Meter tampering drawing citations

City Hall is reminding citizens this week that it is illegal to tamper with a water meter and doing so can result in a fine.

Four citations have been issued in July for violating Section 13.03.006 of the Code of Ordinances. In each case, the residents' water had been turned off for nonpayment and the residents turned the water back on.

Even paying water customers can be cited for turning the city's water meter on or off. City officials encourage everyone to have a licensed plumber install cutoff valve on the residents' side of the meter to be able to turn their water on or off when needed without having to get a public works employee to do it.

Sen. Seliger to lead education study

AUSTIN – On Friday, State Sen. Kel Seliger (R-Amarillo) was appointed by Lieutenant Governor Dewhurst to serve as co-chair of the Joint Interim Committee to Study Education for a Skilled Workforce.

The committee will study public school career and technology education (CTE) programs – in particular how CTE programs can better align with those offered in Texas colleges and with the needs of Texas employers.

"Education is all workforce preparation and life preparation," Seliger said. "My hope is that the work of this committee will help to further integrate K-16 with the demands of our growing and progressive state. I look forward to working with co-chair Representative Murphy, as well as leaders in education and workforce development and utilization."

Sen. Seliger is Chair of the Senate Higher Education Committee and has been a leader on public education policy issues since his election to the Texas Senate in 2004.

Members of the Clarendon College meats team are world champions in meat judging after competing in Australia last week.

Scotta Faulkenberry of Stephenville, Texas, and Cody Shannon of Royse City, Texas, along with two students from Garden City Community College in Kansas, placed first over 13 other international teams from Australian universities, the United States, Japan, South Korea and Indonesia.

The All American team placed first with 4385 out of a possible 5020 points to win the competition and the Roy McDonald Shield at the Australia International Meat Conference last week. The team bested the second place team from Charles Sturt University Wagga by 46 points. The University of New England placed third.

Morgan Boyer, of Wallisville, Texas, also represented Clarendon College at the contest and served as an alternate on the All American team.

Individually, Scotta placed 3rd High Individual, Cody placed 4th High Individual, and Morgan placed in the top 15.

In the competition, the students are required to judge beef, lamb and pork carcasses and primals, along with identifying a range of beef primals and beef, lamb and pork retail cuts. The judging of carcasses and primals is based on yield, muscling and quality to evaluate their retail value.

All American Team - Coach Tate Corliss, Morgan Boyer, Cody Shannon, Skyler Glenn, Scotta Faulkenberry, Alan Caro, and Coach Clint Alexandar.

"I am extremely proud of these students," Clarendon College Coach Tate Corliss said. "They represented Clarendon College and the United States at the international level and preformed with excellence and humility."

"We are so thankful for all the support that help make this trip possible," Morgan said. "We appreciate our coach, the College, and our Australian hosts."

Everyone at Clarendon College is extremely proud of this group and their coach.

"Scotta, Morgan, and Cody brought a tremendous amount of pride to Clarendon College and I am also thankful for the tremendous support we received from the College and community," CC Livestock Judging Coach and Director of Agriculture Johnny Treichel said.

"This group has exceeded expectations all year," CC President Dr. Robert Riza said. "What a great achievement to finish their careers at Clarendon."

The two Garden City Community College students, Alan Caro and Skyler Glenn, placed first and eighth, respectively, in the individual competition.

"The caliber of this year's participants showed the passion that young people have for the meat and livestock industry and the enthusiasm that they have for driving the industry forward into the future," outgoing ICMJ President and General Manager of Kerwee Lot Feeders Brad Robinson said. "The international contingent, with teams from the US, Japan, Korea and Indonesia, allowed students to interact and learn from some of Australia's major trading partners, building networks for the future."

Faulkenberry, Shannon, and Boyer will all attend Texas Tech University in the fall.

Enterprise wins national, regional press awards

THE CLARENDON ENTERPRISE has been recognized on both the national and regional levels this month for its work on open government issues, column writing, and editorials.

The local newspaper was recently notified that it has received a third place award and two honorable mentions from the National Newspaper Association, awards that will be presented during the NNA conference this October in San Antonio.

The ENTERPRISE won third place for Best Editorial Page among daily and non-daily papers of circulations less than 6,000 for entries from April 18 and 25, 2013. Those pages featured editorials written by Roger Estlack focused on open government, columns by Fred Gray on child abuse and local elections, and letters written by Chris Moore and Tom Stauder.

Estlack's editorial on the open records and the Hedley school board received an Honorable Mention among daily and non-daily papers for circulations less than 3,000; and the ENTERPRISE also earned an Honorable Mention among papers of all sizes for Freedom of Information efforts regarding open records and open meetings issues with Hedley ISD and the City of Clarendon.

"That Honorable Mention for Freedom of Information work is a big deal for us," publisher Roger Estlack said. "That division was wide open. First place was won by the WYOMING TRIBUNE EAGLE – the second biggest daily paper in Wyoming, second place was the ARIZONA CAPITAL TIMES in Phoenix, and then next was THE CLARENDON ENTERPRISE."

The ENTERPRISE won several state awards last month, including a first place in General Excellence, and then this past Saturday brought home three first place wins and the Sweepstakes Award from the West Texas Press Association convention in Graham.

CC Regents vote to expand degree offerings

Clarendon College students in three workforce programs will have more paths to choose from following action taken by the Board of Regents last Thursday, July 17.

CC currently offers certifications in HVAC (heating, ventilation, and air-conditioning), vocational nursing, and welding. But the administration proposed and regents approved offering Associate of Applied Science degrees in those programs.

"This will give our students another avenue to pursue," said CC

President Robert Riza.

The AAS degrees will require students to take more core curriculum classes but will let them pursue Bachelor of Applied Science degrees at senior institutions.

On a related note, Dr. Riza also reported that CC had signed an articulation agreement with Texas Tech University that will let CC students bound for Tech access the university's advisors, pursue eligible BAAS degrees, and allow students completing at least 48 hours at Clarendon before going to Lubbock to reverse transfer hours and receive an associate's degree from CC.

In other college business, regents approved a schedule of course fees for the new nursing program that prepares students to become registered nurses.

Regents also approved an overload pay schedule, accepted a bid from the Baker Agency on athletic insurance, approved purchasing equipment for the nursing program – infant mannequins and birthing simulators – paid for by a Title III grant, and held a short closed door meeting to discuss personnel.

The board ratified the hiring of Dr. Edward Caraway as a biology instructor in Pampa and of Michael Metcalf as the bookstore manager / athletic insurance coordinator. Resignations were acknowledged from financial aid assistant Shelby Huff and custodian Sonia Martinez at the CC Pampa Center, Childress Center Director Scott Mills, and custodian Tony Baird.

In his president's report, Riza gave an update on new bleachers

Wyrick gets 21 months for burglary

A Howardwick man convicted of the April burglary of the Sandell Drive-In was one of six people sentenced when the district court met in Clarendon last Wednesday, July 16.

Jeffery Lynn Wyrick was convicted for the state jail felony offense of burglary of a building and was sentenced to 21 months in the State Jail Division of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice.

Wyrick, 32-year-old of Howardwick, was arrested in Donley County by Donley County Deputy Sonny Marasco for the offense that took place on April 23, 2014. Wyrick was later indicted by a Donley County Grand Jury on June 25, 2014.

According to published reports, Wyrick was one of two people arrested after Donley County deputies executed a search warrant at their home at 258 Palacia Drive in Howardwick. Among the items found in the home was a large amount of candy and a trash can believed to have been stolen from the Sandell on either April 23 or April 24.

"Deputy Marasco and other Donley County officials pieced together this excellent investigation that lead to several arrests and this conviction today," said Inman. "With excellent investigations we are able to successfully remove defendants like this from the community."

ENTERPRISE files show Wyrick was also arrested in 2013 in connection with three burglaries, including one at the Clarendon Country Club from which a large safe was stolen.

Old, new, borrowed, and blue

Dissection of notes found in the pocket of an old suit isn't easy. Maybe they were scrawled during the lull in a wedding ceremony, or to jog my memory of a joke for later use.

Anyway, it reminded me of a couple who "got hitched" many moons ago—back when gasoline prices were in single digits. She remembers ALL the details; he, almost none.

His foggy summation is brief: "She said 'I will,' then I said 'I will,' and now we've spent nearly 70 years together 'wiling'..."

A current story is set out in West Texas—specifically, Alpine, the Big Bend country's crown jewel.

The area's grandeur is beyond the imagination of the many Texans who've never visited, or taken deep breaths of the mountain air.

Yet, bigger than the expanses of the Big Bend are stories of its people, strong of handshake and steeped in the bedrock of things good....

Forty years ago, when Ray and Rita Hendryx were married, they danced to the fiddle and band of the late Hoyle Nix and his West Texas Cowboys, a highlight of Alpine's July 4 observance in '74.

How could Ray forget? His late father, Gene Hendryx (a Marine at 15 and survivor of both World War II and malaria) initially moved to Alpine for his health and was previous owner of Radio Station KVLF. "Everything Alpine," he served three terms in the state legislature and was a part-time announcer as a Sul Ross college student when the station began operation 67 years ago. Gene seemed always to be "mike side" promoting Alpine and the Big Bend area. He talked up the Independence Day celebration 40 years ago "big time." And the Nix band booking was big news.

Little wonder, then, that memories flooded-- 40 years later--when Ray learned this year's July 4th holiday plans. There'd be a street dance led by another Nix band—this time Hoyle's son Jody, with his Texas Cowboys, playing a street dance at nearby Fort Davis. Wow, thought Ray and Rita, after celebrating in Alpine, they'd top it off dancing to Nix band up the road....

It was déjà vu. Like his dad, Ray was in promotion mode for weeks—his "leather-lung" promotions of upcoming events ever evident, as one listener put it, "til the world looks level."

Ray and Rita could hardly wait. Their extended family would all be in town for the holiday and anniversary folderol.

Having worked at KVLF since his teen years, he contacted Jody to make sure Silver Dew on the Blue Grass Tonight still is in the band's repertoire. "Of course," Jody responded, "It's still a favorite."...

The Hendryx clan, almost all of 'em, were "all in" for multiple events in both towns. (Ray believes the fireworks embrodering skies above the Davis Mountains each year are the best in West Texas.)

Luckily, there was beautiful weather, grand food, parades, high school reunions and more. The Hendryx family partook of it with gusto. As reporters have stated across the years, "a good time was had by all." However, Ray and Rita "tuckered out" before the dance, as he put it, "plumb out of time and energy." They stayed home.

Maybe they can drop by The Stampede—The Nix's home venue for 60 years—one of these days in Big Spring for a "rain check" dance to Silver Dew. Shucks, it's less than 200 miles away, not a "fer" piece in West Texas....

Ray has worked many seven-day weeks, holidays and all, since he first went on the air during the 1967 Middle East War. His idea of retirement was to "back off" to 40 hours a week by the time he hit 65.

Health issues are taking precedence now, and now Ray is in the process of selling the radio station holdings. The couple will re-locate to Kansas, where their two sons and their families live.

Ray and Rita are "public service" people who've earned transition to "live like the Waltons." Soon, no more early morning news casts, trading posts, local government meetings and athletic broadcasts. Instead, story time for four grandchildren, many about KVLF—the "Voice of the Last Frontier," an Alpine street dance, and another one almost attended 40 years later in Fort Davis....

What would Jesus do with immigrants?

Without a doubt, we have a serious mess along our unsecured border with Mexico. Additionally, our state and national politicians are making an even bigger mess as they struggle to forge some sort of permanent solution to the mess on our southern border.

Growing divisions on Capitol Hill are getting in the way of an emergency spending bill to alleviate the flood of unaccompanied minors from Central America along the entire southwest border with Mexico. House Speaker John Boehner, R-Ohio, said last Thursday that the members of the House were working to enact some sort of legislation before Congress takes its traditional August break, "but I don't have as much optimism as I'd like to have."

Of course, yours truly has absolutely no optimism that the Congress will be able to accomplish anything at all. It is simply too dysfunctional to be of use to the American people.

President Obama is also of little use (perhaps even less use than Congress) to the American people. Actually, truth be known, our entire government is of little use to We the People. The situation is beyond absurd, whatever that is. Democracy in the US has completely broken down, our political leaders have devolved into idiots, and our government is being run by the various government bureaucracies. The ship of state is adrift on angry international seas and is in danger of sinking.

Little Teddy Cruz, our Texas Senator from Canada, eh, has a bill to repeal a 2012 Obama directive that allowed certain undocumented minors to stay in the US. He puffed out his chest, sucked in his gut, and spewed forth, "This crisis wasn't caused by the 2008 law. What caused this problem, what caused this crisis was President Obama in the summer of 2012 illegally granting amnesty to some 800,000 people who had entered this country illegally as children. And the foreseeable, predictable consequence of that is that it has led to an explosion of unaccompanied children coming in to his country." He then added, "The only way to address this humanitarian crisis and to solve it so we don't have children being brutalized is to remove the promise of amnesty." Hmmm? Some think he has been smoking too many "Cuban cigars." Perhaps we need to return the Statue of Liberty back to France.

Our Texas government is not in much better condition. Governor Rick is suggesting that President Obama is somehow conspiring with foreign entities to aid the influx of unaccompanied children. His suggestion is so absurd that it is impossible to rationally respond to his accusations of federal culpability in this nightmare.

Outrageously, the governor has decided, in his infinite ignorance, to send 1,000 national guardsmen to the border, at a cost of $12 million a month, in order to keep a bunch of four-year olds from crossing the border into Texas. As my editor has pointed out, if you are wonder in a few months where our community college and other important funding went, then the border is a good place to start your search.

the quick, the dead, & fred
by fred gray

If the border and immigration issues are going to be solved then We the People are going to have to solve it, which we can do. We need to understand that most of these children are entering the United States from a few third world Central American countries to get away from drug cartels, which either kill them or sell them into sexual bondage. Their parents are sending them to the US in order to get them out of harm's way. I cannot imagine the anguish and grief their parents experience as they send them on a long and dangerous journey to the US, perhaps never to see them again, in the hopes of giving them the opportunity for better life with a brighter future.

So, what do we do? Our troops meet them at the border, perhaps at the point of bayonets, in a futile effort to turn them back. If they make it across our border then they deserve to be treated as children in trouble. They deserve our help, not our hatred and scorn. They need help, and we need to help them. Our values and national character are at stake.

These are children we are talking about, not some sort of insect infestation. Surely, they will put strain on our educational, judicial, medical, and housing resources, but we are a creative, generous people, and we can find a way to solve this problem in such a way that it is in the best interests of these children and this great land. Their arrival on our shores is not a disaster to our national integrity and character. It may actually strengthen them.

This is not a national security issue. Claiming otherwise is a vile absurdity.

We claim to be a Christian, God-fearing country. Now is a good time to prove it.

Reader asks for support for RFD-TV

My good friend Red Steagall called me and said, "Fuzzy we need your help!!!"

The future of RFD TV could be in jeopardy. The proposed merger (which we are not against) of Comcast with Time-Warner and Direct TV with AT&T could have a negative effect on RFD. If they decide to drop RFD TV, this would probably also affect Dish.

Here is what we can do:
1.) Go to www.rfdtv.com and click the Contact FCC - Support RFD-TV banner on the right side.
2.) Read the five easy steps to file a comment with the FCC.
3.) Click the link on Step #1 to go directly to the FCC site and write your comment.

Please submit your email and help us flood FCC with RFD-TV support by helping us start an "emailchain" (a new word) to five friends and request them to do the same. Time is of essence.

Here is my comment example I sent:

"I am ranch raised. I'm a part-time Dentist/Rancher/Farmer. RFD has been an important part of my life for many years both for information and entertainment. Just because our members have dropped to 1/5 of the population does not mean we aren't just as important. We need our news and farm reports more than ever. Keep us in touch with rural America if you are to have anything on your plate tonight. Keep us Educated, Informed, and Entertained - KEEP RFD-TV.

Clarendon's crosses creep people out

My husband and I are frequent travelers through Clarendon on our way to our vacation property in New Mexico. We find the sewer pipe crosses creepy and unwelcome. We will never stop in Clarendon, and I would like to remind town officials of the economic boost that Clarendon and other towns on 287 get from travelers. You might want to think about "first impressions."

I am a Christian but one who displays my faith by trying to live my life as Christ commanded. If I need to bombard someone with plastic symbols to show my faith, then something is very wrong.

Watch out for cell phone ‘credit mulin’

Hi, gang! I made it back from Houston one more time. Lord willing, there will be one more monthly trip and then every three months. My old pocketbook is getting kinder flat.

This week let's look at two more scams. One involving our college kids and one about E-ZPass. I am just an "old" country boy turning 80 next week and have never heard of E-ZPass until last week in Houston.

Scammers have found yet another way to exploit people who need money fast, including cash-strapped college students: Pay them to open wireless contracts that include new smart phones, tablets and other mobile devices. The scammers target people to act as "credit mules." That's when a scammer uses someone else's identity, personal information and credit to get something of value. In this case, it's a wireless device.

Here's how it works: A scammer – also known as a "recruiter" – asks the targets – also known as mules – to buy a number of phones under separate contracts. The recruiter pays the mules and reminds them to cancel the contracts within the allotted time – typically 15 to 30 days.

The recruiter then takes the phones, unlocks them, and sells them for profit. Stay with me here: A lock is a software code that the manufacturer puts on the phone as required by the carrier that sells the device. The lock ensures that the phone can be used only with that carrier's network until a different code is used to unlock the device. A single unlocked phone with no contract can be sold on the street in the U.S. for hundreds of dollars – and overseas, for thousands.

But when the mules try to cancel the contracts, they realize they've been duped. Regardless of what the recruiters told them, they can't cancel the contracts without returning the phones. So the victims are not only on the hook to pay for the phones, but they also have to pay the monthly service fees for the length of the contracts. If they can't pay, the accounts go to collection and their credit ratings suffer. Negative credit can affect their ability to get credit, insurance, a job, and even a place to live.

If you've been approached by someone offering you cash to sign a wireless contract – or already victimized by a "recruiter," the FTC wants to hear about it. Your complaints help us stop rip-off artists, scammers, and fraudsters.

Scammers Pose as E-ZPass to Collect 'Unpaid Tolls'

Using E-ZPass for a road trip this summer? Watch out. Scammers are posing as E-ZPass in emails and claiming to collect unpaid tolls. The emails carry viruses that infect your computer and can open you up to ID theft.

How the Scam Works: You receive an email that appears to be from E-ZPass. It uses the correct colors and logo and appears to be collecting money from an unpaid toll. The message says you have ignored previous bills and urges you to pay immediately by downloading an attached "invoice."

You download the attachment, but nothing seems to happen. Not true! You just downloaded a virus to your computer. These viruses scan your machine for personal and banking information, which opens you up to the threat of ID theft.

As always watch out for variations on this scam. As the con evolves, scammers might change to phishing phone calls or link to a compromised or fraudulent third party website instead of an email attachment.

How to Spot a Phishing Email:
Watch for lookalike URLs. Be wary of sites that have the brand name as a subdomain of another URL (i.e. "ezpass.scamwebsite(dot)com") or part of a longer URL (i.e. "ezpasspayyourtolls(dot)com.") Hover over URLs in emails to reveal their true destination. Scammers can make links appear to lead to a legitimate website, when they really point to a scam site, like the examples above. Don't open attachments from unfamiliar sources. Legitimate businesses rarely send unsolicited emails with attachments. Always confirm an email is real before you download anything.

Consider how the business normally reaches you. Most businesses send invoices by postal service, in the body of an email (no attachment) or by asking you to log into your secure account.

Be safe out there.

Cub reporter tells of vacation in New Mexico

After staying at Aunt Dixie's, we went to the cabin that is out in the middle of nowhere in New Mexico. It is made of wood and was handmade. It has no bathroom. There is just an outhouse called the Johnny House. If you want to wash your feet, you have to do it in the sink.

The next day we took a ride on the train with Scarlet, Russell, Nate and Dan. They let us have hot chocolate in our car and they let us stand in a box car. It took all day. We saw some deer on the way and we were way up in the mountains. We came back on a bus.

The next day we went fishing on the river that was huge. We crossed a bridge that was like a very, very wobbly line in the air. I caught six fish but four got away.

I really enjoyed it. It was really, really fun and I want to go back next year.

Get out the lawn chair and stargaze

Those days between July 4 and the start of school are here and you wonder, "What can I do?" The weather is usually too hot to plan much for daytime pleasure, but this year has been different.

Last week we received more than three inches of rain, and the high temperature stayed in the 70 degree range. That's right, July in the Texas Panhandle. Hotter temps are forecast for this week, and maybe our garden will begin producing. We have gotten some squash and one cucumber, tomatoes and peppers are growing but not producing. Well, the life of a farmer.

One thing we can do is sky watch. Get out your lawn chair. If it leans back, that is better. Get some bug spray and a snack and prepare your spot. First, get away from outside lighting because the darker the better, orient yourself to the stars in the sky and begin watching. Maybe you will see a shooting star. If you want to increase your chances of seeing shooting stars, follow these directions of the meteor shower guide as presented by earthsky.org. The next meteor shower in the northern hemisphere is the Perseids which occurs this year between August 10-13 and it is a big one. Your chances of seeing more are after midnight with predawn hours being ideal. The only bad thing about this year is the moon will be full and they will be difficult to see but because the meteors are so large you can see them. So good luck star watching. Have fun.

Drugs in the News
FDA Approves New Breathing Form of Insulin
The FDA recently approved an inhaled form of insulin called Afrezza. This new insulin is designed to help lower high blood sugars in people diagnosed with type 1 and type 2 diabetes. This insulin comes as a powder. It is packaged with an inhaler. When properly used, it helps lower high blood sugars that occur immediately after meals. This new insulin is approved to be inhaled immediately prior to a meal or within 20 minutes after a meal. Afrezza should be taken along with long-acting insulin that is injected into the body. People with breathing conditions such as asthma or chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD) should not take Afrezza because it carries a strong warning about the risk of bronchospasm, or tightening of the muscles around the breathing passages of the lungs.
Type 1 diabetes is an inherited condition where the pancreas cannot produce insulin. Insulin is an important hormone created by cells in the pancreas. In type 2 diabetes, the insulin producing cells do not make enough insulin. Insulin is a required medication for those who have type 1 diabetes.

Perry sending National Guard to border

By Jay Root, The Texas Tribune

Gov. Rick Perry, leaping again into the national spotlight on illegal immigration, announced Monday he is sending up to 1,000 National Guard troops to the Texas-Mexico border, where an influx of young Central Americans has overwhelmed the federal government.

Democrats blasted the decision as a political stunt by a governor with presidential ambitions. But Perry, who has the power to call up Guard troops to deal with a broad variety of crises, said Texas had to act because the federal government has offered nothing but “lip service and empty promises” while the border is overrun with illegal activity.

“I will not stand idly by while our citizens are under assault and little children from Central America are detained in squalor,” Perry told a packed press conference at the Texas Capitol. “We are too good a country for that to occur.”

Monday’s announcement marked the second time this month that Perry, who is considering another run for the White House in 2016, has thrust himself into the center of national debate about the crisis along border. He met with President Obama in Dallas on July 9, in part, to press his demands that the feds send — and pay for — a National Guard deployment.

Absent a federal activation, Perry said he acted on his own, meaning that Texans will pick up the $12-million-a-month tab authorities say the deployment will cost.

The governor and other Republican elected officials said they would ask the federal government to pay for the mobilization.

The Guard will not act in a primary law enforcement role but rather as a “force multiplier” under “Operation Strong Safety,” the border surge effort being led by the Texas Department of Public Safety and other state police, Perry said.

That ongoing state police operation is estimated to cost about $5 million a month, so Texas could be spending $17 million or more per month for border security when the operation is in full swing.

House Speaker Joe Straus, R-San Antonio, said the Legislature will mull how to pay for the increased border presence as costs continue to escalate.

Adjutant General John Nichols, head of the Texas Military Forces, said he expected 1,000 troops to be mobilized within a month. The National Guard will also provide helicopters that will offer nighttime surveillance to law enforcement, he said.

“Technically speaking, if we were asked to we could detain people but we’re not planning on that,” said Nichols, who joined Perry at the press conference. “We’re planning on referring and deterring — so deterring them with physical presence and referring any people that we see that we think are illegal immigrants to DPS.”

Nichols said most of the soldiers are trained in life-saving techniques and will be prepared to deal with unaccompanied minors from Central America. The young immigrants generally turn themselves in to authorities and are later released pending adjudication in the courts, which sometimes takes years.

“We think that they will come to us and say please take us to a Border Patrol station,” Nichols said. “We’re going to be prepared to have water there, to render aid if they need it.”

He said he expected to be in communication with law enforcement to help process the immigrants.

The decision to activate the National Guard was generally well received among Republicans. Attorney General Greg Abbott, the Republican candidate for governor, applauded Perry’s “decisive action.”

State Sen. Dan Patrick of Houston, the Republican nominee for lieutenant governor, released a statement supporting the decision before it was announced.

“More manpower and more resources are needed. It’s time to mobilize the National Guard,” Patrick said. “This should be done by President Obama, but if he refuses, and Governor Perry decides to act, I fully support that decision.”

State Sen. Juan “Chuy” Hinojosa, D-McAllen, said Republicans were using the border crisis to appeal to their base voters — not to solve the problem.

“It’s the wrong message and it is not needed. We do not need to militarize the border,” he said. “We have families and kids that are coming across that are unarmed.”

Likewise, U.S. Rep. Joaquin Castro, D-San Antonio, said the state should focus on providing humanitarian relief, not more law enforcement.

“We should be sending the Red Cross to the border, not the National Guard,” Castro told The Texas Tribune in a text message. “These children are not trying to evade Border Patrol and there’s no reason to confront them with soldiers.”

State Sen. Wendy Davis of Fort Worth, the Democratic candidate for governor, agreed more law enforcement is needed along the border, and she pointed the finger at Washington leaders who have failed to “live up to their responsibility.”

But she said Perry should call the Legislature into a special session to provide more money to hire deputy sheriffs instead of activating the National Guard.

Perry ignored a question at the end of the press conference about whether a special session might be needed, but earlier he blasted those who call the deployment a “militarization” of the Texas-Mexico border. He said the National Guard is made up of Texans from all walks of life — many of whom have served along the border in humanitarian missions.

“This idea that somehow or another there is a militarization going on is frankly a little offensive to the folks at the National Guard who travel to the border on a regular basis to help,” Perry said. “This is about border security.”

‘Discover Zac Ryan’ to show at Sandell

A film project more than a decade in the making is flickering to life this weekend at Clarendon’s Sandell Drive-In.

“Discover Zac Ryan,” produced by 180 Films in association with New Daydream Films, will be screened for local audiences just one month after it first debuted in Aiken, South Carolina, the city which served as the backdrop for the movie.

Written and directed by Corey Paul and inspired by real-life events, “Discover Zac Ryan” follows the life of a young research oncologist on the verge of making a discovery that will change his life — and the world — forever.

However, a secret from his past challenges everything he knows to be true and threatens the future of his discovery.

“Discover Zac Ryan” stars David Garrett as Zac Ryan, Jeff Joslin as Eric, Kendra Staub as Zac’s love interest McKenna Roberts, and Matt Godson as Clayton, a young cancer patient who helps to change Zac’s life.

“This is an intensely personal film for me,” said Paul. “Events in my own life inspired the screenplay, and it has been a struggle to get all the pieces in place to finally bring this story to the screen. But I do believe, as we say on the movie posters, that ‘life changes everything.’ I sincerely hope that God will use this film to change lives and move people to examine their hearts concerning one of the most relevant questions our society faces today.”

The movie is making its way across the country and will show at the Sandell this Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, July 25-27, and again next weekend August 1-3.

Paul will be in Clarendon later this week and is interested in speaking with groups or churches interested in hearing the inspiration behind the film. He can be contacted at (419) 654-4747 or dzrhelp@gmail.com.

More information and a trailer of the movie can be found at www.DiscoverZacRyan.com.

Broncos start football practices

By Sandy Anderberg

Athletic Director and head football coach Gary Jack has announced Friday, August 1, as the day football equipment will be handed out to those interested in playing football for the 2014-2015 school year.

Two-a-days will begin on Monday, August 4, at 7:30 a.m. All football athletes need to be on time, clean shaven, with a good, short haircut. All athletes will be expected to attend all practices and team meetings. Jack is excited about this upcoming season.

All athletes interested in playing football need to be at the field house in Bronco Stadium on Saturday, August 2 at 9:00 a.m. to receive football equipment. They will begin with the seniors and end with the freshmen.

Those athletes wanting to run cross-country will need to be at the Bronco Gym on Monday, August 4, at 8:00 a.m. ready to run. According to Jack, all girl athletes are highly encouraged to participate in cross-country. Athletes will receive paper work at that time.

“All incoming 7th, 9th, and 11th grade students have to have a doctor’s physical prior to practice,” Jack said. “The forms will be at the Medical Center Clinic and that is where you will need to go to get your physical.”

Jack and the CHS coaches’ expectations for the 2014-2015 year are high for all Bronco and Lady Bronco teams.

“I’m excited about all of our teams for the upcoming year,” Jack said. “Those of you who have not been able to work out still have a little time before practice starts. If you want the team to get better, you have to get better.”

WHICH WOULD YOU
RATHER BE LOOKING AT THIS SUMMER?

A D.W.I. turns summer into bummer. There's jail time, up to $17,000 in fines, hours of community service, and very likely a suspended driver license. Before you head out for summer fun, line up a P.A.S.S.—that's a Person Appointed to Stay Sober. That way, you'll get a safe ride home and not get burned by a D.W.I.

Inspection sticker will soon be a thing of the past

Texans will have one fewer state stickers on their windshields beginning next spring.

The state will stop issuing vehicle inspection stickers beginning March 1, 2015. In order to register your vehicle, you be required to pass a vehicle inspection not more than 90 days prior to the date of your registration expiration.

After passing an inspection, the inspection station will update your electronic inspection record with the results and issue a paper vehicle inspection report. When you go to register your vehicle, your inspection will be verified electronically to determine if your vehicle is eligible for registration at that time.

Transitioning to this new process will require every vehicle's inspection and registration to expire at the same time. In order to do this in the first year, you will be allowed to register your vehicle if your vehicle registration is valid the day you register.

The Texas Department of Motor Vehicles is working with the Department of Public Safety and the TCEQ on the implementation of this program, and once program details are finalized, that information will be made available to the public. At this time, additional information about the program can be found on the TxDMV website at www.txdmv.gov.
