Dockery will start city job March 2

City Hall said this week that incoming City Administrator David Dockery is expected to start his new job here on Monday, March 2.

Dockery and his wife closed on the sale of their Johnson City home last week and are buying a house in Clarendon, according to City Secretary Machiel Covey.

Last Tuesday, February 10, the Board of Aldermen met in closed session to consider the wording of Dockery's contract. The board took no action after the closed session because two aldermen were absent from last week's meeting. The board will consider the contract again next week.

In other city business, voted in favor of joining the Clarendon Chamber of Commerce and amended the fiscal year 2015 budget to allow for that expense.

The board also considered their titles and whether members should be addressed as their historic title of Aldermen or the more modern title of Council Members. After discussing the matter and listening to reasons on both sides, the Aldermen stuck with their traditional title.

Thornberry votes for business tax relief

WASHINGTON - US Rep. Mac Thornberry (R-Clarendon) voted Friday for the "America's Small Business Tax Relief Act of 2015" to make the Section 179 Deduction of the Internal Revenue Code permanent, which will allow farmers, ranchers, and small business owners to write off, or expense, up to $500,000 a year on equipment purchases. The Bill, H.R. 636, passed the House by a vote of 272 to 142.

"Congress is doing right by our nation's small business owners, farmers, and ranchers any time we can provide them with more certainty about the taxes and regulations that will affect them," said Thornberry. "Making the Section 179 Deduction permanent provides more planning stability and promotes production. Small businesses create 60 to 80 percent of all new jobs, and this bill makes it easier for them to expand their operations."

For 2008 and 2009, up to $250,000 of qualifying property could be expensed. From 2010 through 2014, small businesses were allowed to write off up to $500,000 with a phase-out threshold of $2 million, which Thornberry supported. When these levels expired at the end of 2014, the expensing limit fell to $25,000 with a phase-out threshold of $200,000. H.R. 636 seeks to make the 2010 through 2014 parameters permanent.

City sales tax edges up again

Clarendon's sales tax revenue continues to grow in 2015 according figures released last week by Texas Comptroller Glenn Hegar.

The city's sales tax allocation for February was $41,751.96, which is up 4.79 percent from the same period one year ago. For the calendar year-to-date, Clarendon is now at $71,390.21, an increase of 5.79 from this point in 2014.

The sales tax figures represent December sales reported by monthly tax filers as well as October, November and December sales by businesses that report tax quarterly.

Hedley saw an increase as well with an allocation this month of $996.06, up 9.33 percent from $911.01 last February. That city is now 1.12 percent ahead for the year at $1,234.04.

Howardwick's revenue dropped 29.11 percent for the month to $1,051.77 and is now down for the year 17.84 percent at $1,886.78.

Hegar said statewide sales tax revenue in January was $2.56 billion, up 11.2 percent compared to January 2014.

"The growth in sales tax revenues was led by business spending," Hegar said. "Receipts from the manufacturing and wholesale trade sectors were up sharply. In spite of the recent decline in crude oil prices, tax receipts from the oil and natural gas mining sector also grew strongly.

"This allocation marks the 58th consecutive month of yearover-year growth and is indicative of a dynamic and diverse economy that continues to generate business investment and spending in Texas," Hegar added. "My office will continue to carefully monitor the impact that lower oil prices will have on our state's economy, but these sales tax allocation numbers are an encouraging sign of continued strength."

Deadline for local election filing Feb. 27

A week later and the story is still the same as far as candidates running for local offices or the lack thereof.

Clarendon, Mayor Larry Hicks and Alderman Sandy Skelton have both signed on to run for office again, and they are joined by Britton Hall running for alderman.

Clarendon ISD and the City of Howardwick still have one candidate each. Wayne Hardin is seeking re-election to the school board, and Mike Rowland is running for reelection as mayor of Howardwick.

The City of Clarendon has the mayor's position and two board seats up this year. Those jobs are currently held by Mayor Hicks and Aldermen Skelton and Doug Kidd.

Howardwick has its mayor and two aldermen's positions up for election. Those are held by Mayor Rowland and Aldermen Jim Cockerham and Gail Leathers.

Two positions are up on the Clarendon ISD Board of Trustees. The terms of Hardin and Wes Hatley are expiring.

Hedley has three positions up on its Board of Aldermen, seats held by Aldermen Tonya Metcalf, Kathy Spier, and Dusty Wilkinson.

Hedley ISD has two terms on its board up this year. Dana Bell's term is up and he is running again, and there is an open seat available that was formerly held by Mark Howard.

Three seats are up on the board of the Donley County Hospital District. Those terms are held by Wayne Tubbs (Place One), Carey Wann (Place Two), and Melinda McAnear

Filing continues through February 27, 2015.

Libertarianism on the verge of breaking out

By David Boaz, Cato Institute

Rand Paul's leadership in the Senate – on the budget, regulation, privacy, criminal justice, and foreign policy – and his likely presidential campaign are generating new attention for libertarian ideas.

The growth of the libertarian movement is a product of two factors: the spread of libertarian ideas and sentiments, and the expansion of government during the Bush and Obama administrations, particularly the civil liberties abuses after 9/11 and the bailouts and out-of-control spending after the financial crisis. As one journalist noted in 2009, "The Obama administration brought with it ambitions of a resurgence of FDR and LBJ's active-state liberalism. And with it, Obama has revived the enduring American challenge to the state."

That libertarian revival manifested itself in several ways. Sales of books like Atlas Shrugged and The Road to Serfdom soared. "Tea party" rallies against taxes, debt, bailouts, and Obamacare drew a million or more people to hundreds of protests. "Crony capitalism" became a target for people across the political spectrum. Marijuana legalization and marriage equality made rapid progress. More people than ever told Gallup in 2013 that the federal government has too

In studies that David Kirby and I have published at the Cato Institute on "the libertarian vote," we have found that only 2 to 4 percent of Americans say that they're libertarian when asked. But 15 to 20 percent - 30 to 40 million Americans - hold libertarian views on a range of questions. The latest Gallup Governance Survey finds 24 percent of respondents falling into the libertarian quadrant, matching the number of conservatives and liberals and up from 17 percent in 2004 and 23 percent in 2008. And when asked in a Zogby poll if they would define themselves as "fiscally conservative and socially liberal, also known as libertarian," fully 44 percent of respondents – 100 million Americans – accept the label. Those voters are not locked into either party, and politicians trying to attract the elusive "swing vote" should take a look at those who lean libertarian.

In two presidential campaigns, Rep. Ron Paul (R-TX) attracted hundreds of thousands of followers to his combination of antiwar, anti-spending, and sound-money ("End the Fed") ideas, and showed them that these views were "libertarian." Two national student organizations Students for Liberty and Young Americans for Liberty now take libertarian ideas to thousands of college campuses in the United States and well beyond.

Now his son, Rand Paul (R-KY), is generating headlines about the GOP's libertarian wing and questions about libertarian ideas.

In the past week alone Paul has joined Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) to introduce legislation designed to limit the use of mandatory minimum sentencing laws, introduced along with Sen. Barbara Boxer (D-CA) a bill to encourage companies to "repatriate" overseas cash, proposed to audit the Federal Reserve, and found himself in the crosshairs when he questioned the need for compulsory vaccination laws.

Libertarianism, a belief in what Adam Smith called "the obvious and simple system of natural liberty," is the core philosophy of America. The first colonists fled aristocratic Europe to find religious liberty, individualism, and economic opportunity. They declared their belief in life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. American history has been a struggle between liberty and power, between those who wanted to defend and extend the liberties guaranteed in the Constitution and those who wanted to make the United States more like the countries our ancestors left, with powerful and paternalistic government. Throughout our history, libertarian sentiments have been rekindled when the federal government has grown beyond what Americans will tolerate—such as the past few years.

Today, libertarians support policies based on these same principles – lower taxes, less regulation, protection of civil liberties, personal freedom, and a foreign policy based on a strong national defense and avoidance of foreign wars. In recent years libertarians have led the way in supporting marijuana legalization, gay marriage, gun rights, school choice, and restrictions on NSA surveillance of Americans, and in opposing policies ranging from Obamacare and Wall Street bailouts to the Iraq war.

Whether or not Rand Paul wins the presidency, one result of his campaign will be to help those tens of millions of libertarian-leaning Americans to discover that their political attitudes have a name, which will make for a stronger and more influential political fac-

In my book The Libertarian Mind I argue that the simple, timeless principles of the American Revolution—individual liberty, limited government, and free markets—are even more important in this world of instant communication, global markets, and unprecedented access to information than Jefferson or Madison could have imagined. Libertarianism is the framework for a future of freedom, growth, and progress, and it may be on the verge of a political breakout.

David Boaz is executive vice president of the Cato Institute and author of The Libertarian Mind.

Brotherly love and sibling rivalry

Sibling rivalry has never been a matter of concern for me or for my "older" brother, Fred.

Oh, he's a bit "testy" about this claim that he is "older." (Okay, I'm seven years his senior, so I don't specify who – or what – he's older than.)

My Uncle Mort said this of us decades ago. "There's nothing Don wouldn't do for Fred, and likewise there's nothing Fred wouldn't do for Don. So – I guess it is safe to say – they haven't done much for each other." Can't argue that.

Since Fred has joined me in our eighth decade of life, we have had much to converse about. And we can talk a while without ever leaving health topics visits to doctors, home remedies and exercise programs that always morph into discussions of knee replacements....

He's the scholarly one, having theorized about economics at the collegiate level for more than 40 years. (I was slaving away much of that time in administration – uh, the "real world" of higher education – from which I walked away in 2000.) Fred – still going strong – is a faculty leader and author at Dallas Community College's Richland Campus.

We both received University of North Texas doctorates in 1973. A parttime employee in the registrar's office, he managed to get ahead of me in the graduation line.

I had requested "Don Newbury" as the only name desired on my diploma. He made sure "J" – my first initial – moved me further back in the line, no matter the diploma wording ....

I consider this prank as "pay-back." World-traveled and a long-time tour and several days in Rio, he sensed "ear-popping" shortly before an 11-hour flight to Dallas.

Eager to avoid discomfort that was bound to worsen at 35,000 feet, he visited a pharmacy, hopeful to buy distilled water and alcohol that could be selfadministered before leaving the hotel. He relied on his best pantomime, hopeful that the pharmacist – fluent only in Portuguese – would be able to lead him to these liquids....

Upon return to his hotel, he asked the bilingual concierge to read the bottle labels; second opinions - medical or otherwise - can't hurt. The concierge said the smaller bottle was marked "alcohol" – as hoped. The other, however, was NOT distilled water.

"I think you call it finger nail polish remover in your country," he said.

"Ignorance can be expensive," Fred admits, "But it can be dangerous as well."...

It can be dangerous, too, when conversations drift to grandchildren. So, "one-upmanship" is avoided if we simply "don't go there."

My wife and I can attest, though, that having completed a second four-day cruise with kids and grandkids in tow, it seems apparent that total strangers who

In fact, "Big G" and his wait staff crew knew which buttons to push to guide the children into dining adventures. Their words became gospel....

"The crust is really the best part," one grandchild said, 180 degrees away from his long-standing demand for it to be trimmed away. Grandparents and parents – maintaining essentially the same plea on many previous occasions might just as well have been making the pitch to a fence post.

Another grandchild who had previously referred to salmon as "yucky" requested two servings after glowing descriptions of the succulent dish.

"Big G" escorted Juliana, our oldest granddaughter, to the microphone when he was soloist for Amore, a traditional cruise number. That sealed the deal....

During our drive home in three vehicles, we made a rest stop near Cor-

Sure enough, despite being more than three hours away from Galveston, we were in agreement that "cruise conversations" were still dominant in all three cars. This was a golden moment – suitable for framing. Opinions in our mous!

Chamber speaker enjoys Clarendon

It is difficult to know where to begin in saying "thanks" for the opportunity to be a part of your 2015 Chamber of Commerce banquet. ### Clarendon ISD's MacBook Initiative

There is no denying that technology is rapidly transforming everyday life. Pending a major catastrophe, the current speed at which new technologies are being developed shows no signs of slowing. With these advances, new opportunities to utilize technology have become available.

Presently, Clarendon ISD is taking part in one such opportunity, the Mac-Book initiative. The purpose of this initiative is to better prepare students for a tech-savvy future by increasing their exposure to technology. One aspect of this initiative is the ability for junior high students to take an assigned laptop

However, according to "Scaling the Digital Divide" by Jacob Vigdor and Helen Ladd—a large scale study of nearly 1,000,000 students in grades 5-8—that's not a very good idea: "Students who gain access to a home computer between 5th and 8th grade tend to witness a persistent decline in reading and math test scores," accompanied by an increase in the education achievement gap between the rich and poor.

Therefore, "For school administrators interested in maximizing achievement test scores, or reducing racial and socioeconomic disparities in test scores, all evidence suggests that a program of broadening home computer access would be counterproductive."

What about possible positive effects of students having access to a computer at home? "Computer literate students may enjoy improved job opportunities later in life, or may be poised to take better advantage of online resources once [they've matured]. . . . It is not clear, however, whether computer literacy actually leads to better employment outcomes, and also not clear whether access to home computers in the early secondary school years is critical to later computer literacy."

According to this study, access to a computer at home tends to have negative effects on students (specifically, 5th-8th graders) and has no established positive effects for those students. Parents, teachers, and school administrators should think it there obligation to take into consideration this study and investigate further the risks and benefits of providing younger students the opportunity to take a computer home.

Open, Campus carry bills pass senate panel

By Morgan Smith. The Texas Tribune

A crowd of Second Amendment rights activists, survivors of gun violence, students, concerned "huge fiscal burden" on police from senators. parents, and law enforcement officers showed up at the Texas Capitol on Thursday to give lawmakers their views on two high-profile gun bills.

After a hearing that lasted almost eight hours, the Senate State Affairs Committee passed bills that would lift a ban on concealed handguns at university campuses (Senate Bill 11) and allow license holders to carry holstered handguns openly (Senate Bill 17). Both measures passed 7-2, with the committee's two Democrats voting against, and now proceed to the full Senate.

Colin Goddard, who was shot four times during the 2007 Virginia Tech shooting in which 32 students and faculty members died, was among those who spoke. He asked lawmakers not to use the Virginia Tech tragedy to justify campus carry bills.

"We survivors do not think that it is a good idea to have guns on campus," he said. "There is no evidence that a bill like SB 11 would do anything to stop a mass shooting, but SB 11 would make the average day on campus more dangerous in an environment where students are dealing with failing grades, alcohol abuse, relationship problems."

New Vaccine for Meningitis Prevention

The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) recently approved Bexsero vaccine for use in persons ages ten through twentyfive. The new vaccine will be used to help prevent a less common, but severe strain of meningitis. Meningitis is a condition characterized by the inflammation of the lining of the brain and spinal cord caused by certain bacteria and some viruses. Bexsero may help prevent meningococcal disease specifically caused by the bacteria Neisseria meningitidis serogroup B. Three clinical trials conducted in Canada, Australia, Chile, and the United Kingdom led to its approval. It demonstrated sufficient protection during clinical trials against serogroup B meningococcal disease. Over fifteen thousand students received Bexsero before it was approved in two American universities as a response to serogroup B meningococcal disease outbreaks.

Bexsero is one of only two vaccines that are FDA-approved to prevent meningococcal disease caused by serogroup B.

Broncos swing into new season

The Clarendon Broncos began their 2015 baseball season with two scrimmages last week.

Coach Brad Elam felt good about what he saw and was pleased with how things went.

"We played two very good scrimmages," Elam said. "The first one against a good Lubbock team and second one against River Road. I was pleased the way our kids came out and played. I thought all phases of the game were good and better than I had expected this early. We have a lot to work on, but I am very happy with the results."
