Chamber taking award nominations

The Clarendon Chamber of Commerce is taking nomination for recognition of local citizens.

Nominees can include anyone from Donley County. The awards to be given this year include: the Saints' Roost Award (for a lifetime of service to the community). Man and Woman of the Year (for outstanding ser-vice in 2012), Pioneer Man and Woman of the Year, and Volunteer of the Year

Each nomination should include a brief narrative of the reason for the selection and qualifications of the nominee. Nomina tions should be limited to a maxi mum of one page in length and can be as short as a few informal ences. Nominations are confidential, but the person making the nomination should include their name and number in case the awards committee has any questions.

For convenience, nomination forms are being published in this week's CLARENDON ENTERPRISE on page ten.

Nominations can be deliv-ered to the chamber office at the Mulkey Theatre or mailed to Clarendon Chamber of Commerce, PO Box 987, Clarendon, TX 79226.

Deadline nearing for NRCS tree sale

The Donley County Soil & Water Conservation District is selling a wide variety of small, medium and large sized ever-greens, deciduous shade, shrubs, and fruit trees.

Order forms are available at the Donley County NRCS office. Have your orders turned in by March 1, 2014. The trees should be delivered around the second or third week in March. For more information, contact the Donley County Soil & Water Conserv tion District at 806-874-3561, extension 3.

Beer now available at local stores

The natural drought still lingers, but Clarendon long "dry" spell came to an end last Thursday, February 13, with the first package sales of beer since 1902.

More than three months after Donley County voters approved a local option to legalize the sale of alcoholic beverages, Budweiser trucks rolled up to Allsup's convenience store and Lowe's Family Center to stock coolers that had been running in anticipation for weeks.

Allsup's sold the first beer in the city to Billy Curry and Danny Nugent at 11:25 Thursday morning, and sales since then have been brisk. the store says. "It has been awesome," sa Allsup's clerk Trish Voyles. "We have been busy every day, and there hasn't been any problems. Our sales are definitely up, and that's good for the town.'

Manager Haskell Sorrells said that Friday was Allsup's busiest day so far and that while alcohol sales have been great, other merchandise "I'm seeing deli items and lots of other stuff selling more,"

Sorrells said, "Customers are excited and have come in whooping and hollering. Sorrells said alcohol sales are allowed between 7 a.m. and midnight Monday through Saturday and from noon to midnight on Sunday. Lowe's manager Buddy James said sales at his store have been steady and were about what the company expected. The supermarket had its first beer sale about 20 ites after Allsup's. Lowe's began stocking wine last Friday, and one clerk said she was surprised by how many local drink wine. peopl

Clarendon CEFCO's two convenience stores have also applied for beer and wine permits, and state

Candidate deadline is this Friday

With only a few days left before the sign-up period closes, the City of Hedley is the only one of seven local governments that has drawn enough candidates to have a competitive election.

As of Tuesday morning, four other local entities had drawn just enough candidates to fill the seats available in this spring's election, and two more were still one candidate short.

In Hedley, the terms of Mayor Leon Ward and Aldermen Lonnie Roby and Carrie Butler are up this year. All three incumbents are run ning for reelection, and challenger Diana Postma has filed for the board, setting up the need for an election this May

The City of Clarendon has three spots open and three candidates at press time. Aldermen Larry Jeffers and Beverly Burrow are seeking reelection and John Lockhart has also filed to run for the board. The Clarendon College District has three seats available on the Board of Regents, and the positions are held by Dr. John Howard, Dr. Bill Sansing, and Jack Moreman, and all three have filed to run again. Incumbent Ted Wright and challengers Troy Monroe and Michelle McCann have signed up to run for three positions on the Hedley ISD Board of Trustees. The Donley County Hospital Board has four positions up this year. Those seats are held by Jan Farris, Jeannie Owens, Mark C. White, and Lori Howard. All four are signed up.

H.L. Baird and Sam Grider are running for the city board in How-ardwick where three positions are open.

Clarendon ISD has two trustee positions up this year, and incum-bent Weldon Sears has filed for reelection.

Filing for local positions runs through Friday, February 28. Elec-tions will are scheduled for May 10.

Primary election Tuesday

Republican and Democratic voters will head to the polls next Tuesday, March 4, to determine who they want to see on the ballot this November.

As of this Tuesday morning, 205 people had early voted in the Republican Primary, and 14 voters had cast early ballots in the Democratic Primary. Early voting contin-ues by personal appearance at the Donley County Courthouse Annex through this Friday, February 28. Voting next Tuesday will take place at the locations listed below. Check your voter registration card for your precinct.

NJCAA penalizes CC cross-country team

The Clarendon College men's cross-country program has been placed on one-year probation by the National Junior College Athletic Association following random audit.

CC President Dr. Robert Riza informed the Board of Regents about the penalty during last Thursday's regular board meeting and said the problem was simply that the college's former athletic director had "sloppy paperwork." Riza said the college received notice by the NJCAA three weeks go that it would audit CC's indoor track and field program. During the course of the audit, CC officials and the NJCAA discovered some problems with letters of intent signed by members of the men's cross-country team, athletes who also participate in indoor track and field competitions. "You are allowed a certain number of letters of intent," Riza later told the ENTERPRISE, "and, if one of those athletes ends up not coming here, you are allowed to release them and add another one. We're allowed letters for ten men and ten women to run cross country, and we had one or two too Probation for the country men means they cannot participate in regional or national playoffs next fall and the number of scholarship positions CC can offer for that program is reduced from ten to six

We broke the rule and we're going to take the punishment," Riza said. "This is just a situation where paperwork was sloppy." CC is already taking steps to make sure this problem never happens again, Riza said. A new full time athletic director, Brad Vanden Boogaard, is already in place, and he will be attending NJCAA training this summer. In addition, new eligibility checklist procedures are being implemented, and CC coaches will be receiving on a positive note, Riza told board that more than 90 student athletes from Clarendon had been listed on the athletic director's fall honor roll for having a 3.0 or higher GPA, and 11 of those students had 4.0 GPAs.

Riza updated regents on an employee survey which found that "meeting students' needs" is the college's top priority and that the maintenance and housekeeping staff ranked the highest in terms of friendliness and teamwork. The survey also gave low ranking for communications and collaboration between the administration and the faculty and staff, which he said he expected. The president also reported meeting with representatives meeting with representatives of Cielo Wind Energy and said the company is inquiring about tax relief – not a tax abatement - for its proposed wind farm in northwestern Donley County. Riza also briefed the board on his plan to use some S3 grant funds to offer TSI testing in area high schools as a way to help lower the number of students needing

GOP should stand for free trade

By K. William Watson Cato Institute nstitute

The U.S. trade agenda is floundering and there's a lot of blame to go around. House Democrats have refused to support trade promotion authority (TPA), which would streamline passage of President Obama's signature trade initiative, the Trans-Pacific Partnership. As for the Senate, Harry Reid recently announced his opposition, and the administration doesn't seem willing to apply the political muscle needed to get it through. The news media have also reported that "the tea party" is rising up in opposition to TPA. They point to a handful of organizations that, using the party label, have argued that free trade agreements are part of the president's globalist agenda to enact "Obamatrade." The truth is that the tea party movement has consistently driven the Republican Party involution has com-unconditional support of free trade. The evidence is there for anyone willing to look.

We have two terms worth of voting records to help us understand the impact of the tea party on trade politics in Washington. The "tea party class" of House and Senate freshmen from 2010 voted strongly in favor of the last three trade agreements, along with the rest of the Republican caucus. More importantly, members most closely aligned with the tea party movement have been much more likely than other Republicans to support opening the U.S. market with-out the need for reciprocal trade agreements. These members stood out last term for their principled opposition to popular bipartisan trade initia-tives. Members like Tim Huelskamp, Justin Amash, Jeff Flake and Mike Lee broke with their Republican colleagues when Congress voted to expand subsidies concagues when congress voted to expand subsidies from the Export-Import Bank, to impose tariffs on all goods from China under the pretext of currency rebal-ancing, and to exacerbate protectionist antidumping laws. They were joined by conservative groups like FreedomWorks and the Club for Growth that condemned these programs as harmful corporate welfare and economic interventionism.

That's not to say that there aren't Republicans that actively oppose trade. Late last year some 27 Republicans signed a pair of letters opposing trade promotion authority. The leaders of the effort, such as Rep. Walter Jones, have opposed trade expansion for decades. However, some of the signatories, such as Reps. Michele Bachmann, Paul Broun, Louie Gohmert, and Steve Stockman, are members of the Congressional Tea Party Caucus. These members appear to have accepted the argu-ment that trade promotion authority gives undue power to President Obama. Protectionists at the American Jobs Alliance have relied on the power of an anti-Obama message in their campaign to paint free trade agreements as part of a power-grab by the president to npose his anti-American "Obamatrade" agenda.

This attempt to turn free trade into a referendum on Obama is frustrating and nonsensical. Republicans have been begging the president to request trade promotion authority for years over staunch opposition from House and Senate Democrats. Right now, Presi-dent Obama's own disinterest is the strongest impediment to his trade agenda.

Adding to the confusion, some news sources have also cited the anti-trade views of conservative activ-ists like Judson Phillips of the for-profit "Tea Party ists like Judson Phillips of the for-profit "lea Party Nation," and Phyllis Schlafty of the paleoconservative Eagle Forum as evidence of the tea party movement's impact on trade policy. But the position and rhetoric of these groups doesn't match up with the ideological character of the broader tea party movement. Rather, they seem to embody a lingering strain of economic nationalism that fueled grassroots conservative move-ments in previous decades. ments in previous decades.

The tea party movement is quintessentially dif-ferent. The energy motivating conservative grassroots today is fueled by a free market populism that has no while some of its members may be sympathetic to the idea that every widget and customer service call should be "Made in America," the tea party movement has demonstrated itself to be more focused on shrinking the size and scope of the federal government. Tariffs are taxes, subsidies are spending, and using regulation to help industry is the heart of cronyism

The argument for supporting trade promotion authority, then, is quite simple. Free trade means removing harmful policies. Trade agreements are an effective way to make that happen, and trade promo-tion authority is meant to facilitate those agreements. Republicans courting the tea party vote would do well to look at the evidence and fight for free trade, rather than obstruct it. They should fight against pro-tectionists in both parties who would weigh down TPA with special-interest deals or wasteful entitlement programs, and insist that trade agreements not include mandates on nontrade issues, such as environmental protection and labor rules. Doing so would further the cause of free trade while taking a stand against Democrats in Congress and the White House. Surely that's a strategy that Republican insiders, genuine tea party activists, and the broader conservative base can all get behind.

Ag census tells potential of rural US

By Ag Secretary Tom Vilsack Census of Agriculture Results Tell

Story of Unlimited Potential in Rural rica This week, USDA released pre liminary data from the 2012 Census of Agriculture that provides a snapshot of a rural America that remains stable in the face of difficult economic times. While the data do not paint a perfect picture, they do tell a story of the unlimited potential and growing opportunity in modern rural America. Census data indicate that the loss of farmland has slowed significantly since 2007, which means that while a total of 72 million acres of farmland have been lost since the 1982 census, we have begun to stem the tide. New tools in the 2014 Farm Bill should help to further slow and perhaps even reverse this trend me areas of the country. The results reinforce what we have known for many years: the farm population is aging. While that is a concern the data also show that the number of young farmers increased slightly and the number of minority farm and ranch principal operators increased dramatically, reflecting the changing face of America as a whole. We are hopeful that USDA policies that attract and retain the next generation of talent into rural America will help to continue this trend. The number of small and very large farms held steady. This reflects, in part, USDA's recent push to help farmers and ranchers diversify into new mar-kets, including local and regional food systems, specialty crops and organic production, and expand market access for American farm products overseas. The 2014 Farm Bill will do even more to expand support for beginning farm-ers and new market opportunities for all producers.

At the same time, we cannot ignore that devastating weather events increas-ingly impacts producers' bottom lines. The prolonged drought and lack of disaster assistance over the past several years have made it even tougher for live-stock producers and mid-sized farms to survive and thrive, and the data reflects that reality.

We must do more to protect the middle-farms and ranches that are middle-sized and mid-income ensure that they can access resources and protections to help them thrive. Here too, the farm bill will provide much-needed relief and stability through guaranteed disaster assistance. More than anything, the census illustrates the power of data. Data from the census helps to inform smart policymaking that makes life easier for farmers and ranchers. It helps to stand up programs and initiatives that benefit young and beginning farmers and ranch ers just starting out; improve access to sources that help women, veteran and minority farmers and ranchers thrive; and help farmers and ranchers diversify into new markets, including local and there is still more work to do. In order to survive, American agriculture must continue to embrace innovation and diversity in crop production, markets, people and land use across the agricul-tural sector.

White House's war on the worker

It's hard to deny that the Obama administration has declared a war on the American worker. One need look no further than two recent reports from the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office. In a report released earlier this month, the CBO found that Obamacare will reduce the size of the American labor force by 2.5 million full-time workers over the next decade. Mean while, in a separate study, the CBO found that the president's goal of raising the minimum wage to $10.10 per hour could kill up to 1 million jobs. When the labor force is about to do a vanishing act to the tune of 2.5 million workers – and an additional 1 million jobs are potentially on the chopping block - the rational thing to do would be to change or avoid the policies that are to blame. Unfortunately, that sort of common sense is in short supply at this White House, where inconvenient facts have little sway over political priorities. In fact, the White House has doubled down on these policies, and even gone so far as to tell the American people that fewer workers and reduced hours are actually good things. To quote the top White House economist, working less to maintain Obamacare benefits "might be a better option than what they had before. It's a sad day when the White House and congressional Democrats are celebrating the prospect of a smaller American labor force. Sadder, still, when jobs being people on account of

and political and pointcal posturing. But these are the realities of the Obama administration and the policies it promotes – policies that are decreasing opportunities for Americans and increasing their dependency on the federal government, policies that, collec-tively, amount to a war on the American worker worker.

I've met and corresponded with some of these workers – workers like the single mother I met in Tyler and the teacher from Irving, both of whom have had their hours cut as a result of Obamacare. They recognize something that seems to be utterly lost on this administration: Work is not just about money and income. It's about dignity, self-reliance and self-respect.

In other words, jobs are important in ways that extend well beyond their immediate economic value. Opportunities for work have social and moral value. They promote strong citizens and, by extension, a strong country. Yet, under the guise of liberal compassion, the policies of the Obama administration have consistently rejected this reality There's nothing compassionate about deliberately making Americans more dependent on the federal government, nor is there compassion in robbing them of paid hours or incentivizing them to leave the labor force entirely.

A truly compassionate agenda would seek to expand opportunity rather than dependency. It would place a higher value on the dignity of work and the self-reliance of American workers For that matter, a truly compassionate agenda would aim to dismantle Obam acare and replace it with patient-centered alternatives that encourage both work and job creation. The last five years have been a policy experiment in the exact opposite. The result has been a historically sluggish recovery, a decline in median household income and less economic opportunity for Americans. As Republi-cans, it does us no good to simply point to these facts and say, "I told you so." The status quo is not written in stone

With the right mix of economic policies, America can return to the strong growth rates and robust job creation it enjoyed during the 1980s and 1990s. I urge the president to work with us toward a future full of opportunities for Americans. This is the America that was handed down to us by our forefa-thers, and it's the America we must pass on to our children and grandchildren.

To Our Friends:

Again in a very short time we face some very important choices to form the future of our county. The most important of these, in my opinion, is the selection of our county judge. The man in this position to lead our county into the next decade must possess many attributes such as:

• A humble and compassionate attitude and a thorough knowledge of all the problems facing our young people. A determination to strictly regulate all businesses selling alcohol that are coming soon.

· A thorough knowledge of all laws and the working of our law enforcement.

· A firsthand knowledge of the finances of our county and its needs and its ability to pay for them.

· A true desire to move our county forward at every opportunity whether in moral convictions, religious freedom, or financial opportunities.

• Maybe the most important, the ability to work with county & city officials, Fire Department, Ambulance service, etc. in case of a disaster.

It is our belief that Randy Bond possesses all these qualifications. He will get our vote for County Judge. Maxine and I urge you to join us in voting for Randy Bond for County Judge of Donley County. Thank you very much,

Hi, gang! Remember to vote. This is a very important election! Google Wallet is a handy fea-ture that allows you to store all of your loyalty shopper cards in one virtual place, make purchases online via stored credit and debit cards and even send money securely to friends and family. While using the app, all of your financial information is pro-tected and encrypted and the Google Wallet Purchase Protection covers 100 percent of eligible unauthorized Google Wallet transactions. While this Google feature is both popular and useful, the feature has been exploited recently by scammers hoping to steal money from unsus-pecting users by creating fraudulent invoices that look similar to Google Wallet Checkout invoices A typical scam might look like this: You are looking to purchase a used car and find one online for an exceptionally good price (almost too-good-to-be-true?). You contact the seller (the scammer) and he or she suggests that you use Google Wallet to make the purchase because it will be protected. Next, they send you a fake invoice which looks like a Google Checkout invoice, instructing you how much to pay and how to make the payment. However, the transaction is fraudulent and has nothing to do with Google Checkout The invoice will instruct you to make a payment often via Western Union, MoneyGram or bank transfer. The reality is that there is no car, you are not using Google Wallet and the scammer succeeds in stealing your money. Here are some important red flags regarding the Google Wallet scam: Google Checkout currently supports payments made by credit or debit cards only. If a seller suggests you pay via wire or bank transfer with your Checkout account, don't proceed with the transaction. It's likely fraudulent. Scammers may reference cer-

in Asia are trying to trick you into paying a premium for your website domain names. Don't fall for these scare tactics. How the Scam Works: You receive an email addressed to the owner of your company. It appears to be from an Asian domain registration service. The email says that a third party company has requested to register your business's brand name as a website domain in China or elsewhere in Asia. According to the email, the "domain regis-trar" realized your company owns that brand name. And they decided to do you a favor and offer to register the domain for you instead of this other company. The catch? There is no competing business, and the price to pur-chase the domain is much higher than you would pay elsewhere. Often, the email sender isn't even an actual domain registration business. He/she simply purchases the domain elsewhere for a few dollars and immediately sells it back to the victim for an inflated price. Tips for Avoiding Domain Name Scams: Many businesses take a "buy it and forget it" approach to their webiste domain names, and scammers love to prey on that lack of knowledge. Here's a few tips for better managing this part of your business. Know your top level domains. Scammers are using these scare tactics as a way to sell unpopular top level domains, such as ".org cn," at inflated prices. If your company has interests in Asia, you may want to consider purchasing URLs that end in the country codes, such as .jp (Japan), .kr (South Korea) or .sg (Singapore). Check for high prices Domain registration shouldn't vary wildy between registrars. Select a single business to register all your domain names. Another popular domain name scam involves fake invoices for domains you never pur-chased. Avoid falling for this trick by selecting a single provider to register your domains and maintain one account. It's also a good idea to have more than one contact person on your registration. Watch for poor grammar and spelling. Scam emails often are riddled with typos. Ignore calls for immediate action. Scammers try to get you to act before you think by creating a sense of urgency. Don't fall for it.

AUSTIN - Preservation Texas has issued a call for nominations for its 2014 list of Texas' Most Endangered Historic Places and is asking Panhandle residents to help identify threatened historic resources by submitting nominations.

Since the program was initi-ated in 2003, the list of Texas' Most Endangered Historic Places has played a vital role in preserving the rich character, identity and heritage of our communities. A wide range of sites will be considered, from commercial, residential, public and religious buildings, to neighbor-hoods, bridges, monuments, and landscapes. The deadline for nomi-nations is March 21, 2014. "Each year more and more of the state's historic properties fall victim to commercial development, neglect or suburban sprawl," said Charlene Orr, president of Preserva-tion Texas. Taylors Gaines drives in to the goal during the Lady Broncos Regional Semi-Final game agaisnt Sundown at the Texas Dome in Levelland.

Lady Broncos runners up at regional tournament

andy Anderberg Friday night the Lady Broncos experienced a big high as they defeated Sundown in the Regional Semi-Final game at the Texas Dome in Levelland.

The ladies put together a great game and won 56-53, which put them in the Regional Final game against Plains on Saturday. The Plains Cowgirls proved to be a tough competitor and the Lady Broncos finished short of their goal at 41-49. On Friday, the Lady Broncos flexed their muscles against Sun-down jumping out to a four-point lead after the first eight minutes. The advantage the Lady Broncos gained in the first quarter proved to be the points they needed to get the win as Sundown matched the Lady Broncos nearly point for point in the final three quarters of play. The two Tay-lors, DeGrate and Gaines, finished in double figures with 18 and 17 points to lead the Lady Broncos.

defensive rebounds to record a double double. Camra Smith hit three three-pointers for nine, and Ryann Starnes added six. Deborah Howard, Brittney Braim, and Skyler White each helped with two.

The win put the Lady Broncos in the finals where they struggled with cold shooting against a good Plains team, Clarendon trailed Plains by eleven points at the break, but they were still very much in the game

The Lady Broncos were able to come out in the third period and fight back to outscore the Cowgirls by five points in the third quarter of play. Foul trouble hit the Lady Broncos as Gaines and DeGrate went over the limit and time ran out on their comeback. But the Lady Broncos never quit until the final buzzer, which has been typical of their determination all season.

Starnes finished with twelve points and Gaines added ten. DeGrate and Smith had five, while

I thought the girls still really competed and played hard, but we got in foul trouble early and some girls had to sit for a while.

"We did not shoot the ball well, only shooting 23 percent. Overall, things just did not go our way. However, I am so very proud of these young ladies. Extension offers continuing ed at ranch, farm expo

WICHITA FALLS - The Texas A&M AgriLife Extension Service will conduct a multi-agency pri-vate pesticide applicator continuing education units program March 5-6 during the annual Wichita Falls Ranch and Farm Expo.

The event will be held in the JS Bridwell Agricultural Center, which is part of the MPEC at 1000 5th St. in Wichita Falls. The cost is $25, which entitles participants to attend a single session or both sessions. Lunch will be provided on March 5 only.

Private applicators will be able to receive up to eight Texas Depart-ment of Agriculture credits. Five units – four general, one laws and regulations - will be offered on March 5. Three units – one drift man-agement, one laws and regulations, will be offered on March 6. The Oklahoma Department of Agriculture also has approved five continuing education units in the area of demonstration and research with four in agricultural plant and one in aquatic

The March 5 program begins with breakfast from 7-8 a.m. and "Staying on Top in a Changing Industry," a presentation by Tim Niedecken, executive director of association services for Texas South-Cattle Raisers Association western in Ft. Worth.

Registration starts at 8 a.m. and Wichita County Judge Woodrow "Woody" Gossom will open the program at 8:40 a.m. with a welcome. He will be followed by Ron Wool-ley, AgriLife Extension regional program leader from Stephenville, Management, Gerald Hobson, who will present "Howdy: Focus of AgriLife in Texas." Peaster

Film festival for Panhandle youth brings Hollywood to Shamrock

It's not often our community can share a slice of life with Hollywood, but our creative residents who are 18 and younger now have the opportunity to be big silver screen movie makers. The Texas Theater Film Festival.

to be held in Shamrock this fall, will be a fun exhibition event of movingimage productions created by Panhandle young people at a working movie theater. The event will also include educational presentations by cinema professionals.

In addition to giving area kids a fun on-going project, the process of creating their own movie encourages them to apply concepts they learn at school and expand their ability to use new technologies beyond emailing, texting and playing games.

Shot clinic to be held in Clarendon twice in March

The Texas Department of State Health Services will hold two immunization clinics in Clarendon during the month of March Clinics will be held March 6 and 20 at the TDSHS office at Five Medical Drive with the first 15 clients being seen from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. and from 1:00 to 3:30 p.m.

All clinic times subject to change or cancellation due to weather conditions or unforeseen scheduling conflicts.

The idea to develop and host the festival originated from numerous conversations Texas Theater owners David and Georgann Rion, have had with kids from throughout the region who continually said, "There's nothing to do around here." "These conversations with them caused us to consider what we could do to address that issue and help them," David Rion said. "Since we have the theater, creating and hosting a film festival for all Panhandle kids was the best and most logical way we could help. The familiar phrase, 'there's nothing to do,' that is voiced by many young people in the Panhandle simply will no longer be accurate. Movie development has many phases, so the creative kids who choose to participate will always have something positive and productive to do." "This new creative project is intended to encourage all youth in the Panhandle to apply their existing knowledge, skills and abilities, and expand the concepts they are learning in the classroom to new situations," said Georgann Rion. "Opportunities for growth and development help young people become productive adults

Few would argue that today's youth need to have tangible skills is using the technologies are now a driving-force in our society. The process of making a movie encompasses a wealth of activities that directly relate to many academic disciplines. Writing a movie is essentially the same as writing a story and will help develop writing skills; planning a movie will give them tangible experience in project planning and development; capturing the images necessary will give them increased exposure to visual arts; and editing their production will increase their competence in computer use.

Because of the advent of smart phones and personal computers, most young people now have access to the tools necessary to create moving-images using video technology.

Since this is a new event, the festival's schedule is still being developed. All the information interested youth need to being working on their creative production is now available on the festival's wel val's web site at: texastheater.info/festival

Asking for Your Support

I would like to take this opportunity to say "Thank you" for all the support I have gathered over the last month. Win lose, or draw, I realize that more important than any election, I have made new friends throughout this vast and wide place that we call home - Donley County. I realize I have not had the opportunity to meet every single person nor answer every single question, but I will always be here to help and to answer any questions you might have.

I would like to once again ask you for your vote in the Primary Election on March 4. I have dedicated 36 years of my life to the service of families, children, and the community at large. I am already acquainted with what it takes to perform the duties necessary. No other candidate has a better working knowledge of county operations and the county budget than I do, and I will make it my absolute full time job to serve you.

Good leaders are always great simplifiers who can cut through argument, debate, and doubt to offer a solution everybody can understand.

Thank you once again for your ideas, your support, and your kind words.
