A Bryan Police spokeswoman told the ENTERPRISE late Tuesday that the bodies have not yet been posi-tively identified, but they suspect they are those of the Devins. Reports coming out of Bryan say officials may have to use dental records to officially identify the remains. KBTX has allowed the Entere to use its report on the tragedy, which is now reprinted in part:

Brown told them a black man he knew as "tear drop" left him with the car. He was arrested for Unauthorized Use of a Motor Vehicle after police said the motel manager saw him drive the SUV on to the property. He is in the Brazos County Jail under $150,000 bond. According to the Texas Department of Criminal Justice,

Brown had been released from prison Friday after serving a 15-year ntence for aggravated robbery out of Brazos County. Monday morning, Bryan Police originally told News 3 that no one was home when the fire started As of 4:55 a.m., they had the fire contained to the house and under control.

As they later combed through the rubble, they found one body in one portion of the home. A later search of the house yielded a second body in a different part of the home. BPD says the bodies were badly burned and that dental records

Falling for April Fools

Personal experiences racked up across three quarters of a century—including yips and yaps at lecterns spanning five decades—offer positive proof that many times, utter silence is preferable to spoken

I was reminded of this age-old truth the other day when my Uncle Mort called. Upon his mention of a new-found interest in ornithology, the call-received in the morning hours of April 1--likely meant my 101-year-old relative was up to his old tricks---"spoofing it up" on April Fools' Day.

Interrupting him was as tempting as a clearance sale on banana splits, a promise of bonus airline miles, or biggest-ever senior citizen discounts. Assuming this was his annual BIG JOKE for the holiday, it was little short of miraculous that I remained silent. *****

Maybe I was stunned to hear Uncle Mort pronounce "ornithology" with both clarity and unbridled excitement. What sparked this new-found interest in birds? It couldn't have involved "tweeting," since he stated that if God had intended us to "tweet," we'd all look like "Tweety Bird."

Perhaps his mind was jarred with the long-ago memory of Mr. Wallace Wimple, the little mush mouthed guy on Fibber McGee and Molly's radio show. (Wimple, always the patient listener, worked in mentions of his every-present "bird book." A standard line on each episode: "That ain't the way I heerd it, Johnny.") Or maybe Mort was prepping me for the old story of two buzzards, flying lazily aloft on a hot summer day. One of the buzzards said, "Patience, heck, let's kill sumthin'." Another possibility involved the two feisty magpies in "Heckle and Jeckle" cartoons seen in olden days at the picture show. Or, maybe Sesame Street's "Big Bird" was in play.

Okay, I admit it -- my mind was largely in neutral when Uncle Mort said his interest centers specifically on crows, and how they've developed New England accents. I was hooked, eager for him to fill in several additional blanks.....

Pray tell, what was Uncle Mort talking about? Since his prejudices have been stacking up for decades, I figured crows with New England accents would rile him from the git-go.

Mort has little use for Yankees-a name mentioned regularly in his diatribes against the government. He's long been opposed to southern migration of northerners, and is on record supporting turning 'em back when they reach the Oklahoma/ Texas border.

"Clearly, the feds are a full 180 degrees off target: they're guarding the wrong river," he's opined...

He said his "study" began one winter day when he saw a flock of crows pecking away at road kill. (What with insects, as well as vegetation provided by Mother Earth in short supply, they "made do" with this sustenance)

Mort claims he was mystified by several crows taken out by speeding trucks, but flew to safety when autos approached. Why, he wondered, were they not "spooked" by the 18-wheelers, but flew quickly away from the four-wheelers?

He returned to the scene several days in a row "Finally, the mystery was solved," he bragged.. *****

Balderdash, thought I. There had to be an April Fool's joke in there somewhere, but if so, it was wellhidder

"It all came into focus when I realized the crows stationed a 'look-out' in the tall oak tree alongside the road," he said. "The 'look-out' provided ample warning when cars approached, and his buddies took flight.'

"Why didn't he warn them when he saw trucks coming?" I asked

"That's a reasonable question, nephew, and logical as well," he answered. "The same one occurred to me, and I'm glad it did, 'cause if it hadn't, I might never have realized crows have a New England accent." Okay, so I was "bumfuzzled" to the max. "When four-wheelers approached, the 'look-out crow cut loose with loud 'caw, caw, caws'," Mort said. "Too bad the 'look-out' couldn't say 'truck, truck, truck',

It could have been worse, I thought. At least he didn't ask if I had been second in line for breakfast. 'Remember," he warned, "The early bird gets the worm, but the second mouse gets the cheese." Again, I felt like a 14-carat bird-brain, falling for one of Uncle Mort's favorite pastimes-fooling me... *****

Wealth inequality a danger to USA

current eco-

distribution of Income inequality continues to increase rapidly. It just as rapidly continues to grow as a contentious and increasingly major issue in American political and economic discourse. Correspondingly, there has been a radical and furious pushback from the right, particularly the right-wing tea party extremists. Additionally, a few conservatives argue that focusing on inequality is unwise because taxing high incomes will cripple economic growth. Some even argue that it's unfair, that people should be allowed to keep what they earn. And some of the more rancid right wingers argue that it's un-American — that we've always celebrated those who acquire wealth, and that it actually vio-lates our national creed to suggest that some people control too large a share of the wealth

the wealth. Actually, they're right. Imagine that. I agree! Seriously, would a real American actually say this? "The absence of effective State, and, espe-cially, national, restraint upon unfair money-getting has tended to create a small class of enormously wealthy and economically powerful men, whose chief object is to hold and increase their power," and then follow that statement with a call for "a graduated inheritance tax on big fortunes... increasing rapidly in amount with the size of the estate.

Who would make such an outra-geous statement? Surprisingly, to most current Republicans, it was Theodore Roosevelt, in his famous 1910 New Nationalism speech. During this time of his life and political career Teddy was a "moderate" Republican, trying to usurp power from the conservatives in the GOP. Hmmm? Can Republicans actu-ally think like this and still be considered a Republican? Not in today's political Truth be known, in the early 20th century, many prominent, conservative Americans cautioned about the dangers of massive wealth concentration, and urged that U.S. tax policy be used to curb the growth of excessive riches. In yet another example, in 1919, the great thinker and economist Irving Fisher - whose theory of "debt deflation," remains essential to understanding our nomic troubles, dedicated his presidential . address to the American Economic 10 10 the quick, Association the dead, largely cautioning against the effects of an & fred "undemocratic wealth." He also spoke sympathetically to proposals created to limit inherited wealth through the heavy taxation of estates

The concept of regulating the concentration of wealth, especially inherited wealth, wasn't just idle talk. In his landmark book, "Capital in the Twenty. First Century," the economist Thomas Piketty points out that America - which d an income tax in 1913 and an inctit inheritance tax in 1916 - led the way in the increase of progressive taxation. that it was "far out in front" of Europe Mr. Piketty even goes so far as to say that "confiscatory taxation of excessive incomes" (that is, in Texan speak, taxation whose goal was to reduce income and wealth inequalities, rather than to raise money for the government) was an "American invention.

Surprisingly, this "American inven-tion" had deep historical roots in the Jeffersonian vision of an egalitarian society of small farmers. In 1910, when Teddy Roosevelt gave his speech, many intelligent Americans realized not just that extreme inequality was making nonsense of that vision, but that America was in danger of turning into a society dominated by hereditary wealth — that the New World was seriously at risk of turning into Old Europe. They became energized and forceful when arguing that public policy should seek to limit inequality for both political and eco-nomic reasons, that great wealth connomic reasons, that great wealth concen-trated in the hands of a few presented a clear and present danger to democracy. So, how did these viewpoints not only get driven out of the mainstrea but come to be completely rejected ainstream,

Remember how inequality and treated in the 2012 presidential elec-tion? Republicans claimed that President Obama was unsympathetic to the rich "If one's priority is to punish highly successful people, then vote for the Democrats," exclaimed Mitt Ronney.

Democrats heatedly (and untruthfully) denied the charge. Yet, Mr. Romney was, in effect, accusing President Obama of thinking like Teddy Roosevelt. How in the world did that kind of thinking become an unforgivable political sin? We sometimes hear the claim that concentrated wealth is no longer an important issue, because the big winners in today's economy are self-made folks who owe their position at the top of the ladder to hard work, not inheritance.

Yet that view is long out of date. New work by economists Emmanuel Saez and Gabriel Zucman discovered that the share of wealth held at the very top

— the richest 0.1 percent of the popula-tion — has doubled since the 1980s, and is now as high as it was when Theodore

Roosevelt and Irving Fisher issued their warnings. We don't know how much of that interesting to look at the Forbes list of the wealthiest Americans. According to a recent publication, about a third of the top 50 inherited their large fortunes will probably be leaving large fortunes of people acquiring great wealth is now the U.S. Congress. We may not yet be a society with a hereditary aristocracy of wealth, but, if nothing changes, we'll evolve into that kind of society over the next decade or two.

The demonization of anyone who talks about the dangers of concentrated wealth is founded on a misunderstanding of both the past and the present. Such discourse isn't un-American: it's very much in the American tradition. Importantly, it's not at all immaterial to the contemporary world. The question is:

who will be this generation's Theodore Roosevelt? Who has the moral courage to address and correct a very serious threat to America?

New apps connect CHS parents

Clarendon High School today punced the release of a new, school-wide mobile communications application from School Connect, leading developer of mobile applications for K-12 school systems and institutions.

and institutions. Brought to CHS by Jostens, the free mobile app is available for Apple and Android mobile devices and keeps the entire school community connected to the school's information they need in one convenient location on users' mobile devices.

Understanding the busy schedules of parents, students, and patrons, the school's official mobile app enables smartphone and tablet users to keep track of important school information and receive notices from the school, faculty, and staff, all in real-time via push and email messaging. The mobile app enhances student/community engagement by providing users with access to information like school activities, grade books, notes from teachers, athletic schedules and scores, lunch menus, and school calendars when and where they choose to view.

"Clarendon High School's official mobile app empowers anyone in the community to stay connected with the information they want and need right on their mobile devices," said Larry Jeffers, Clarendon High School Principal.

"The release of this app for Clarendon High School is an example of our commitment to provide our community members all of the district's information conveniently and easily, while making it more accessible than ever. We are excited about how our school's app will lead to a stronger, more connected school

The School Connect mobile app is a secure and flexible communication platform that allows CHS to easily manage, control and deliver content that enhances the school-to-community communications process. Features for Clarendon High School's official mobile app include: Push and email messaging from both the district and school site levels; GPS mapping and navigation; School calendars; Online and grade book access; Tap screens for email and phone for district staff and board of education members; Multiple language options, including Spanish; and Lunch menus, athletic information, and much more

The Clarendon High School Connect app is now available to download and use for free for Apple and Android users

Antidepressants such as venlafaxine (Effexor), amitriptyline (Elavil), or fluoxetine (Prozac) may be associated with ear ringing. There are currently no cures for tinnitus. A hearing aid or a masking device are options that may help some people who suffer from this condition.

The National Institutes of Health (NIH) is planning to start a clinical trial to evaluate the effects of a device that may help reduce ringing of the ears, a condition that is medically known as tinnitus. A device known as the "Serenity System" is a device that will send signals in the nervous system to change the signals in the brain that may reduce or stop tinnitus completely. The US National Institute on Deafness and Other Communication Disorders (NIDCD) is funding this study that will be conducted in four centers across the United States.

Bound for Regionals

Hedley High School Tennis eted in District Tennis Friday in Borger. Having one of the only complete teams in the district, Hedley excelled.

Advancing to Regionals were the first place boys doubles team consisting of Denver Chambless and Kyle Lindsey, second place boys doubles team of Adam Bernal and Frank Ramirez, first place mixed doubles team of Wyatt Wheatly and Kati Adams, and the second place mixed doubles team of Bailey Wood and Gilbert Hjelmar.

Placing third, just shy of a trip to regionals, was Kylie Wood, plac-ing third in girls singles, followed by Becca Butler placing fourth in girls singles. Placing third and fourth in boys singles were Clay King and Raul Carrillo. Also competing at the district meet were Emily Mackey and Leslie Leal in girls doubles as well as Irene Marinelli and Kristen Liner. Hedley Owls tennis is coached by Garrett Bains

CHS tennis competes in Panhandle tourney

Several Broncos and Lady Broncos competed in Panhandle at the tennis tournament playing doubles.

The team of Zack LaRoe and Brandon Miller won their first match 8-3, but lost the second and third matches at 2-6 and 3-6. Junior Ceniceros and Chance Lockhart shut out their opponent in the first round at 8-0 but fell short in the next two at 4-6 and 3-6.

Savannah Topper and McKayla King won 8-4 in their first match and lost the second 5-8, and Phara Berry and Haley Ferguson won the first match at 8-1 and lost the second at 2-8.

"I thought we played well overall," coach Brandt Lockhart said. "We ran into some very tough oppo-nents in the second round."

St. Mary's Church BBQ sets record

St. Mary's Catholic Church held its 18th annual St. Mary's Day Barbecue Dinner in Sunday and set a new record for the fundraiser.

The event, held at the Donley County Activity Center, hit an all-time high by serving 468 plates of barbecue and all the trimmings. This topped last year's dinner by more than 100 plates.

Men, women, and children of the parish hauled tables and equip-ment and cooked for two days to prepare and serve the meal. The beef and ribs were prepared in true Clarendon tradition, by slow cooking in metal boxes over mesquite wood. The barbecue sauce recipe has been used for community events since the 50s when the Lions and Jaycees cooked for the 4th of July celebration. The meal was completed with all fresh made red beans, cole slaw, potato salad, homemade bread, and desserts

True country music was provided by Ed Montana and Dianne Detten with 13-year-old Ethan Wilkinson stepping in to help out. The event included a silent auction and country store, but more impor-tantly it has become a tradition for many families to spend a Sunday afternoon in April enjoying good food and fellowship. Next year's barbecue will be held April 12, 2015.

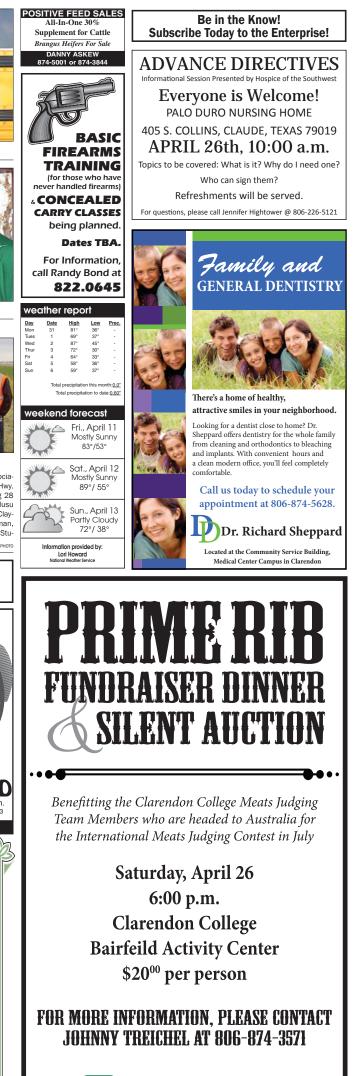

CCC's Friday night scrambles to begin lerberg

The Friday night nine-hole scrambles have begun at the Clarendon Country Club. Friday night's scramble consisted only of two teams with four players on each team. The team of Joe Minkley, Kevin Wood, Gene Rogers, and Gayle Rogers turned in a six under par, and the team of Chris Lindquist, Redell Johnston, Norm Hagood, and Sherol Johnston came in at five under for the new five the nine holes. The nine hole scrambles start at 6:00 p.m. each Friday night, and you are encouraged to enter by five that evening.

Broncos slam Follett, West Texas High

By Sandy Anderberg The Bronco baseball team faced off against Follett last week and came from behind to pull out an important win according to head coach Brad Elam.

"It was a very exciting game as both teams played well," Elam said. "Follett jumped out to the early 1-0 lead, but we were able to tie it in the second when a Chance Lockhart groundout scored Zack LaRoe from third '

Follett went on to score two in the third inning to take a 3-1 lead. The Broncos posted one run in the fifth when Brandon Miller singled home Israel Osburn with two outs. But the Broncos were not finished and slammed in three runs in the sixth. "With two outs, Charles Mason singled home Keandre Cortez and Lockhart and Osburn would later score to make it 5-3," Elam said. "Caleb Cobb, who came on in relief in the sixth closed the door with two strikeouts to end the game. I was pleased with our offensive approach. We knew the Follett pitcher was good, so we did a good job of adjust-ing. Our pitching was superb."

Senior Chance McAnear started the game and pitched five strong innings giving up only three hits and striking out nine. Cobb struck out three hitters in the two closing innings.

"Our infield played really well

On Friday, the Broncos traveled to Stinnett to take on the WT Commanches and defeated them 13-7.

According to Elam, the Broncos did not begin the way they wanted to. "We started off really slow and got behind early," Elam said. "But we were able to claw away at the lead before we took the lead for good in the fourth. We spotted them three runs in the first and another three in the second to go down 3-6." The Broncos regrouped well and took control of the game adding three in the second inning at their at bat, two in the third, and four in the fourth and sixth innings to put the game away.

"McAnear came on in relief and pitched another good game," Elam Offensively, McAnear scored one run, drove two in and got on base five times. Bryce Hatley had two hits, scored one run, and drove in one and Cobb had an RBI double and scored a run. JoJo Cartwright had three hits including a double and LaRoe had a double, an RBI, and scored two runs. Lockhart had two hits, one of which was a double, scored one run and had an RBI. Mason and Nick Shadle each drove in a run and Miller had an RBI single and scored.

The Broncos will play at Claude Tuesday, April 15, at 4:00 p.m. and host Gruver on Saturday, April 19, at 1:00 p.m.
