable projects, but last year ten local businesses joined together and were able to raise $2,500 for the senior citi-

"This is a chance to help those who have served our community for years," said Terri Floyd at Every Nook & Cranny. "They've done their part for Clarendon, and now we can give back to them.

This year Clarendon Cham-ber of Commerce President Bonnie Campbell helped coordinate the merchant's effort and was able to increase the number of participants

Other communities are not as fortunate to have such a good senior center as Clarendon has, and mer-chants hope people will participate in this endeavor.

Senior citizens centers are constantly in need of funds, but recent government regulations have put even more burden on these organizations. The government now requires that milk be included with each meal even if the client does not want the milk, she said.

Currently, the Donley County Senior Citizens Center prepares 130 meals per day, five days a week.

A complete list of merchants participating in next Friday's fund-raiser is not yet ready, but so far the businesses include: Every Nook & Cranny, Stavenhagen Video, Mike's Pharmacy, Country Bloomers & Gifts, Henson's, Ronna's Creations, Clarendon Outpost, Straight Off The Ranch, The Clarendon Enter-prise, Lowe's Family Center, J&W Lumber, Campbell Online Marketing, McKinney Motor Company, Wishes Quilting & Fabrics, and Floyd's Automotive Supply. City crews battle water line breaks

Quick action by city employees repaired a broken water line last Tuesday, December 4, but a loss of pressure during the repair resulted in a "Boil Water Notice" being issued temporarily for Clarendon residents.

A contractor rehabilitating a city water well site struck a six-inch line while digging a slush pit just before 5 p.m., and the City of Clarendon Public Works Departm ent responded immediately by notifying employees that they were needed, arranging for the necessary equipment and parts and making the neces-sary "line locate" call to DIG-TESS (Texas Excavation Safety System), the organization which locates all underground utilities before excava-tions start. City officials said the pipe was so damaged that removal and replacement of a section of the line was necessary. Because the city's water system has only a few isolation valves, fire hydrants in the area had to be opened to relieve the water pressure. When pressure was reduced, the excavation around the damaged pipe could be pumped out and the repair completed. City Hall initially said repairs would take most of the night, but city work 7:30 p.m. workers fixed the line by about

"I commend these City employees for the skill and cour-age they exhibited in completing this difficult repair in such a short time," said City Administrator Lam-bert Little. "Public Works Director John Molder, this department's most seasoned veteran, was out on leave. Nathan Jaramillo was the Supervi-sor-in-Charge, and I think it took a lot of guts to tackle this project Training and experience paid off. He and the rest of the crew turned what could have been a real disaster into what I believe to be one of our finest

Little also noted that Greenbelt Water Authority assisted by lending manpower and equipment and said city employees from other departments volunteered and were on standby, ready to help if needed.

"Teamwork like this is inspira-tional," Little said. The Boil Water Notice was issued Tuesday night because of how low the pressure dropped across town. Little said the precautionary measure is mandated by the TCEO (Texas Commission on Environmen-tal Quality). While a loss of pressure does not necessarily mean the water has been contaminated, it does mean that pathogens may be able to enter the piped-water system and thus be carried to consumers.

As the water pressure restored, city crews flushed fire hydrants across town to remove and to circulate as much freshly-treated water as possible. By Wednesday at noon, city personnel had taken water samples from across town and sent them to a laboratory in Amarillo for testing.

"The City of Clarendon takes Boil Water Notices very seriously," Little said. "We understand what an enormous inconvenience such notices cause, not just for citizens in their day-to-day activities but for local businesses as well. Restau rants and convenience stores on our water for their ice and drink machines and for restrooms that their customers need and expect. The schools and the College, the nursing home and clinic, the hotels-all rely on our water system. We will issue Boil Water Notices only to preserve customer health and safety.

The Boil Water Notice was scinded Thursday afternoon when test results came back showing no contamination.

City workers were called on again to work afterhours this weekend to when other leaks developed in the city's aging water system one in a residential area in the south central part of town and another on a cast iron line that runs under the railroad northwest of the City Barn. Crews worked much of Saturday on the first leak and then were back on the job Sunday to fix the line near the railroad.

"I'll say over and over again much the City appreciated the cooperation and understanding of our customers," Little said. "And I'll say again how proud I am of the Public Works Department."

One of the things that I love about the Christmas season is reading the let-ters our children send to Santa Claus, beseeching him to bring them some of bettering of their hearts' desires. They profess that they've been good, perhaps even innocently embellishing some of their good behaviors. Their letters are true gems of our community and should prever cherished. In the spirit of their letters, I, too, have decided that I need to send Santa a letter and implore him to bring me a few of the things that I long for. Like the children, I have been a good boy – mostly. I must confess that I enjoy kicking up a little dust on occasion and may have inadvertently created some minor mischief – mostly among Republicans and tea party types. All in all, I feel my behavior has been good enough to war-rant writing a letter to Santa, asking for my heart's desires (which will, at the very least, assuaging some issues that create angst in my spirit).

Dear Santa: This Christmas I would like the fol-lowing items or reasonable substitutes if they aren't made in China:

1. New water pipes. Santa, in the best of times my water is a light brown like weak tea. In the worst of times (which happens all too frequently) icky articulate matter and small boulder come cascading out of my faucets. I don't think this is healthy for people to drink and bath in. Besides it leaves a ring around our bottoms, instead of the bottoms of the tubs. It's embarrassing when house guests run a tub full of wate for a nice, soaking hot bath, and their bath water looks like it came straight out of the lake – which is unfair to the lake water because it is mostly pristine, spring fed, and clear 2. A new GOP. The one we have now has grown to represent "Grumpy Old People." I want the Republican Party of Lincoln, TR, Dwight David, and Ronnie - maybe with a little Dubya like intelligence, courtesy, and emotional stability. We desperately need another good alderman – or two or three. 5. A new governor of Texas. Here we have the grandest of all states, and it's headed-up by one of the densest and most dumbfounding men I've ever known. Governor Rick is big, strapping, handsome in a manly way, and would make a mighty fine figurehead ornament for the ship of state. Unfortunately, we don't have a ship and what you see is pretty much all you get. Bless his heart, he must have been standing behind the door when the Creator was passing out brains. I cringe every time he sneezes fearing that his head will surely implode. A new governor along the lines of Sam Houston, Ann Richards, or even another Dubya would be just fine. 6. A decent Republican Party presidential candidate. I realize that the president has not yet held his inauguration, but it may take awhile to find some one other than Governor Christy. Why is it so difficult to find a decent candidate? Because in order to win the election one has to survive the Republican primaries, which means a walk on the wild and crazy right side of the Party. Then, after being certified as a right-wing wacko (required to survive the various state pri-maries), the aforementioned candidate must then immediately tack to the center if s/he hopes to win the national elec-tion. This is nigh impossible to do. The Republican far right must lose influence if the Party is to survive as a relevant political force in the future. Thank you, Santa. I hope you will bring me one or all of the items on my list. If for some reason you are unable to bring me what I've ask for, please bring me a four year supply of fine American whiskey; something like Wild Turkey or lack Daniels Black It could help me to keep a healthy attitude while the country goes to hell in a hand basket.

I love you, Santa

Time is now to reform tax system

Pundits, economists, politicians and Americans from every walk of life have been discussing the rapidly approach-ing fiscal cliff that the country is poised to go over on January 1st. People are understandably both scared and frustrated

Recently, I wrote about the effects of higher tax rates on the small businesses we depend on to create new jobs. Raising tax rates on these job creators would be bad for our ailing economy and depressing news for the more than 20 million Americans who are seeking full-time work. Fortunately there's a better vay. It has been proven time and again that lowering taxes for everyone results in higher revenues. If we enact lower, flatter tax rates for everyone, we would accomplish the goal of a fairer, simpler tax system, which would be a catalyst for faster economic growth. Small busi-nesses have historically invested in their companies and grown their businesses - ilting in increased hiring. The facts about the effects of lower tax rates on economic growth seem to have been forgotten during the past four years. In fact, every major tax reduction program since the Kennedy Administration's tax cuts has been followed by a substantial increase in revenue and solid economic growth.

During the Reagan administration, when income tax and capital gains tax rates were reduced dramatically, not only did our economy grow rapidly (more than double the rate of the previous four (ears) federal capitol tax revenues increased by 60 Comment percent. At the me time, the share of federal taxes paid by the top 10 percent of incomes increased. Likewise, the 2003 Bush tax cuts were followed by 52 consecutive months of healthy economic growth and gener-ated a massive increase in federal tax revenue. From 2004 to 2007. federal tax revenue increased by $780 billion (44 percent), the largest four-year increase in American history.

Four years after the start of the worst economic meltdown since the Great Depression, we are teetering on the verge of returning to recession, and the threat of higher taxes is partly to blame. Survey after survey of business owners and managers in the past year eveneed that they are holding back on expansion and new hiring because they don't know what to expect from Wash-ington, and they're afraid that much higher taxes are what's coming. Nevertheless, President Obama's plan is to increase taxes by $1.6 trillion over the next decade with much of this new revenue to be taken from smaller

The president says he's willing to talk about fundamental tax reforms later. But he is insisting on immediate tax increases on small businesses and those who make more than $200,000

($250,000 for joint filers). Most Americans understand that raising taxes is bad for economic growth. Members of Congress understand this, too. Earlier this year, Congress consid-ered President Obama's 2013 budget plan which was (no surprise) based on raising taxes by about $1.6 trillion. The surprise was that not a single Member of Congress in either political party voted for the president's budget.

tor the president's budget. The president is now trying to force a false choice on Congress and our country. Either Congress votes to raise taxes right away on those making more than $200,000 – including small busi-nesses – or he will allow higher taxes to take effect for everyone on January 1st. This would help to lock in bictorically This would help to lock in historically high levels of federal spending for years to come. Unfortunately, it would also be a major setback for our real critical national priorities – the economy and out-of-control deficits. There's still time for the president and Congressional leaders to avoid taking the country over a financial cliff. This is also the right moment for a fundamental restructuring of our tax system that will energize our economy. But the window of opportunity is closing soon.

as much of an inconvenience as having no water at all would have been.

There was a bit of hoopla over the boiling of the water, but for the most part people just went along and made the best of it.

Then over the weekend there were a couple of other water line breaks that affected people's service and were repaired by our dedicated city workers. Those seemed to elicit more chatter from armchai experts who took to social media to criticize not just the speed of the repairs but also city government in general and the city's sale of groundwater to Greenbelt Water Authority in particular. All of this over a couple of leaks that were repaired by guys working in cold, wet holes in the ground. Perhaps it's time we all learned something from those guvs.

Despite adverse conditions, our public works department jumped in - literally - and did what had to be done to get things fixed. They did it because it is their jobs, and it's what they do. Public Works Director John Molder's crew seems to be a hardworking bunch of guys, and they clearly demonstrated that he has trained the well enough, they can get the job done without him looking over their shoulders. (Molder was on medical leave when all this static was going on.)

Molder's men - like other city employees from the top down - don't need microscopic oversight from the board of aldermen and they certainly don't need second guessing from folks on Facebook who don't have a clue what challenges they are facing in the field. They need support – from the board and from the citizens.

As we close out this year, it is a good time to put aside the bitterness that seems to permeate our community and focus on what we can do to support the men in the trenches who make this city work and what steps can be taken to move Clarendon forward.

The Board of Aldermen has an excellent opport tunity to set that tone Thursday night, December 13, when they will meet in a re-scheduled regular meet-ing. They have a vacancy to fill with the resignation of Alderman Terry Noble, and that will be as good a time as any to begin unifying our community, which they can do with careful consideration of who they choose to appoint.

From there it is a matter of learning to all work together, to respect each other, and move forward... together. The members of our Board of Aldermen have it within themselves to do what is in the best interests of the city and to put aside any hard feelings or personal agendas.

And as citizens we must all do that as well. There are problems to be fixed if Clarendon is to be prosperous. Aging waterlines need to be replaced, other infra-structure issues must be addressed, and hardworking employees deserve respect, fair treatment, and wages commensurate with the value of their positions to this city.

All of that costs money, and we need to be will-ing to pony up some of it when it's time to set the budget next fall. We have to invest in this city to make it prosper. But first we need to invest some faith in each other and learn to get along.

munity that supports them. The Lady Bulldog Volleyball team spent last Tuesday shopping for Christmas presents for local children in foster care.

The gifts were purchased with ey raised by the Donley County Child Welfare Board's annual "Kash for Kids" fundraiser each Fourth of July. The board currently serves 14 children in care from Donley County.

"The team volunteered to help us shop this year, and we truly appre-ciated them," Ann Huey, Donley County Child Welfare Board president said. "These are kids giving back to other kids and that is so

The team will meet this week to wrap the gifts which will then be delivered to children in care in time for Christmas morning. "Our board works each year to make sure these kids are taken care of and have a wonderful Christmas, and we couldn't do it without the generosity of those who support our fundraiser each summer and these students who are so generous to volunteer," Huey said. As the semester comes to close, the Bulldog and Lady Bulldog basketball teams also pitched in to help those in need by canvassing Clarendon Sunday afternoon for their annual food drive. The players and coaches went door to door Sunday to collect items to help restock the food pantry at Clarendon

First Baptist Church before the holidays, and the town showed their support in a big way – over 500 cans of food were collected.

"Thank you to the community for your generosity in helping us with a good cause," Bulldog Head Coach Tony Starnes said. A newcomer at Clarendon College was also appreciative of the out-pouring of support for the food drive. "I'm new to town and I am really impressed with the caring and giving people in this community," Lady Bulldog Head Coach Brad Vanden Boogaard said. The basketball teams will return to the Dawg House in January. The Lady Bulldogs take on Frank Phil-lips at home at 5:45 p.m. with the Bulldogs following against Frank at 7 p.m. on Monday, January 7.

Scams running rampant during holiday season Hey group, its Christmas time this information is informative and trust your friends and family, but you never know how careful they'll the second number to call. A person at copy of their property deed. Wh the second number invited them to the mailings don't mention is the It is a good time to check your home to make sure that it is secure. Check not lured into a false sense of security.

Lower Your Risk: In today's technologically-dependent society where computers and electronic gadgets are plentiful, it's important to realize that everyone is at risk for identity theft. No matter where you live, it's important to take pre tions aimed at reducing your risk of identity theft. With the holiday season approaching, we thought we'd provide you with a bit of a refresher course on preventing identity theft. Below you'll find out some helpful ways for preventing identity theft during this busy time of year.

Be Careful When Shopping in Be Careful When Shopping in Public: If this means you have to leave your little ones at home while you shop for your aunt's Christmas gift, then go ahead and do so. The stores get very crowded during the holiday season. Combine that with the chearful music and executed. the cheerful music and eye-catching decorations and most shoppers simply don't pay attention. This can leave them vulnerable to identity theft. One common way identity theft criminals take advantage of preoccupied shoppers is to snap a photo of the shopper's credit card by using their cell phones. Think about it. How often do you stand in line holding your credit card where other shoppers can see? Do yourself a favor – keep your credit card number hidden. You never know who's looking.

Receipts, Receipts, Receipts When you give someone a gift, make sure you wrap the gift using the gift receipt and not your actual receipt. That's not saying you shouldn't be when they dispose of the wrap-ping paper and receipts. My guess is your receipt will simply get thrown away intact and never make it to the paper shred-

US Airlines letters in local mail...learn the fraud indicators...

Area residents are receiving a After residents are recovering a nationally reported suspicious letter. The letter to local residents is post-marked from Phoenix, Arizona. It rports to be from "US Airlines," and begins by announcing that you must respond by a certain date. The letter tells the recipient that they have "qualified for an award of 2 roundtrip airline tickets." It quotes a retail value of the award of up to $1298.00 and directs you to call a 1-866 number. This looks like the letter documented by the Better Business Bureau in July of 2012: http://www.bbb.org/blog/2012/07/ scammers-lure-victims-with-fake-free-plane-tickets/ A representative of the local

BBB said that they have received numerous telephone calls about this letter, and that at least one caller has responded and been given a attend some type of meeting for a presentation at a local hotel. There is some information that this is an attempt to get people to buy into a "travel club" or pay "taxes and fees" on the tickets, according to internet references about the letter. This has not been verified. There is a web page that references this letter or attempts to explain it as legitimate, but even this page is listed as "the unofficial site about the letter from US Airlines." It is possible that someone could use the telephone contact to obtain personal information to include bank or credit card numbers to "hold" the tickets ... and commit fraud.

This letter has indicators we find in many fraud attempts: It prom-ises something for nothing, it appeals to your sense of urgency, and it may require that you provide some form of information or payment to "win" or hold a prize. If you have received this letter, the department does not need to make a report as the infor-mation has already been turned over to the U.S. Postal Service. You can dispose of it. If you have lost money due to this letter, contact the Donley County Sheriff's Department at 874 3533 or go to http://police.amarillo. gov/index.php to make a report on line. If your group or organization would like to have an educational presentation about protecting your-self from fraud and similar crimes, contact Bob Watson 205-2758.

Homeowners Tricked into

Overpaying for Their Deed Homeowners nationwide are receiving letters asking them to pay upwards of $80 to obtain a certified copy of their property deed. What the mailings don't mention is that deeds are available from the county for a few dollars or less. How the Scam Works:

You receive a letter in the mail in an official-looking "open imme-diately" envelope. It warns that you should have a certified copy of the deed to your house or condo. Getting copy is easy; just pay the business $80 or more, and they will mail you one. The letter is misleading. Deeds really only cost a few dollars, so the scammers are making a hefty profit. As with most scams, the letters take several forms and the exact name amounts and wording used change over time.

Some versions of the letters look like a bill. Others warn that an additional $35 will be tacked on to a base charge if you don't order by a set date. However, the mailing by a set date. However, the mailing always uses an official sounding business name, including National Deed Service, Secured Document Company and Conveyance Trans-fer Services. These three all have a Washington DC return address and a toll-free number toll-free number.

How Can I Get a Copy of My Deed?: If you are thinking about selling or refinancing your home, you will need a copy of your deed. But you don't need to pay scammers for one. Where to get a new one: Call the Donley County Clerk's Office 874-3436 where deeds are recorded. What you need to get it: The street address of the property. There is no fee if you request the title your-self, but there may be a small charge for copying and certification.

The Broncos trailed in the first quarter until McAnear connected with a three-pointer at the buzzer to close the first quarter and give the Broncos their first lead of the game. With the Broncos having posses-sion in the second quarter, McAnear hit another three and the Broncos opened up a good lead in the second period of play. The lead did not last, however, and the Hornets got the win. Three Broncos finished in double figures with Ward leading the way with 16 and Topper and Wood following with 15 each. The Broncos shot 77% from the free throw line. Overall, Coach Brandt Lockhart was proud of the Broncos' play.

"I thought we played well overall throughout the tournament," Lockhart said. "We stepped up our defense which enable us to get our offense going. We moved the ball well. In the championship game, we could not get a stop when we needed

"The average household uses as much as 50-60 percent of its water consumption for the landscape – grass, ornamental plants, trees, etc.," be said. "Considering that the aver-age family of four produces about 90 gallons of gray water per day, if this was used to irrigate a landscape, it could represent a significant water savings."

Cabrera said this would be especially true for a large city such as nearby San Antonio, which has more than 1.3 million people in its metropolitan area.

"Implementing the use of gray water for landscape irrigation across the state could mean a tremendous water savings in terms of acre-feet of water, contributing to the water easiest ways to reduce the need for potable water typically used in a home landscape, said Dr. Calvin Finch, director of the Water Consersaid Dr. Calvin vation and Technology Center in San Antonio, which is administered by the Texas Water Resources Institute, part of the Texas A&M University System. The institute is participating in the gray water research, as well as providing funding. Finch said the Texas 2012 Water Plan identifies more than 500 specific activities that, if imple-mented, would help meet the state's future water needs.

"One of the low-hanging fruit projects that is often overlooked is use of gray water from households," he said. "Research results indicate that with minimum precautions water from our showers, bathroom sinks and clothes washers could be that used to meet up to 10-15 percent of our overall landscape water needs." Gray water differs from reclaimed water in that it is not captured water from sewer drainage or storm-water systems and then run through a waste-water treatment facility, Cabrera said.

"Reclaimed or 'purple-line water is used for irrigation by some large-acreage operations such as golf courses, sports fields and large businesses," Cabrera said. "But gray water is just potable water that has been used for fairly benign household activities and could be reused immediately or stored and used soon after its initial use. "It is also not what is referred to as 'black' water, which is used water from a toilet or the kitchen sink, both of which have a higher potential for containing bacteria and other organisms considered hazardous for

He said some southwestern U.S. states, including parts of Texas, already allow for the use of gray water under certain restrictions, such as irrigation through delivery by flooding, subsurface or drip irrigation.

"While gray water has little potential for containing hazardous organisms, such as coliform bacteria, these irrigation distribution methods are preferred to spraying in order to further ensure safety," he said. Cabrera said collaborating enti-

"Here at the Uvalde AgriLife center, we will be focusing primar-ily on evaluating the efficacy of gray water use on ornamental plants," he said. "We will establish a display plot of conventional and water-use efficient ornamental plants that will simulate a typical Texas landscape, so we can evaluate the short-term so we can evaluate the short-term and long-term effects of gray water on these plants and their surrounding soil."

Cabrera said one concern about using gray water on home landscapes is possible salt content.

"Some detergents may have a high salt content in the form of sodium, chloride or boron, which could potentially 'burn' a plant," he said. "Part of our research here will involve determining the salinity and specific constituents found in gray ater and their effect on plants, plus

Safeguard animals during winter weather

Every year, PETA receives thousands of complaints about people who leave dogs outside in the cold. Although they are equipped with fur coats, dogs and other animals can still suffer from frostbite and exposure, and they can become dehydrated when water sources freeze.

Keep animals inside. This is absolutely critical when it comes to puppies and kittens, elderly animals, small animals, and dogs with short hair, including pointers, beagles, pit bulls, Rottweilers, and Doberman pinschers. Short-haired animals will also benefit from a warm sweater or a coat on walks.

 Don't allow your cat or dog to roam outdoors. During winter, cats sometimes climb under the hoods of cars to be near warm engines and are badly injured or killed when the car

 Wipe off your dogs' or cats' legs, feet, and stomachs after they come in from the snow. Salt and other chemicals can make your animals sick if they ingest them. You should also increase animals' food rations during the winter because they burn more calories in an effort to stay warm.

Keep an eye out for stray animals. Take unidentified animals inside until you can find their guardians or take them to an animal shelter. If strays are skittish or otherwise unapproachable, provide food and water and call your local humane society for assistance in trapping them and getting them indoors.

 If you see animals left outside without shelter from the elements, please notify authorities. For information on what constitutes adequate shelter, click here.

Offer rations to wildlife who are caught in storms or white-outs by spreading birdseed on the ground. Provide access to liquid water by filling a heavy water bowl and breaking the surface ice twice a day.
