City sales tax revenue drops

City sales tax revenues continue to reflect the absence of last year's pipeline crew, which temporarily increased the county's population and caused sales to surge at Clarendon merchants.

Texas Comptroller Susan Combs delivered her monthly allocations last week, and Clarendon's revenue for the month was down again – this time dropping 2.14 percent to $30,437.81. That brings the city's calendar year-to-date sales tax revenue total to $324,205.60, down 5.04 percent compared to the same period last year.

Looking back, last year's allocation for this month was up more than 18 percent over the same period in 2012.

Hedley has been running ahead most of this year, but that city's allocation dropped 25.19 percent for this month from $274.90 down to $205.63. The year-to-date figure there is now standing at $5,824.77, which is 6.49 percent ahead of the same period last year.

Howardwick's revenue continues to slide, down 17.19 percent this month to $1,219.53 and 22.3 percent off for the year at $11,292.45.

The sales tax figures represent monthly sales made in August.

Winners of Cotton Festival are named

The 63rd annual Cotton Festival produced several winners last Saturday in Hedley.

Ashara Arguello was named the Cotton Princess, and Makayla Bowman won the Little Princess Crown.

Denise Bertrand won the Lioness Club Quilt, and Ester Metcalf won the fire department's bean pot.

The American Legion gave its swing to Earl Shields and its barbecue grill to Alta Mae Corona.

And Tim Herbert won the senior citizens' shotgun.

Flames shoot up from a diesel-fueled fire at a road construction plant west of Clarendon last week. The damage from the fire is estimated between $1.5 and $2 million.

Fire damage costs $1.5 million

A diesel-fueled fire caused more than $1.5 million worth of damage to a road construction plant west of Clarendon last Wednesday, October 8.

The Clarendon Volunteer Fire Department and Donley County EMS were dispatched at 11:53 to the reported diesel fuel tank fire at the J. Lee Milligan Plant on FM 2362 just south of US 287. Five trucks and nine firemen responded.

Firemen discovered an 8,500-gallon diesel tank was leaking and a large ground fire was heating the tank. The same tank in a different compartment contained 11,000 gallons of burner oil, and the fire was also affecting several drums of oil, a 300-gallon diesel tank, a 300-gallon propane tank, and a tank of liquid asphalt heated to 350°F. A large electrical generator was also in the vicinity.

Clarendon VFD evacuated the area as the fire was out of control and the danger of an explosion was too great to suppress the fire. The Pantex Fire Department was called for mutual aid at 12:30 p.m. and responded with three units and six firefighters.

Clarendon Fire Chief Jeremy Powell said the Pantex FD has a truck capable of putting foam on a chemical fire at a rate of 1,000 gallons per minute. Clarendon can pump foam at 250 gallons per minute.

Just before 1:00 p.m., a 300-gallon steel fuel tank exploded, rocking the plant and causing heavy damage to the area.

Pantex FD showed up a short time later and agreed with CVFD officials that the scene was unsafe for firefighters. Fire officials then explained to Milligan officials that the fire would likely have to burn itself out.

Pantex remained on the scene for several hours and then returned to Pantex.

About 5 p.m., CVFD noticed the fire had subsided and began cooling the area by pumping water onto the fire from a distance. The department used a thermal camera and noted that cooling efforts had worked and the tank had become less of a risk.

A direct attack was staged on the fire with Milligan employees assisting by smothering the leaking fuel and fire by dumping loads of sand on the fire with a front-end loader as CVFD pumped water and foam onto the fire.

The blaze was contained by 6 p.m., and firefighters returned to the station at 7 p.m.

"The combined efforts J. Lee

Milligan employees and Clarendon Firefighters stopped the fire and prevented further property loss or damage," Powell said.

Early damage estimates were $1.5 to $2 million, and the plant will be closed for several days for repairs.

Powell said the fire was caused by an accidental diesel spill from a fuel transport company filling the 8,500-gallon tank. The spilled diesel contacted the open flame of a propane torch being used by Milligan employees in the process of plant duties. The leak on the tank was subsequently caused by the fire burning and damaging fuel lines.

CVFD used its thermal imaging camera during the course of the fire. Fuel in the diesel tank was heated to 450°F and many objects near the fire were heated to an excess of 2,000°F.

Woman's death called 'suspicious'

The Donley County Sheriff's Office this week is still trying to determine if a crime was committed when a Howardwick woman died from a gunshot wound last Wednesday, October 8.

Sheriff Butch Blackburn said his office is calling the death of Karla Bartek "suspicious" as they await the results of forensics before ruling the case as a suicide or a homicide.

Authorities received a call of a gunshot wound in Howardwick at 425 Janny after 10 a.m. Wednesday, October 8. Upon arrival, Sheriff Butch Blackburn found the body of Carla Bartek in the front yard of the home with one gunshot wound to the head. A .380 semi-automatic pistol was found with the body, Blackburn said.

Bartek's husband, Alton, reported the incident, Blackburn said.

Preliminary results of an autopsy conducted Thursday found that the gunshot wound was the cause of Bartek's death and that her body showed no other signs of trauma, leading officers to believe there was no physical altercation before her death.

Forensic lab results are expected back by next week, Blackburn said. The Texas Rangers are assisting with the investigation.

Funeral services for Bartek, age 53, were held Monday, October 13, in Amarillo at Calvary Baptist Church. Bartek, who was born February 1, 1961, in Farmington, New Mexico, to Wayne and Irene Holt, is survived by her husband; two sons, Ricky Paulson and Christopher Paulson; five brothers, Gene Willis, Marlin Willis, Ronnie Willis, Lonnie Willis and Victor Holt; and three grandchildren.

Former aldermen settle with mayor out of court

Legal action against Clarendon Mayor Larry Hicks was resolved out of court this week when the city's chief executive fulfilled terms of a settlement crafted at a court-ordered mediation last Thursday, October 9.

Three former members of the Board of Aldermen – Debbie Roberts-Hillis, Jesus Hernandez, and Tommy N. Hill – sued Hicks last November, listing several complaints against the mayor and requesting the district court remove him from office.

Eleven months after the suit was filed, the terms of mediation came down to one issue – the installation of an exterior elevator on the front of City Hall in 2012. The plaintiffs initially claimed the lift was installed without board approval. They later produced a report from A Home Elevator, Inc., that the elevator was basically obsolete and would be very costly to make operational.

Hillis and attorney Greg Freeman, representing the plaintiffs, attended the mediation last week and agreed to drop all action if Hicks would call a special meeting of the Board of Aldermen and recommend the elevator be removed. Hicks agreed, and a called meeting was held Monday afternoon.

During that meeting, Hicks made the required recommendation and also noted that the elevator had never been finished, that it was former city administrator Lambert Little's project, and that nothing more had been done with it after Little was terminated in late 2012.

Hicks also noted that, under the terms of the settlement, he had to recommend the elevator be removed but said it was up to the board to decide what action to take.

The board discussed the elevator project. It was mentioned that the elevator was purchased from the City of Amarillo for $10 and the work so far to install it had cost about $2,000, and Hicks said removing it would probably cost about the same.

Alderman Doug Kidd said the complainants allegations were about actions taken while two of them were still serving on the board and noted specifically that the elevator project had been budgeted.

Hillis and Hernandez both resigned from the board in June 2013. Hill's term as alderman expired in May of that year, and he lost his election bid that month to unseat Hicks as mayor.

Alderman John Lockhart said he had heard several complaints about the appearance of the elevator and that it was "an eyesore" on the front of City Hall.

Alderman Sandy Skelton said the elevator is currently not needed since there is no public space on the second floor of City Hall and said he thinks the current Board Room is adequate for public meetings and is handicapped accessible. He noted that the board can meet elsewhere, such as the Burton Memorial Library, if it needs more space.

"I would be in favor of getting rid of the whole thing and getting this behind us," Skelton said.

The board then approved a motion to give Hicks the authority to have the lift and housing removed and to restore the building back to its appearance before the project was undertaken.

Two locals accept pleas in separate cases

The District Court heard two pleas in local cases last week during docket calls in Clarendon and Childress.

District Attorney Luke Inman, assisted by Greg Buckley, prosecuted the cases for the State of Texas with the Honorable Judge Stuart Messer presiding.

In Clarendon on Monday, October 6, Billy Gene Chadwick was convicted for the second degree felony offense of burglary of a habitation and was sentenced to ten years in the Institutional Division of the TDCJ, but the sentence was probated for a period of three years.

Chadwick, 41-years-old of Clarendon, was arrested in Donley County by Deputy Sonny Marasco on April 21, 2014, and was later indicted by a Donley County Grand Jury on June 25, 2014.

Pursuant to the plea Chadwick is required to pay a $2,000 fine to Donley County, $614 in court costs, and complete 300 hours of community service.

In Childress on Thursday, October 9, Matthew Lunsford was placed on probation for a period of two years for the class A misdemeanor offense of deadly conduct. Lunsford pleaded guilty and was placed on deferred adjudication for the offense.

Lunsford, 18-year-old resident of Clarendon, was arrested in Donley County for the offense that took place February 23, 2014, by Donley County Deputy Jay Logan and was indicted by a Donley County Grand Jury on April 1, 2014.

Pursuant to the plea agreement, Lunsford is required to pay a $250 fine to Donley County, $398 in court costs, and successfully complete 100 hours of community service. If Lunsford violates probation, he could face up to one year in the county jail.

Middle East still does not matter

By Justin Logan, Cato Institute

The American foreign policy elite is obsessed with the Middle East. Despite President Obama’s rhetoric about a “pivot to Asia,” the United States remains bogged down in the region, now at war in Syria in addition to Iraq. What’s most perverse about all this is that the Middle East doesn’t matter. Washington would do better to leave the region alone.

Otto von Bismarck, Nicholas Spykman or any of the other great strategists of centuries past would be puzzled at the degree of interest Western elites give to the Middle East. The region is an economic dwarf. Its combined GDP – even including oil – represents roughly 6 percent of world GDP. Its population is closer to 5 percent of world population, and its military forces are similarly unimpressive. As the iconoclastic scholar Edward Luttwak has pointed out, America’s Middle East analysts frequently fall victim to the “Mussolini syndrome” when thinking about the region, attributing “real military strength to backward societies whose populations can sustain excellent insurgencies but not modern military forces.” No Middle Eastern state can project power outside the region – not Iran, which spends about $18 billion per year on defense, and not Saudi Arabia, despite its roughly $60 billion in annual military spending.

Nonetheless, three fears have turned this small, poor, weak region into the central focus of U.S. foreign policy: oil, Israel and terrorism. Each of these concerns merits attention, but nowhere near the amount they have received over the last several decades. And certainly, none of them calls for the sort of forward-deployed interventionism both Republicans and Democrats favor.

First, take oil. While their fears are rarely spelled out explicitly, Washington policymakers worry that regional wars or instability will threaten the ability of oil producers to get their output onto world energy markets, creating volatility, hampering economic growth and producing second- and third-order effects that send the global economy into a tailspin. Perhaps this argument is never spelled out explicitly because it’s wrong.

Oil is a fungible commodity sold on world markets. When the price of oil in one country rises, it rises in all countries – even those that have achieved the Shangri-La of “energy independence.” On the supply side, when supply decreases, price goes up and producers have an incentive to produce more oil to reap the higher profits. Combine the self-interest of producers with financial innovations like sophisticated spot and futures markets that allow consumers to hedge risks and it’s easy to see why, historically, supply disruptions have had limited and ephemeral effects on price.

Even the worst-case energy security nightmares don’t stand up to closer inspection. One scenario in which the U.S. military might come in handy is if a state like Iran tried to conquer and consolidate control over a major oil terminal such as Ras Tanura in Saudi Arabia, giving it an uncomfortable, not to say market-making, amount of control over world oil markets. Fortunately, though, Iran doesn’t have anywhere near that kind of power-projection capability and if it did, America’s carrier-based airpower and long-range bombers could handle the threat relatively easily.

Another Middle East fear involves Israel. Here again, the precise problem is rarely spelled out, but people believe that Israel, small and friendly with the United States, lives in a bad neighborhood and benefits from a robust American presence in the region. The problem is that Israel in 2014 fits differently into the region than it did in the dangerous years after its founding. It enjoys an enormous qualitative military edge over any combination of potential regional rivals. It has roughly 200 nuclear weapons deployed on an array of platforms, including submarines, that give it a secure second-strike capability against any state in the region that might dare to threaten its survival. It is hard to see, moreover, how the maelstrom of sectarian conflict that recent U.S. policy has helped unleash across the region has benefited Israel.

Finally, of course, are fears about terrorism. This explanation for why the Middle East supposedly matters is peculiar, in that the basic contours of U.S. policy in the region predate 9/11. It is tough to think that a concern that emerged after a policy began explains the policy. But there is no evidence that terrorism is a threat that warrants an effort to micromanage the Middle East. The chance of an American being killed by terrorism outside a war zone from 1970-2012 was roughly one in 4,000,000. By any conventional risk analysis, this is an extraordinarily low risk. Perhaps this is why, as early as 2002, smart risk analysts were asking questions about counterterrorism policy such as “How much should we be willing to pay for a small reduction in probabilities that are already extremely low?”

The amount we’re paying now to fight terrorism – roughly $100 billion per year – is simply crazy. If someone ran a hedge fund assessing risk the way the U.S. government has responded to terrorism, it would not be long for the world. Indeed, it is difficult to identify how U.S. policy across the region – with the possible exception of some drone strikes and special operations raids – have reduced the extremely low probability of another major terrorist attack. If anything, our policies may have increased them.

Ebola pandemic is getting worse

‘Tis true, the scientist, people in the know, are now suggesting that we can expect up to 10,000 new Ebola cases a week, by the end of December, no less. This pandemic could easily spread into the worst outbreak of death since the middle ages. We must remember that those outbreaks of the Black Death created a bottleneck in the human race, which almost caused the complete extinction of our species.

I hate to remind folks that we are not done dealing with this horrible disease, and the time for dark humor is long gone. We need to pay particular attention to what the world and our national leaders are doing to prevent the spread of this nightmare virus.

Recently, according to The New York Times, two alarming developments in the attempt to contain the Ebola virus have surfaced. The campaign against the epidemic in Africa, the best way to prevent the spread of the virus to the United States and other countries, seems to be less than successful. Also, the fact that a Fort Worth nurse treating an Ebola patient in Dallas became infected despite wearing protective gear raised serious questions about the ability of our hospitals to deal with Ebola patients.

Optimistic claims by health officials that virtually any hospital with an isolation unit could safely treat these patients now appear to be wishful thinking. Even so, the threat that the Ebola virus might spread in this country is unlikely. Much greater danger lies in the possibility that the virus will continue to burn out of control in the three countries located in the western part of Africa and jump from there to other parts of Africa or other areas of the globe, thereby opening more pathways for the victims to reach the United States.

Several countries and NCOs, led by America, have offered money, equipment, and then manpower needed to fight the epidemic in West Africa. However this aid has yet to reach the areas where the virus is raging, leaving health care professionals with too few treatment beds and other medical supplies needed to accommodate the patients.

For example, in Sierra Leone health officials, desperately trying to deal with just such a shortage of beds, implemented a newly created policy of having families treat patients in their homes, by distributing pain medication, rehydrating solutions, and surgical type gloves to the Ebola-infected households. However, if the Ft. Worth nurse, who was clothed in protective garments, could not escape infection, it is hard to accept that poorly equipped households in Sierra Leone will be able to escape contamination from an Ebola patient in their midst.

The Times added that International aid must quickly be increased, and dramatically so. This effort cannot be assigned to an NGO such as Doctors without Borders, which has done a creditable job but it is not equipped provide the needed assets.

The US Army has deployed troops to the area to help build new treatment facilities, conduct laboratory tests, and train health care workers in how to treat patients. However, most of that help is the quick, the dead, & fred by fred gray

not yet on scene.

The Dallas case should add urgency to those efforts to control the epidemic while it is in Africa. Now is not the time to panic, but it is cause for greater effort among health care workers. Even though we don’t yet understand how the Ft. Worth nurse became infected, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention is exploring ways to make it easier to put on protective gear, wear it when needed, and carefully take it off afterward, without becoming infected.

Treating Ebola patients is the task of trained health care professions. So far, five Ebola patients have been flown back to the United States and have been safely treated at hospitals in Atlanta and Omaha. However, the Dallas hospital made serious mistakes in handling this patient from the beginning, and the young Ft. Worth nurse was a young, inexperienced graduate of a nursing school with little experience in infectious viruses. It remains possible that other health care workers who helped treat the patient were infected too.

The C.D.C. is urging all hospitals to take travel histories of any patients who have been in West Africa within the past three weeks and immediately move those with Ebola-like symptoms into secure isolation rooms. The C.D.C. will increase its training protocols for hospital personnel, since most nurses have received no instruction in how to treat Ebola patients. Smaller hospitals will need to transfer any Ebola patients to specialized centers for treatment.

We need to do all we can to help defeat Ebola at its source, thereby better protecting Americans. Perhaps most importantly now is an excellent time to pray for deliverance, for the world, from this terrible scourge.

When did ‘complexity’ take hold?

Pin-pointing when complexities took root in our country is tough duty. It depends greatly on one’s age, locale, circumstance, ad infinitum. Feel free to make your own list.

New technology unfurls with abandon--consequences to be determined later--or perhaps never.

Shucks, one wrinkle was added by – of all things – ice....

What a day it must have been when crushed ice was first delivered to the drugstore soda fountain. Until then, most folks bought ice in blocks, usually periodically. A handy ice pick made chunks possible. Crushed ice was unheard of at the time.

It was the rage. People stood in line to grab stools and order refreshing drinks enhanced by mounds of crushed ice. One guy, patient to the utmost, finally was seated.

He courteously ordered one of those new-fangled Cherry Cokes, “ if they’ve got some ice that ain’t busy!” ...

If ice is to blame, global warming may take care of that. Along the way, folks pointed fingers at TV, the Internet, phones that do everything but change diapers, heightened creature comforts that dictate two incomes (and sometimes more), discipline breakdown, growing incivility, distrust...here again, the ad infinitum thing fits.

Throw in surveillance...people in general knowing too much about too many topics, and soon there are masses of folks facing loss of confidence to clear an ever-heightening bar of expectations. Before we know it, worry morphs into outright fear.

Someone threw it out years ago:

“We can be around the world in hours, and both see and hear around the world in seconds, but we have to go/hear/ see with the same nervous system Moses had when he led the children of Israel from the land of bondage.”...

the idle american
by don Neubury

*****

Pendulums have never swung wider. Highs are higher; valleys have never been lower.

Parents, in many cases, are afraid they’ll be charged with abuse if they unsheathe the rod that has been mostly spared for a couple of decades or more.

No one wants to face abuse charges – and any abuse of children is unacceptable, and not to be confused with discipline....

Time was when the mere threat of discipline worked wonders. A paddle hanging in the principal’s office at school was an ever-present reminder of what COULD happen. Dad’s razor strap at home was mentioned a few times, but never used except for sharpening his razor.

My friends were sent out to the orchard to pluck their own switches from trees, but they weren’t branches or limbs, and I don’t know of any incident growing up that brought blood. ‘Course what we knew was mostly what we saw, heard from folks at the next farm or picked up while listening in on telephone party lines.

Indeed, they were Saturday Evening

Post, Norman Rockwell and matinee movie kind of days. Life was simpler....

*****

There are more reasons to worry now. Wars and rumors of wars. Hunger. Disease. Technology, in some cases, wears a badge. Did we run the red light? Well, we’ll know in a few days, because – like The Shadow in radio days – the camera knows.

Television blares, armed with the clout of advertising armies touting national firms. They dictate much, well beyond professional and collegiate sports.

One vignette speaks volumes. Kansas State football coach Bill Snyder, perhaps as classy, ethical and capable as any coach in history, was informed the other day that the purple windbreakers he wears on the sideline must be chosen with more care. Turns out that some are years old--purple garments bearing names and logos of bowl game sponsors in which his Wildcats played. Whoa! Now some of the bowls have different sponsors....

A TV boss spotted the infraction, informing the NCAA that threw the flag on K-State. It landed at Snyder’s feet.

Snyder made nary a comment – he’s awfully good at measuring his words when he has something to say – but now is wearing plain, white windbreakers. His only message is that he has no message.

What to do? For many of us, the most comfort is taken in the belief that the same God who has intervened in the affairs of man throughout history is still in charge....

Floyd Cramer’s grandson to perform in Pampa

Jason Coleman, grandson of the legendary Nashville pianist Floyd Cramer, continues his family’s tradition in this nostalgic and entertaining tribute at the M.K. Brown Civic Auditorium in Pampa on Friday, October 24, at 7:30 p.m.

Live On Stage, Inc., and Pampa Community Concert Association will also sponsor a student outreach performance by Jason Coleman as part of their ongoing commitment to support arts education in the community.

In addition to touring the “Piano Magic” show, Jason Coleman is an active recording musician, church music associate and feature performer on the General Jackson

Showboat in Nashville, Tennessee. He debuted on the Grand Ole Opry at age 17. Coleman’s natural inclination to the piano was clear by the age of five. In addition to his formal training, Jason displayed an uncanny reflection of his grandfather’s stylings. He famously performed piano duets with Cramer on “Music City Tonight” hosted by Lorraine Crook and Crystal Gayle at the age of nine, and on “Nashville Now” hosted by Ralph Emery at four years of age. Most notably for Coleman, however, was his performance at the induction of his grandfather into the Country Music Hall of Fame with the Opry House Band. Follow this link to view a video featuring Jason Coleman.

The Pampa Community Concert Association has been presenting internationally acclaimed artists to the community since 1944. This all-volunteer nonprofit organization is committed to enriching the cultural life in the Texas Panhandle through live performances.

Thanks to the generosity of Patrons and Corporate Members, these concerts can be offered at affordable, family friendly prices. Live On Stage, Inc. provides excellent, affordable, entertainment attractions and support services to an American community of concert presenters. ## Forty Texas Panhandle veterans come to Washington

WASHINGTON, DC – Forty Panhandle veterans traveled to the capital last week to visit the memorials and other sites that commemorate their service and sacrifice. The group joined Congressman Mac Thornberry (R-Clarendon) for a special tour of the US Capitol where he had the opportunity to speak to them on the Floor of the House.

“Giving these veterans a tour of the Capitol is one of the highlights of my year,” says Rep. Thornberry. “To sit in a room with men and women who bravely put their lives on the line to protect our freedom and form of government is both humbling and inspiring. Each of them has shaped our history, defended our values, and each of them has a story worth hearing.”

The Texas Panhandle Honor Flight is organized and sponsored by the local chapter of America Supports You Texas (ASYT), which is headquartered in Amarillo. The Honor Flights are part of ASYT’s efforts to promote awareness and support for our U.S. military service members and veterans, as well as their families. The group also organizes care boxes for active duty personnel, sponsors an annual Armed Forces Day banquet, and organizes welcome home and return to duty rallies. Among the Panhandle veterans on this trip, six served in World War II, eighteen served in Korea, and nine served in Vietnam.

“I never dreamed I’d get to come to Washington and see what I’m getting to see,” says World War II Veteran Benjamin “Smitty” Smith from Tulia.

“Organizations like America Supports You Texas help remind us that our country remains strong because of what these veterans sacrificed. Groups like this play an important role in ensuring our veterans receive our deepest gratitude and thanks,” Thornberry says.

Honor Flight is a national program that began as a project to offer World War II veterans all-expenses-paid overnight trips to Washington to see the National World War II Memorial. These flights pay for and transport veterans to see the memorials erected to honor their service.

Modern meaning of ‘terrorism’

Oh, boy! Winter showed its ugly head and made us all scramble to find a jacket Monday morning. No freeze, but our thermometer showed a low of about 48°. With the wind chill of 42°, we all understand what is on the way. Sunday night the front came through with horrible winds, and Ole Jim recorded a gust of 57 mph along with some rain showers while celebrating the win by the Dallas Cowboys over Seattle. I know, it was a busy night.

Is everyone as confused as I am over what you can label “terrorism”? In Moore, Okla., a man newly converted to Islam was fired from his job at a food distribution plant, came in the front door and began stabbing and slashing the first person he encountered. Words like “beheading” or “decapitated” are not used much in our daily news reports, but they were used in describing the death of that 54-year-old white female that day in late September.

It sounded like a terrorist attack to me, but the FBI, Homeland Security, and media said it was not terrorism but called it “violence in the workplace.”

I don’t know Colleen Hufford, the beheaded lady, but I know my family and we would be outraged at the back-pedaling and apologizing tone that has shown up in the later editions of the events.

The fact the terrorist was shot while actively stabbing the second victim, the fact he had a long violent criminal record, had tried to recruit colleagues to Islam, he was dressing as an muslim, all have been ignored after the initial stories which now describe the attack as stabbing.

Having a curious mind I looked up the word “terrorism” in my old Random House dictionary, copyright 1980 and it said, “The use of violence and threats to intimidate or coerce, esp. for political purposes”. I then went to Wikipedia and it said “terrorism was usually politically motivated; an abiding characteristic is the indiscriminate use of violence against non-combatants for the purpose of gaining publicity for a group, cause, or individual.

The symbolism of terrorism can exploit human fear to achieve these goals.” Well, folks, you know the old saying, if it walks like a duck and quacks like a duck it is usually a duck; and to me this was an act of terrorism. I pray for healing for all victims and families involved. May God be with them.

The crime rate in Howardwick has shot up in the last couple of weeks with a shooting that resulted in death and (not related) the burglary of a home. Families involved in both incidents are hurting so please pray for them, ask God’s blessing of peace for them all.

On Saturday at the fire station, the firefighters gave the awards to the poster winners, and we got to ride on the fire trucks, and the winners got their pictures taken. We got to eat hot dogs and cookies.

If you heard loud sirens, I am sorry because a baby was sitting in my lap and she was just pressing down on the horn and siren.

After that, we went to the Cotton Festival and played BINGO, and Ella got her face painted. I took pictures and rode on the train that is pulled by a four-wheeler, and we got to eat pizza.

Monday we went to see people shoot balloons on horseback, and it was very loud.

Les Beaux Art Club’s artist spotlights

The Clarendon Arts Festival will be October 25 and 26, and featured artist this week are Luz Angela Crawford and Vance McSwain.

A native of Colombia, South America, Luz Angela Crawford bases her art on pottery derived from century old techniques of the indigenous tribes from Colombia. She discovered their old traditions of working with clay and was even more inspired to be part of the long history of people making things with their hands. Crawford is a freewheeler, with each piece being molded by hand. She incorporates organic materials such as beads, seeds, rocks, wood, shells and rope to make the textures the predominate of each piece while still retaining the primitive expression. Her work has a distinctly contemporary interpretation. Crawford is currently based in Amarillo.

Vance McSwain taught high school art for thirty years. He is presently a professor in the Art Department at West Texas A & M University. Vance’s art can best be described as Contemporary Realism. Contemporary Realism combines the visual beauty and excitement of contemporary art with the drawing and painting skills present in traditional and academic art. Vance is a member of the Amarillo Fine Arts Association, The Lonestar Pastel Association and the Panhandle Portrait Association. Vance has won numerous awards for both oil and pastel. His work is represented in a number of private collections throughout the area. Vance received a Bachelor’s and Master’s degree in Art Education from Texas Tech. He also studied in Italy with Louisiana Tech’s Foreign Studies Program.

Drugs in the News

Meningitis Vaccine Gets Approval for Booster Dosing

The FDA recently approved Menactra meningococcal vaccine to be used as a booster shot. A booster shot of meningococcal vaccine is listed in the Centers for Disease Control's (CDC) guidelines for vaccinations against meningitis. Menactra is described medically as a meningococcal polysaccharide diphtheria toxoid conjugate vaccine which is used as an immunization against certain types of meningitis disease. The use of a booster can help the body have even more protection after the first vaccination. The booster is only approved for people fifteen up to fifty-five years of age.

Meningitis is an infection of the meninges (the lining of the brain and spinal cord). The infection can be caused by bacteria, a fungus, or a virus. The most recognizable signs of meningitis are a stiff neck, a severe headache, and a fever. In some instances, a case of meningitis can get better without any treatment. Some cases may require emergency care. Most health experts agree that it is important to follow the CDC vaccination guidelines to help reduce the risk of getting meningitis.

Colts turns game around, gets win

The Clarendon Colts used almost every minute of the game Thursday night to get a huge win over Lockney on the road at 30-24. Noab Elam intercepted a pass at the end of the game that allowed the Colts to hold on to the six-point win.

Elam also struck early in the game in the first series by Lockney when he intercepted a Longhorn pass and returned it 60 yards for a touchdown. He then hit Bear Smith for the two-point bonus. According to head coach Brad Elam, the Colts hit a barrier offensively after the defensive score.

“We struggled a little bit and it took us awhile to wake up on both sides of the ball,” Elam said. “Lockney scored the next 16 points.”

The Colts thought they had things turned around when Ryan McCleskey scored on a 55-yard run, but it was called back by penalty. Defensively, the Colts dug in before the half to stall a Longhorn drive when Smith caused a fumble with Ryan Ward recovering.

After the break, the Colts had a resurgence as they marched the length of the field and scored when Preston Elam ran it in from five yards out. N. Elam and Smith earned the bonus. After a Lockney score, Cruz Torres took the kick off back 65 yards for another touchdown and the Colts trailed by two. After forcing a punt, the Colts got the ball once again and with the help of great running by McCleskey and P. Elam, the Colts scored on a P. Elam five-yard run. He also made good on the bonus with a one-handed catch for two that gave the Colts the lead they needed.

“We did a nice job of coming form behind and not getting down,” Elam said. “We just need to find a better way of starting off strong against good teams and not wait until the second half to find some energy.”

The Colts will face off against Quannah at home Thursday, October 16, at 5:00 p.m. in the Bronco Stadium.

Runner Bryce Grahn finished sixth in meet

Bronco JV shutouts Lockney

The Broncos made easy work of Lockney last Thursday and defeated them 32-0 on the Longhorn's field. Mikeal LaRoe got things going when he scored on a two-yard run to make it 6-0. He then turned six on a 10-yard run with a bonus to make the score 14-0 at the break and scored again from two yards out in the third quarter of play. Nathan Shadle took a turn finding the end zone twice from two yards out and on a 35-yard run to end the scoring for the Broncos.

“The offensive line of Clayton White, Justin Christopher, Randy Aguilar, Andy Davis, Nick Shadle, and Cody Lowry dominated the line of scrimmage all night long,” coach

Brandt Lockhart said. “Bryce Grahn and Damarjae Cortez had several good runs, also.”

Lockhart said the defensive line did a great job of controlling the line of scrimmage and Cortez, Shadle, LaRoe, and Zach Caison had outstanding defensive play.

“Grahn had two interceptions, LaRoe had one, and Cortez had one,” Lockhart said. “We all did an outstanding job of executing on both sides of the ball. It was a very good win.”

The Broncos will face off against Quannah at home Thursday, October 16, immediately after the Colts play.

The CHS seniors celebrated their last bonfire Thursday night.

Broncos post first season win

By Sandy Anderberg

Bronco Stadium was full of Bronco fever Friday night as the home team posted its first win to go 1-0 in District play. The Broncos fought hard and was able to shut down the Longhorns' and hand them a one point loss at 20-19. After Lockney's final touchdown in the fourth quarter, the Broncos stopped the extra point which gave them the one-point win.

"This was a big win for us," head coach Gary Jack said. "We played well."

The Broncos hit first when senior Charles Mason scampered 46 yards for six to give Clarendon the early lead. But Lockney answered back to lead by one. After a scoreless second quarter and after Lockney put six more on the board, it was Mason once again who teamed up with quarterback Zack LaRoe to make good on a 30-yard pass with Jonathan Taylor adding the bonus kick to tie the game at 13 all. Cedrick McCampbell added the final blow to the Longhorns as he grabbed a 45-yard pass from LaRoe for a touchdown and Taylor once again earned the extra point.

"We started off good and had chances to put them away early in the game," Jack said. "But we didn't finish off our drives and were a little inconsistent. We let them back in the game and there was a momentum change at the half."

But the Broncos regrouped and stayed determined to get the win.

"We didn't have any turnovers in the game, and that was tremendous," Jack said.

The Broncos racked up 244 total yards while posting 11 first downs in the game.

"Charles and Cedrick had some big catches for us," Jack said. "We got back into the lead and held on. The win was good for the kids."

Jack said defensively, the Broncos stayed tough. Clay Koetting racked up 12 tackles and Montana Hysinger and Caleb Cobb helped with nine each. Zach Watson added eight and Bryce Hatley and Zack LaRoe added six each, while Mason turned in five tackles.

"Our guys played well up front," Jack said.

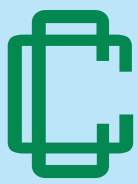

The Broncos will continue their district schedule on the road against a tough Quanah team next Friday night, October 17, beginning at 7:00 p.m.

Outrun the Longhorns
