CISD voters casting ballots on tax issue

Early voting is underway in the Clarendon ISD election to ratify a new $1.17 property tax rate. School officials said Tuesday afternoon that 101 citizens had already cast early ballots since polling began last Wednesday.

The school's current ad valorem rate is $1.04 per $100 valuation. The proposed 13-cent increase would raise taxes on a $100,000 home by $130 per year.

CISD officials say they need the higher tax to help bridge a projected $434,960 budget deficit for 2013-2014. The school has been hit with declining revenues due to state budget cuts and declining enrollment.

Early balloting continues at the CISD Administration Building through next Tuesday, May 28, during business hours 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Election Day will be Saturday, June 1.

Local veteran remembers service in WW II

By Ashlyn Tubbs, Clarendon Enterprise

Joe Robinson is a man rarely seen without wearing his cowboy hat and a smile on his face. Leasing land from the JA Ranch for more than 40 years, he is known largely for his ranch work and accomplishments within the Donley County community, winning the Pioneer Man of the Year for 2009.

These are not considered his biggest achievements, though.

During one point in Robinson's life, he was not sure if he would ever return to the United States, when he left his family in the Texas Panhandle during World War II to serve his country 20,000 feet off the ground.

"Nothing is pleasant when something like that happens," he said. "It's something you have to do, it's not necessarily something you want to do. I'm proud of my service, and I'm proud of my country, so I didn't flinch because I had to go."

Born in Hereford and raised in Denton County, Robinson graduated from Texas A&M in 1942, which he said reveals he is not a spring chicken. He became commissioned as a second lieutenant in the Army and was sent to Ft. Knox, instead of Ft. Riley where he initially wanted to attend. Although he was disappointed at first, Robinson said he now views this as a blessing.

"They actually did me a favor," he said. "Those who went to Ft. Riley trained with horses; and when they went overseas, they didn't know they weren't going to have their horses shipped to them."

During his time at Ft. Knox, he trained with tanks for about six months until he discovered an opportunity he could not pass up.

"They were losing a lot of pilots and had started daylight bombing in Europe, and they needed pilots," he said, "so I volunteered."

Robinson began his pilot training in Florida and picked up a brand new airplane in Savannah, Ga. He flew with a 10-man crew to Nuts corner, Ireland, at age 21.

"If you don't think that won't get your attention out there over the ocean for about ten hours with nothing in sight," he said, "you're wrong."

Robinson depended on a navigator, who was a graduate from Ohio State, to direct him to their proper destination.

"If you were two degrees off, you would miss the British Isles, if you got careless, and fly over France and get shot down before you ever got in combat," he said. "The Germans didn't care where you were from, they just wanted to shoot you down."

His crewmembers consisted of three other officers and six gunners from states including Kentucky, Ohio, New Jersey, California, Arkansas and Indiana. Promoted to lead pilot, the lives of these men became in Robinson's hands.

"It was a lot of responsibility to be in charge of everyone, and I didn't take it lightly because a lot of things depend on what you decide," he said. "Your judgment has to be better than it should be."

Once landing in Nuts corner, the crew members and Robinson took a train unto Belfast and the British furnished their breakfast, which consisted of hot tea and rock-hard navy beans.

"So we didn't eat very much," he said. "It was different when you stay in a foreign country for the first time with the different houses, vehicles, and everything. It was an experience."

He vividly remembers his first night spent overseas.

"They put these huts in the fields and they scattered them so they would be hard to hit, and the first night I was there, the German's plane got in there and bombed our barracks," he said. "Luckily, the dropped bombs missed the barracks and just threw dirt and rocks all over them."

"That kind of got our attention. We didn't sleep very good that night. I went to the bomb shelter because I didn't know whether there was going to be more or not. I didn't know what was going on"

This would be only one of his many encounters with bombs. While in London during a three day pass, Robinson said 169 buzz bombs hit that night.

"It was the worst night of the war," he said. "That evening, the train stopped going into London and I knew we weren't at the station yet. Turns out, he stopped for a buzz bomb to go past. Those British people had to put up with a lot."

Robinson's first mission was to deliver supplies to the marquis for the French underground.

"We went down a valley and they said there would be smoke signals there," he said, "so we dropped our supplies and we flew back over the mountain and people were just waving at us."

He said that was a beautiful day, without a cloud in the sky. He got to view the Eiffel Tower as they flew over Paris and remembers the pretty scenery with a twinkle in his eye.

"I wasn't mad at anybody," he said. "I was like, 'Boy, this looks pretty peaceful!'"

However, right about then, his plane got hit with flack from another plane. That was all it took to change Robinson's initial mindset.

"Four little ol' holes came into the wing not far from me," he said. "If it would have been over about three feet, it would've been right under me."

Robinson flew a B17 plane complete with thirteen 50-caliber guns in formation with 36 other planes, sometimes his wing fitting almost inside another plane's wing while turning.

"You had to pay attention," he said. "You

Aldermen talk about jobless claims on city

The Clarendon Board of Aldermen delved into a discussion about unemployment compensation claims during last week's regular meeting on Tuesday, May 14.

In reviewing the city bills, Alderman Abby Patten raised concerns about $8,169 in unemployment claims that had been paid to former employees. At least one of those, she said the city administrator at the time had assured the board there would be no claim on because the employee had quit.

City Secretary Machiel Covey said her records show that employee was dismissed, and Patten and Alderman Debbie Roberts said the city should appeal the issue with the Texas Workforce Commission. Covey said she had done that already, and the commission had ruled against the city.

"We're being blamed by the citizens and the paper for wasting $30,000 to fire Lambert [Little], but here is $8,169 that we didn't even know about," Patten said, addressing Mayor Larry Hicks and Covey.

Alderman Will Thompson said the issue was over since Covey had already appealed the claims.

"Once it's been through arbitration, you're done," Thompson said.

The board later took up the city's employee overtime policy again, and Roberts' desire to see employees

Let's leave student loans to the banks

By Dr. Shawn Ritenour

As millions of students and their parents are preparing for life after commencement, they're also preparing to deal with massive student loans. Increasingly, people are concerned about the student debt situation brewing on college campuses. The present state of student debt is not a pretty picture.

According to a report published by the New York Federal Reserve Bank, college students are borrowing more than ever and debt delinquency is on the rise. Student debt almost tripled between 2004 and 2012 and is now just over $1 trillion. In fact, student debt is the only kind of household debt to rise during the Great Recession and is now second only to mortgage debt in magnitude. At the same time, for all age groups the share of borrowers who are more than 90 days delinquent on their student loan repayment has almost doubled.

Some, like Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke, claim that student debt is not inflating a higher education bubble that will cause a financial crisis, because the vast majority of student loans are backed by the U.S. government. The taxpayers are on the hook and not the banks, so banks will not be in financial distress if students default.

Bernanke's claim is revealing. It's clear that he thinks that the financial system is the economy. It seems that if the financial system is afloat, everything is okay. Such reasoning ignores that what helps people achieve their ends is not money per se but the actual producer and consumer goods that are produced throughout the social economy.

Alas, investment made possible by subsidized loans of newly created money contributes to an unproductive use of resources. Thus the economic problem with government-guaranteed student loans. Consider:

In the first place, it is not at all clear that the educational payoff matches the expense. According to data from the Collegiate Learning Assessment, 45 percent of students demonstrated no significant learning in their first two years of college and 36 percent demonstrated no learning in four years. According to the National Assessment of Adult Literacy, from 1992 to 2003, literacy among college graduates declined at about the same rate that enrollment grew; all the while government grants and guaranteed student loans significantly increased.

This dismal educational payoff is largely because much of increased subsidized tuition payments have been absorbed by increases in personnel. For example, in 2007, colleges utilized 13.1 percent more employees to educate the same number of students than they did in 1993. The vast majority of growth has been in administrative staff. From 1976 to 2005, the number of administrative staff per student more than doubled; from 3 per 100 students to more than 6 per 100 students. The financial effect of administrative bloat is magnified by the fact that the average mid-level and senior-level administrative salaries are noticeably higher than the average faculty salary. Between 1993 and 2007, while expenditures per student for instruction increased 39.3 percent, expenditures per student for administration increased by 61.2 percent.

Making the college experience available requires using many resources—land, labor, buildings, desks, computers, energy, and all sorts of amenities. These are all resources that have alternative uses. If they are being allocated to provide education merely due to government subsidies, it is likely they would be more valued in other uses.

That student debt is fueling malinvestment is indicated by the rising debt delinquencies. Like the old gray mare, the college wage premium ain't what she used to be. Increasing default rates prove this. What matters is not only the level of a post-college salary, but the level of that salary relative to the cost of college. As higher salaries fail to keep pace with college tuition, an increasing number of students are put at risk of not paying off their loans.

Additionally, many students who have borrowed money for college do not complete college. Six-year college completion rates at public four-year institutions have remained just below 55 percent for a decade. At the same time, the four-year rate has been stuck around 30 percent.

Colleges, universities, and their students are caught in a costly game of leap frog. The perceived need for financial aid and loans results in more government subsidies. More debt results in more demand for college schooling and consequently higher tuition. Higher tuition increases the perceived need for more debt. More student debt increases the demand for college which increases tuition price. On it goes.

The only solution is to get government out of the business of subsidizing student debt. Then, at least decisions of students to borrow and banks to lend—and colleges to set tuition—will be based on economic reality rather than the shifting sand of monetary inflation.

North Pole moving, Tea Party to blame

Bad news, folks! The magnetic north pole is galloping to the northward at close to 40 miles a year. Historically, it's been creeping along at less than 10 miles a year for the past few centuries. Magnetic north, which is the place where compass needles actually point, is near the geographic North Pole, which is currently located near Ellesmere Island, just off the Canadian mainland.

The magnetic north pole has moved little since it was first discovered by scientists in 1831. Then in 1904, about the time that Teddy Roosevelt's administration kicked into high gear, the pole began shifting to the northeast, which just happens to be to the right on a map of the US, at about nine miles a year—which is almost light speed in geological time.

At the end of Reagan's administration, and the beginning of Daddy Bush's term, it sped up again. Then in 2007, close to the end of Dubya's two "compassionate conservative" terms, scientists verified that it again sped up to its current speed of 34 to 37 miles a year. That folks, is faster than warp speed in geological time.

Now, in the interest of scientific accuracy, it must be noted that the scientist blame the shift on changes in the earth's inner core, which is composed of a solid iron center surrounded by a rapidly spinning liquid metal, and climate change.

Well, we can't do too much about the earth's core, but we can address climate change, and the causes of said climate change—more particularly global warming. Republicans, and most of the tea party Republicans, have long denied global warming and its causes. Naturally, most tea party types remain true to their early Neanderthal roots and continue to deny man made global warming.

The movement of the geographical North Pole works something like this:

the Earth is a spinning sphere that is irregularly shaped, thus causing it to wobble. The wobble is called the Chandler Wobble, and results in a southeasterly movement of the North Pole by about six centimeters every 433 days. The Chandler Wobble is thought to be the result of changes in pressure at the bottom of the oceans caused by fluctuations in salinity, temperature, and ocean circulation—all are also negatively affected by global warming.

So, as you can see, the right wing of the Republican Party, better known as the tea partiers, must take some of the blame for the movement of both north poles, since they refuse to do anything useful in mitigating the deleterious effects of the aforementioned climate change, a.k.a., global warming.

Even more daunting are the recent suggestions that our junior non-Texan, Texas Senator Ted Cruz may be lining up a run for the presidency in 2016. Yikes! As you may or may not know, non-Texan Texas Senator Cruz is absolutely aghast that anyone still believes in climate change and global warming, especially after his previous pontifications on the subject. According to his thinking, climate change is a left-wing conspiracy designed to separate folks from their guns and their God. After all, according to Senator Cruz, all non-right wing ideologies are defacto left-wing conspiracies designed to separate folks (mostly God-fearing Texans) from their guns and their God.

Personally, I think we ought to take every opportunity we can to disparage the quick, the dead, & fred by fred gray

our non-Texan Texas Senator Ted Cruz. The man, is after all, a Yankee dressed in sheep's clothing. Granted, he was Dubya's attack dog, and was mighty good at it. I will admit that I just do not like the man. He's rude, full of himself, and does not represent what I think are good Texas attributes.

I also think he is dangerous. He most assuredly is not a consensus builder and does not work well within his own party, much less the opposing party—which, unfortunately, also has many flaws. Ted Cruz is an ideologue of the worst sort. He is smart enough to think that he is omniscient, yet deeply flawed enough to be unaware of what it takes to be a good leader. After all, he has never had to govern. He has basically been a hired gun to advocate Dubya's policies and positions in front of various courts throughout the land, and to gut the opposition in the process.

Of course, almost all of the tea party types deny the truth of climate change and global warming, even in the face of continuing scientific evidence that indicates that global warming is real and is getting worse. Unfortunately, it probably doesn't matter as much as it once did. Scientific studies indicate that it will now take several thousand years to undo the damage caused by man-made climate change. I'm fairly certain that neither I nor my immediately following descendants will live to see any improvement whatsoever.

So, as both poles move eastward towards Greenland, we may witness unusual and miraculous natural phenomena as we go boldly into the future. Who knows, maybe the Rocky Mountains will follow along behind, pulled along by the rapidly moving magnetic field? Wouldn't that be something?

Even more frightening, non-Texan, and tea party darling, Texas' Junior Senator Cruz might actually win the presidency.

Is this the United States or China

By US Sen. John Cornyn

The events that have unfolded over the past week are showing big government at its worst. First we learned more details about the Obama administration's coordinated attempt to misrepresent the September 2012 terrorist attack in Benghazi, which claimed four American lives. Then a senior IRS official acknowledged that her agency had deliberately targeted conservative groups for harassment. Meanwhile, the administration was forced to admit that its top health regulator has been soliciting industry funds to help implement Obamacare. Finally, we discovered that the Justice Department has cast an extraordinarily wide net to capture the phone records of several journalists who work for the Associated Press.

All of these events highlight the Obama administration's massive credibility gap. As someone who has spent a career in public service, I want government to work. As a conservative, I want government to be as small and efficient as possible. As an American, I cannot tolerate a government that actively deceives the people it is meant to serve, whether through negligence, incompetence, or malfeasance.

In 2011, my office began receiving complaints of unfair treatment by the IRS from various conservative groups in Texas. They cited excessive, unreasonable, and improper inquiries from the IRS and feared that they were being targeted for their political beliefs. I sent multiple letters to then-IRS commissioner Douglas Shulman expressing my concerns and asking for an investigation. He categorically denied that the IRS was targeting specific groups.

Two years later, we learned that he was wrong and the conservative groups were right: The IRS was systematically targeting people of a certain ideology—one that happens to be at odds with the current administration. Furthermore, we have learned that senior IRS officials were aware of these accusations as early as June 2011. That is outrageous, but sadly not surprising from an administration that has chosen time and again to deceive the American people.

To review: Four American patriots are dead; U.S. citizens are being deliberately targeted and harassed by their government; journalists are understandably concerned about an intrusive Justice Department investigation; and a cabinet secretary is strong-arming the health industry to "voluntarily" fund a partisan, highly unpopular policy. Is this America or China? Any one of these issues is a "scandal." Together they reflect an administration that is deeply flawed and has lost the faith of the public it is sworn to protect.

Board members can get training

I grew up in Donley County and still love to come back. I support the county and have best wishes for the people here.

We have been caught up in the controversy arising in the Hedley School Board of Trustees and the Clarendon City Aldermen.

In discussions about these subjects with friends, I thought back to when, while sitting on the school board in Hedley, we only wanted to produce the best opportunity for our children. No agenda, just hard work distributing money where it did the most good.

The first thing that confronted me was my lack of knowledge. There is training for any board you want to be on. Super intellect from the past is available. Attending this training and seminars, I grew into the job. Training will help members with proper decision making that helps the community and in the end limits discourse.

With the community behind these well trained board members doing their civic duty, who knows where we can go.

A small thing can make a big difference

I would just like to make a suggestion in light of the devastating tornadoes hitting Oklahoma. I would recommend that everyone who plays the lottery to take the money they would spend on one day of lottery tickets and donate that money to the tornado victims. It would be a small thing for everyone, but it could make a big difference.

Be wary of scams with insurance and Facebook

Scammers Use Launch of Affordable Care Act Insurance for ID Theft Con

Consumers nationwide are reporting receiving scam phone calls claiming they are eligible for health insurance cards through the Affordable Care Act. But the insurance is not available until October, so don't let scammers tell you otherwise. How the Scam Works: You receive a call from someone claiming to be from the federal government. The caller informs you that you've been selected as part of the initial group of Americans to receive insurance cards through the new Affordable Care Act.

However, before he/she can mail your card, the caller needs to collect some personal information, such as bank account and social security numbers. Of course, it's a scam. There is no card, and enrollment for insurance under the Affordable Care Act doesn't start until October 1. Sharing personal information with a scammer puts you at risk for identity theft. Scammers can use the info they obtain to open credit cards in your name or steal from your bank account.

How to Spot a Scam: Scammers often pose as government workers and take advantage of the confusion surrounding new or complex policies. Here are tips for dealing with this type of scam.

Hang up, don't press any buttons and don't call the scammer back. We all like to have the last word, but returning the phone call may just give the con artist information he can use.

The government typically doesn't call, text or email. Government agencies normally communicate through the mail, so be very cautious of any unsolicited calls, text messages or emails you receive. Also, if the government is contacting you, they should already have your basic personal info, such as address and social security number. Don't trust caller ID. Scammers have technology that lets them display any number or organization name on your screen.

Never give out personal information such as credit card numbers, bank account numbers, dates of birth or social security numbers to unfamiliar callers. For More Information. Check out the Federal Trade Commission's alert for this scam and learn more about a related issue, Medicare scams, on BBB's blog.

bob's whittlin'

Survey Scam Trending: March 2013. Why it's a Scam: Clicking the scam link prompts you to install a rogue Facebook application. Anytime the URL starts off with apps.facebook.com/app_name_here, you should know that Facebook didn't develop the app. Scammers often try to trick users by promoting apps promising Facebook features, upgrades, etc.

If an unsuspecting user installs the application, this will allow them to spam their scam messages to all of your friends. Do you really want to let an unknown (scam) developer have this much access to your Facebook information? These scams are known to use multiple Facebook apps to spread virally across Facebook. Anytime you install a third party Facebook application, you give the application developer access to your personal data. Always be very selective on the apps you install, and only install them from well-known, trusted sources. Continuing on with the installation redirects you to a survey scam: Tell Us What You Think of Facebook. It is a Scam.

We recommend that users install BitDefender Safego, a Facebook application that will scan your News Feed and help keep you safe from scams like this.

How to Deal with the Scam: If you did make the mistake of installing the rogue application you are now spamming the very same spam message to your friends. Clean-up your newsfeed and profile to remove references to the scam. (click the "x" in the top right hand corner of the post).

You also need to remove the app from your Facebook account. Click the down triangle—>Account Settings—>Apps to remove this and other rogue applications. If you or your Facebook friends are falling for tricks like this, it's time to get yourself informed of the latest threats. Be sure to join the Facecrooks page on Facebook to be kept informed of the latest security issues.

Honor troops on Memorial Day

This weather is so predictable – no rain, record breaking heat, and high winds. I complain because of the small garden and flowers, but I would be very, very worried if the livelihood of my family were at stake. So all you farmers and ranchers out there, this prayer is for you, and I ask Jesus to give you strength to endure. I don't know what the rest of the world would do without you.

We have no rain while our neighbors in Kansas and Oklahoma were hit with tornadoes. My family in Wichita, Kan., were not hit, and for that we are grateful. Watching the news, you see so much devastation and loss with entire communities destroyed. It reminds me of the pictures I have seen of Howardwick when it was hit in the early morning of April 18, 1970, with an F4 tornado. The night of April 17 and 18 left sixteen people dead and 42 injured in Donley County. I would hope everyone is more prepared with shelters and loss of life would not be so great.

Memorial Day weekend is coming – a day that began during the Civil War to commemorate Union and Confederate men who died in the war.

Women met at cemeteries to clean and place flowers on graves to honor the dead. Civil War graves were so honored until WWI when all men killed in action were honored. During the 20th century the custom of cleaning graves and placing flowers spread to all graves on what was called Decoration Day and was held on May 30. Slowly the name was changed to Memorial Day and became a national holiday in 1971. Today we think of Memorial Day as the beginning of summer and more people celebrate with a trip to the mountains or beach or a backyard cookout. Whatever you do remember our troops are still in harm's way and this day began as a tribute to them, include them in your prayer.

Local church welcomes pipeliners

On Friday evening May 17 at the Donley County Activity Center, the Howardwick First Baptist Church had a Welcome 2 Clarendon Hamburger Supper for the pipeline employees.

Approximately 100 pipeline employees and their family members attended and fellowshiped with 35 church members. Music was provided by Danny Mullins, Mac Miller, Norma Hall, and Nelda Grinder with an impromptu song in Spanish by one of the guest.

The homemade dessert table was especially popular, and a special thanks is given to Gene and Kathy Hommel for providing the hamburger meat for the event.

Donley County is blessed in many ways including financially to have these people living in our community for a few months. Please remember to be Texas friendly so they will have memories of what residing in our midst should mean.

On May 26 the Hedley Methodist Church will host a dinner for the Hedley 8th grade class to send them off to high school. Eighth grade students and their parents are invited.

On June 15 there will be a baby shower for BJ (Like) Waddell. That's Saturday, from 2:00 to 4:00 p.m. at 605 W. 7th in Clarendon.

Her theme is pink, purple and white, and Miss Aliceson Gail will make her appearance around August 9, 2013.

AgriLife Extension district recognizes Haynes

Donley County Extension Agent Leonard Haynes was among the honorees recognized by the Texas A&M AgriLife Extension Service District 1, headquartered in Amarillo, during its annual awards program on May 14. Haynes received an Outstanding Outcome Program Award in the category of Agriculture and Natural Resources for his program on "Weed Management for Cotton and Peanuts."

Additionally, the Donley County 4H program was honored with Achievement Awards in two categories. The local 4H was among the top five programs for 2013 District Contest Participation along with Potter, Randall, Sherman, and Moore counties, and the Donley County 4H also posted the Highest Enrollment Increase for 2012-2013 along with Hutchinson, Wheeler, Deaf Smith, and Potter counties.

The High Plains Food Bank and Rich Kochoener were recognized as "Friends of Extension."

Brandon Dukes, AgriLife Extension district director, said it is important to recognize those people and organizations that "help us carry out our AgriLife Extension mission on a daily basis."

He said the High Plains Food Bank, represented by Edna Tucker, Zack Wilson, Andrea Patton, Broc Carter and Maria Stickel, has been a key organization on numerous projects, specifically programs impacting food-insecure families.

Kochenower, although with Oklahoma State University's Extension Service, has been a tremendous help to county agents in the northern Texas Panhandle during the absence of an agronomy specialist in the Amarillo district office, Dukes said. In addition, the Oldham County Commissioners Court - County Judge Don Allred and commissioners Quincy Taylor, Clay Crist, Roger Morris, Billy Don Brown - was presented the Outstanding Contributor to Extension Programming award.

Oldham County Commissioners were recognized for their continual support of AgriLife Extension programming, he said.

"In addition to their outstanding support of the local program, the Oldham County Commissioners, along with Judge Allred, have provided exceptional leadership in the area interpreting the mission of AgriLife Extension to stakeholders

DPS increases patrols for Memorial Day weekend

AUSTIN - The Texas Department of Public Safety (DPS) will significantly increase trooper patrols this Memorial Day weekend to help keep Texas roadways safe. During the increased patrols Friday, May 24, through Monday, May 27, troopers will be looking for drunk drivers, speeders, seat belt violators and other traffic violators statewide.

"Memorial Day is a time of reverence and remembrance for all those who have paid the ultimate sacrifice in service to our nation," said DPS Director Steven McCraw. "DPS encourages Texans to mark the holiday responsibly by adhering to safe driving practices and by not drinking and driving. Troopers will be out in force, and are prepared to issue tickets to drivers disobeying traffic laws in an effort to keep our roadways safe."

Last year during the Memorial Day weekend, DPS troopers arrested 609 drunk drivers and issued more than 6,000 speeding citations, nearly 1,400 seat belt and child safety restraint tickets, and cited 825 drivers for driving without insurance. Additionally, troopers arrested 264 wanted fugitives and 219 suspects with felony warrants. The increased traffic enforcement also resulted in 10 drug cases and 16 stolen vehicles recovered.

Drivers can take a variety of measures to help ensure safe travel during the Memorial Day weekend, including: Slow down - especially in bad weather, construction areas, heavy traffic and unfamiliar areas.

Eliminate distractions, and don't text while driving.

Buckle up everyone in the vehicle - it's the law.

Don't drive fatigued, and allow plenty of time to reach your destination.

Drive defensively, as holiday travel may present additional challenges.

Make sure your vehicle is properly maintained before your trip begins.

Slow down or move over for tow trucks and police, fire and EMS vehicles stopped on the side of the road with emergency lights activated - it's the law.

CC golf team to play in national tourney

The Clarendon College Bulldog golf team is participating in the NJCAA Division II national tournament this week.

Goose Pond Colony, a municipally owned resort and golf facility, is hosting the 2013 National Junior College Athletic Association (NJCAA) Division II Men's Golf National Championship Tuesday, May 21 through Friday, May 24, at its Colony Golf Course in Scottsboro, Ala. Approximately 40 schools are represented at the four-day tournament by individual players and teams vying for the national titles.

"We are thrilled to host the NJCAA Championship at Goose Pond Colony and encourage everyone to come out to watch these talented collegiate golfers and teams compete for the top spots," says General Manager Lyle Sosebee. "We always enjoy hosting events that contribute to the development of student-athletes' skills and those that bring the community together to support their efforts."

Saints' Roost Museum to host annual members only dinner

The Saints' Roost Museum Board of Directors will be hosting the annual members only appreciation dinner on the grounds of the museum Friday evening, June 7, at 6:30 p.m. This is going to be a really fun evening as a Hawaiian Luau is being planned.

The featured guest artist this year is our own local artist, Mary Martin. Mary grew up on a farm in Lakeview and graduated from Lakeview High School. She attended Clarendon College, graduating in 1970. She married Mitchell Martin that summer. They have one daughter, Jessie, and four grandchildren.

Mary has always loved art and started sketching at a very early age. She did not begin painting until after she and Mitchell married. Mary's earliest paintings were mostly portraits and scenery. She has also done lots of western art and still life. Her love of western art and scenery probably derived from being a rancher's wife and living on ranches.

Mary retired from the USDA's

Farm Service Agency in November 2012 and now has time to pursue her passion of painting. Not ready to really retire, Mary is working to build a business and do paintings for the public.

Mary will have several paintings on display in the museum for all to view and enjoy.

If you are not already a museum member, we urge you to come on out and enjoy the evening. Annual memberships are available at the door for $25.00 annually per family.

Drugs in the News

Aspirin May Prevent Breast Cancer

For more than 20 years medical researchers have suggested, based on various evaluations, that aspirin may have a role to play in the prevention and possibly the treatment of different types of cancer. Recently a group of researchers from the VA Medical Center in Kansas City showed that a daily low-dose of aspirin slowed the growth of two types of breast cancer in test animals. In some cases, aspirin was thought to have shrunk tumor cells and possibly stopped tumors from spreading to new tissue sites. The findings of this group were presented at the annual meeting of the American Society for Biochemistry and Molecular Biology.

For many years the medical media has also reported other types of cancer for which aspirin appears to have the potential to slow or prevent. These include cancer of the prostate, esophagus, colon, and skin. Researchers are not sure how aspirin does this, but theories include aspirin's primary anti-inflammatory effect in the body or perhaps the idea that aspirin targets or interferes in some way with the body's stem cells. Stem cells are where tumor growth is thought to begin.

Local veteran remembers service in World War II

couldn't be joking off, because if they turn, they didn't always tell you and weather conditions also affected the formation. They won't let you fly that close now-a-days, unless you are in the service. The closer the formation, the better fire power you have."

Robinson and his crew flew formation during daytime, while the British flew at nighttime. He said the 24-hour bombing was relentless.

"I can see why those Germans would be mad at you if you got shot down," he said. "You would hope the army got to you before the civilians did, because you're tearing up their houses and killing their families."

Robinson said the United States' anger toward Germany was evident by how Munich had very little houses with roofs on them from the bombs.

"We just tore that city all to pieces," he said. "Munich is now built on top of the rubble from all the bombings."

Robinson and his crewmembers had plenty of close calls during their missions. He said they once got hit in the bomb bay and had 54 holes in the plane when he finally landed, but no one was hurt.

Another time, Robinson made a decision that saved their lives while making a raid on Munich. During the long flight, Robinson said the plane began to run out of gas. He immediately left the European coast and started letting down from 20,000 feet to a main landing place in England.

After calling in to receive permission to land, he was luckily right in front of the runway, but another plane flew into the other side of the landing, which had wounded aboard. Robinson decided to chance the landing and missed the opposite plane by about 20 seconds. He will never regret this decision.

"When I turned off the runway, I gave the outboard No. 4 engine the gas and it quit on me because it was out of gas," he said. "And when I parked the plane, I gave the No.1 engine the gas to park it, and it was out of gas. So if I had tried to go around, I never would have made it. Things like that you remember."

Although Robinson was able to keep all of his crew members safe, he lost two men from his crew after they filled in for another crew's members: one was taken prisoner of war and survived, the other died in a plane crash.

"I got pretty attached to all of them," he said. "The rest of my crew and I were lucky we never had much firing activity."

Even though Robinson went on 30 missions, he said the only thing that became routine was making sure everyone set their watches by the second because two or three seconds could make a huge difference in their formation. He said his bravery largely came from being in his twenties.

"When you're young, you don't worry much," he said. "I thought I was bulletproof, and I guess I was because I never did get a Purple Heart."

Another close call Robinson experienced was during his last raid, one he said made him sweat. The raid was on Berlin, and German fighters hiding in the sunlight knocked down 13 of their 36 planes.

"I never did worry much until the last mission," he said, "and then I thought, 'I want to go home.'"

Robinson did not have to wait much longer. After surpassing the required 100 points by seven from his missions ran and medals received, he was released to return home after serving three-and-a-half years.

"It was great to get back into the United States," he said. "I came back with a whole bunch of troops and I was greeted once I got to Amarillo. My folks were in Dalhart then."

war by far was returning home, he said.

"Home is always the best place," he said. "There's always some place that may look a little greener on the other side, but I don't know whether it is or not once you get there."

In honor of his service, Robinson has received three separate medals for his many missions completed and surviving the war.

"Now they're pretty tarnished," he said. "They wouldn't pass inspection."

He even received a medal from the French for helping raid the Germans.

"When the Frenchman awarded me with that medal, he kissed both my cheeks," he said. "I didn't know whether to break and run or hit him."

Robinson is the only remaining survivor of his crew. He said he kept in touch and even exchanged Christmas cards with most of them up until their deaths.

He believes in the importance of veterans sharing their experiences with younger generations in order to prevent future mistakes and wars.

"I want them to find out what happened where they won't get in the same mess we were in, because it's no fun," he said. "It's a shame to kill so many young people and tear up so much. Killing people was worse than tearing up the town."

After hearing Robinson's war stories, his wife, Ruth Robinson, feels indebted to the young men like her husband and brothers who served in the war.

"I've really appreciated it and found out all that WWII was about," she said. "Back then, I did not know. I guess when you're that age in high school, you just didn't understand. I realize how much we owe these young kids who flew over there, taking off over that big, dark ocean. I had no idea back then about the sacrifices they made."

Without the service of crews such as Robinson's during WWII, he said the US would be speaking German today.

"Freedom is not free," he said. "Someone had to pay for it."

Clarendon Church of Christ MODEST APPAREL

In 1Timothy 2:9 Paul warns that women should wear modest apparel. He states that they shouldn't wear things that draw undue attention to themselves. Paul tells us that in Galatians 5:19 that lewdness is condemned by God. Lewdness and immodesty plague our society today, for men and women. As summer comes blazing in, people tend to wear less clothing. That's not a problem if properly covered.

Many use the heat or swimming as a reason to wear provocative or revealing clothing. The question one needs to ask: "Am I in a state of undress that would displease God?" "Am I causing others to stumble?"

I know that some say that everyone should not look or mind their own business, and that's true up to a point. We all should try not to stare at others or lust for others, but that doesn't negate everyone's duty to properly attire him or herself.

Some argue over who invented the mini-skirt of the 60's but there is no doubt that when that envelope was pushed, nothing else was too risky for some. One who claimed to help make it trendy was asked why the mini-skirt was invented in the first place. The answer was simple: SEX. It was said to invite men and the message was sex. Over the years people won't put it that way but that is basically what revealing clothing is for, to attract the attention of the opposite sex. Once the attention is grabbed, what then? The "advertising" was done for a reason!

If you look around, you have to say a part of the reason for the explosion of single mothers and fatherless kids is the lax morals that have been adopted over the last 50 years. Lax morals concerning clothing, sex, those not willing to work, government hand-outs, have eaten away the moral fabric of this country.

Men, you should help dress your daughters and wives. They don't see themselves as we see them. Ladies help others not stumble by wearing clothing that invites stares. There are also "little" eyes that are watching. They need an example of purity and modesty. Our society would be much better off if others' flesh was covered up. God bless you and keep you.

Shaw
Joan Shaw, 88, died Saturday, May 18, 2013, in Amarillo, Texas. A memorial service was held Sunday, May 19, 2013, at 2:00 PM in the First Baptist Church in Clarendon with Rev. Lance Wood, pastor, officiating. Arrangements are under the direction of Robertson Funeral Directors of Clarendon. Mrs. Shaw was born February 19, 1925 in Donley County on the family farm at the south end of Windy Valley and had been a lifetime resident. She married H.C. independent and self reliant and tried in a loving way to instill these traits in her family and students. She was a little lady but in a lot of ways, she was as tough and self assured as the toughest can be. She had great love for and was caring and compassionate with her family, friends, and others within her community. She loved to visit and tell stories about the fun she and her sisters and her brothers had on the farm in her childhood. She also loved the fact that she and H.C. raised many cattle and other farm animals and both were proud of taking care of them and living where they were all their married life. She was preceded in death by her husband, H.C. Shaw; two daughters, Sherry Moore and Carolyn Jo Shaw; her parents, Mary London and Reg Hillman; two sisters, Mary Jane and Margaret Nell; and one brother, Beaty Hillman. Memorials can be sent to the Citizens Cemetery Association, PO Box 983, First Baptist Church, or Donley County Sr. Citizens, all in Clarendon, Texas 79226. receive overtime compensation for emergency calls after hours and on weekends regardless of whether they have already put in 40 hours that week. Covey said she had checked with other cities to see if anyone paid overtime prior to an employee putting in 40 hours. After some discussion, the board agreed to take the issue up at a future meeting to try to craft a definite policy that would cover emergency compensation. Clarendon Economic Development Corporation Executive Director Chandra Eggemeyer gave the city a first quarter report on the city's Hotel Occupancy Tax and updated the board on CEDC activities, and Mayor Hicks reported on city projects and said the sanitation department had received a $13,500 grant for a new baler.

Property Tax Protest and Appeal Procedures

The law gives property owners the right to protest actions concerning their property tax appraisals. You may follow these procedures if you have a concern about:

- *the market or special appraised value placed on your property;
- *the unequal appraisal of your property;
- *the inclusion of your property on the appraisal roll;
- *exemptions that may apply to you;
- *qualification for an agricultural or timber appraisal;
- *the taxable status of your property;
- *which local governments should be taxing your property;
- *the ownership of property;
- *the change of use of land receiving special appraisal;
- *any action taken by the appraisal district that applies to and adversely affects you.

Informal Review: Your Appraisal District staff urges you to review the value records of your property. The Appraisal Review Board hearings are set for July 23, 2013, at the Donley County Appraisal District office. Some protests result from errors or misconceptions which we are pleased to correct.

Review by the Appraisal Review Board: If you can't resolve your problem informally with the county appraisal district (CAD) staff, you may have your case heard by the appraisal review board. The appraisal review board (ARB) is an independent board of citizens that reviews problems with appraisals and other concerns listed above. It has the power to order the appraisal district to make the necessary changes to solve problems. If you file a written request for an ARB hearing (called a notice a protest) before the deadline, the ARB will set your case for a hearing. You'll receive written notification of the time, date, and place of the hearing. If necessary, you may request a hearing in the evening or on a Saturday or Sunday. Prior to your hearing, you may ask to review the evidence the CAD will use to uphold their determination. The law provides that before a hearing on a protest or immediately after the hearing begins, you or your agent and the CAD shall each provide the other with a copy of any written material intended to be offered or submitted to the ARB at the hearing. To the greatest extent practicable, the hearing will be informal. You or a designated agent may appear in person to present evidence or you may send notarized evidence for the ARB to review at your hearing. The CAD representative will present evidence about your case. The ARB will make its decision based on the evidence presented. In most cases the CAD has the burden of establishing the property's value by a preponderance of the evidence presented. You can get a copy of a protest form from the appraisal district office at 304 S Kearney or P O Box 1220, Clarendon 79226; phone 806-874-2744.

Note: You shouldn't try to contact ARB members outside of the hearing. The law requires ARB members to sign an affidavit saying that they haven't talked about your case before the ARB hears it.

Review by the District Court or an Arbitrator: After it decides your case, the ARB must send you a copy of its order by certified mail. If you're not satisfied with the decision, you have the right to appeal. If you choose to go to court, you must start the process by filing a petition within 45 days of the date you receive the ARB's order. As an alternative and within the same time period, you may file a request for binding arbitration with the county appraisal district in certain cases.

Tax Payment: You must pay either the amount of taxes due on the portion of the taxable value not in dispute or the amount of taxes due on the property under the order from which the appeal is taken.

More information: You can get more information by contacting your appraisal district at 304 S Kearney or P O Box 1220, Clarendon 79226; phone 806-874-2744. You can also get a pamphlet describing how to prepare a protest from the appraisal district or from the State Comptroller's Property Tax Division at P O Box 13528, Austin, TX 78711-3528.

DEADLINE FOR FILING PROTESTS WITH THE ARB***

Usual Deadline: 30 days after a notice of appraised value was mailed to you. Late protests are allowed if you miss the usual deadline for good cause. Good cause is some reason beyond your control, like a medical emergency. The ARB decides whether you have good cause. Late protests are due the day before the appraisal review board approves records for the year. Contact your appraisal district for more information.

Special Deadlines: For change of use (the appraisal district informed you that you are losing agricultural appraisal because you changed the use of your land), the deadline is before the 30th day after the notice of determination was mailed to you.

For ARB changes (the ARB has informed you of a change that increases your tax liability and the change didn't result from a protest you filed), the deadline is before the 30th day after the notice of the determination was mailed to you. If you believe the appraisal district or ARB should have sent you a notice and did not, you may file a protest until the day before taxes become delinquent (usually Feb. 1) or no later than the 125th day after the date you claim you received a tax bill from one or more of the taxing units that tax your property. The ARB decides whether it will hear your case based on evidence about whether a required notice was mailed to you.

*The deadline is postponed to the next business day if it falls on a weekend or holiday.
