2 Ten candidates square off in the first Republican debate of 2016.

4 The Cub Reporter had a chicken adventure recently. 6 The Morrow family holds their big annual reunion in Clarendon.

8 And area conservation districts get ready for their annual meeting.

All this and much more as The Enterprise reports in this week's amazing edition!

Word to lead area for principals' group

Clarendon Elementary Principal Mike Word will serve as Region 16 President for the Texas Elementary Principals and Supervisors Association (TEPSA).

Officers from the 20 TEPSA regions across the state were installed at the association's July Leadership Conference. The conference featured Steve Gilliland, who spoke on leadership, and Elizabeth Bailey, a national association marketing professional, who shared ideas for membership recruitment.

"Regional officers are committed to building membership, leadership capacity and supporting TEPSA members at the local level. They play a critical role in TEPSA's success," said Executive Director Harley Eckhart.

Word's career in education spans 34 years. He has been a TEPSA member since 1990 and served as principal at Clarendon Elementary for 26 years.

TEPSA, whose hallmark is educational leaders learning with and from each other, has served Texas school leaders since 1917. Member owned and member governed, TEPSA has more than 5.800 members who direct the activities of 3 million PreK-8 school children Learn more at

Schools get best ratings

The Clarendon and Hedley school districts met the state standards according to state accountability ratings released last week.

Districts, campuses and charters receive one of three ratings under the accountability system: Met Standard, Met Alternative Standard, or Improvement Required. Both Clarendon and Hedlev were rated as "Met Standard."

"The 2015 state accountability system takes into account a number of factors unique to the 2014-2015 school year," said Commissioner of Education Michael Williams. "As in previous years, most districts, charters, and campuses met the state standards, which reflects well on our public education system and for the economic future of our state."

Hedley Superintendent Colby Waldrop said he was pleased with the report.

"We're happy that our teachers and kids worked hard, and we got the highest rating available," Waldrop said.

Clarendon Superintendent Mike Norrell said the high rating was due to a combine effort.

"It's a reflection of the hard work of teachers, kids, and parents and the support of the community," Norrell said. "It takes everybody."

Clarendon High School earned a single Gold Star for distinction for Reading/English-Language Arts, and the Junior High campus earned a Gold Star for distinction in Mathematics. Clarendon Elementary earned two Gold Stars for distinction for Reading/English-Language Arts and for scoring in the top 25 percent of Closing Performance Gaps.

City council to look at taxes, trash rates

The Clarendon City Council will be looking at its tax rate when it meets in regular session Thursday night, August 13.

The tax rate is just one item aldermen will be considering on the agenda for the meeting. Sanitation rates will be up for consideration also.

The council will consider a request by Kenneth Black to abandon a portion of West Fourth Street west of Collinson Street.

A street and drainage improvement plan for West Third street will be on the table, and the aldermen will again consider a contract for code enforcement services with Texas Panhandle CyberMedics.

"Earning any type of distinction under the state accountability system is commendable and should be a source of pride in that community," said Texas Education Commissioner Michael Williams. "Achieving all seven distinctions on a campus or a district-level postsecondary readiness distinction reflects extraordinary work while affirming a strong commitment to students."

Norrell said schools are getting a break on test results this year as the state begins its new accountability system. Clarendon Junior High fell three points short of its goal in one area "Student Progress," an area that Norrell said is always a challenge.

"Student progress is based on how they grow from one year to the next, and that growth is determined by how they perform on that one test," he said.

Republicans get the 2016 debate going

The Republicans have produced a bumper crop of presidential candidates for 2016, and ten of them were in the primetime spotlight last Thursday evening on the Fox News Channel.

A few other also-runnings (including our beloved former governor) were on television earlier in the day hoping to break into the news. I confess to tuning in a few minutes late to the debate. I skipped the self-aggrandizing opening statements.

With all the people running for office, you would hope you would have a lot of good choices. Instead, it's more like buying shampoo...

lots of products on the shelves and they all basically do the same thing. If the country elects one of these guys president, it's like the results will be the same at the end of four years... government will still be big and Islamic terrorists will still hate us.

That being said, there are some differences in the group. Take Donald Trump... please. He's got a lot of supporters. I even really like his straight-forward, no-nonsense comments on the issues of the day. He's very successful financially, and he's obviously got a lot of business savvy. I appreciated his honesty in not pledg-ing to support the eventual nominee. I'm not taking that pledge; why should he?

Trump, however, reminds me a lot of H. Ross Perot. He's done well in the private sector. He's got a lot of support from regular folks. And he's got the same "We just need to get under the hood and fix it" attitude that Perot had. But like Perot, I don't think Trump would ever be elected president. (Although it would be nice to see someone like him in the White House and just tell it like it is.)

Let's move around the dais and see who else we have on the menu.

Gov. John Kasich I think is a decent guy with a level-headed approach. He's certainly good with government budgets and has the rare experience of actually balancing the federal budget. He makes a lot of sense and could be a good president given the chance. But I don't see him getting much traction.

Gov. Chris Christie I'm not a fan of. He's a little too much "to hell with your rights if means we might catch a terrorist some day" for my liking. He would be good for comedians though.

Dr. Ben Carson is likeable and clearly thinks things through. But like Kasich, he doesn't seem to be getting traction.

I think probably the last thing we need is former ernor Jeb Bush. Bushes have a habit of running conservatively and then dramatically increasing the intrusiveness of the federal government. Consider this: Daddy Bush gave us the Clean Air Act (which killed the evil gas Freon) and the Americans With Disabilities Act with has raised the cost of all kinds of construction projects and made life more difficult in lots of ways. (Ask hotels how much that lift chair in the swimming pool cost and how much it gets used.) GW then gave us Medicare Part D, No Child Left Behind, and, of course, the PATRIOT Act. Go home, Jeb. We don't need you. Former governor Mike Huckabee is very principled and a good speaker. I just don't like him. Too preachy for me. Maybe it's the former pastor in him. The State of the Union might turn into a hellfire and brimstone sermon, which could be fun, I guess.

Going forward... ever going forward

It's hard to believe I had a genuinely cordial "argument" involving a birthday observance, a $91 gift check, and a couple driving 3,000+ miles to spend two days with the honoree.

I confess to igniting the gentle disagreement, but the principal figure is Ethelyn Smith, a resident at Redstone Park in Brownwood, TX – where some residents round off – or round down – their ages.

With right hand-on-a-Bible solemnity, she claimed to be age 90 upon my expression of good wishes "at the beginning of her 91st year." She balked. "Ethelyn, birthdays mark the year of completion, not the beginning," I reminded. She wouldn't budge, saying, "A year from now, you'd be right, but for now, I'm just 90."...  Oh, the $91 check. It was in a birthday greeting card from Mr. and Mrs. David Shing, whose wedding was the second performed by the late Dr. Robert Smith early in his 15-year pastorate at Pompano Beach First Baptist Church. (Mrs. Shing now has taught children's Sunday school classes there for 53 years.) The check, Ethelyn said, was for each year since birth, with $1 to grow on – "nothing to do with a 91st year."

Ethelyn taught newly-marrieds throughout the 1970s, and the class grew exponentially, since most members didn't want to join the next age group. So they didn't.

Bill and Judi Skeen's first-ever road trip to Texas was a birthday highlight. They – like many others – were impacted by Ethelyn's "alongside" guidance and friendship. Such friends marvel at this seemingly indestructible woman who faces whatever comes next with grit, humor, energy and above all, Christian commitment. Throw in the tive Director Janie Harper, noting Ethelyn's sparkling personality and genuine, over-arching appreciation.

Plus, around 4 p.m. most days, Ethelyn plays hymns on the parlor piano, often attracting two-dozen of the 61 residents from their rooms. Son Robert, a resident just two doors down, often is there, too, unless he's helping plant flowers, or on his electric scooter/delivery cart.

Himself a "cheerer-upper," he moved to the assisted living center early this year, soon after his mother sustained three broken vertebra in a backyard fall....

For several days, she was in critical condition. The outlook was bleak for this woman who worked alongside her late husband, whose previous pastorates included First Baptist Churches of Pine Bluff, AR, then Houston, TX. We've all heard stories of preachers hired because their wives could play the piano. Ethelyn plays the organ, too, and has worked nobly during her husband's pastorates, as well as his 25-year tenure as Professor of Preaching at Howard Payne University. She also assisted him with the Smith Sunday school class at Brownwood First BC, where he taught until age 85, when mounting health issues loomed. She

When her husband's macular degeneration wouldn't turn loose, she held up poster boards with big, black letters of his teaching outline. The "marriage made in heaven" phrase seems perfect for this couple who missed their 70th wedding anniversary by just four months

She envisioned widowhood in their home with Robert Jr., who has lived there most of his life. Her accident, some three months after her husband's death, changed her plans..... *****

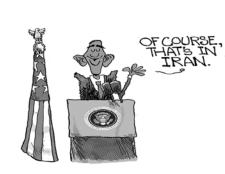

Life is measured, someone said, by how we handle the rebounds. For Ethelyn – described by daughter Judy Bynum George as "Jesus with skin" – rebounding calls for shooting the ball again, usually from three-point range.

She's a "smiler" and a "do-er," always committed to looking her best. Upon regaining consciousness when her string of life seemed short and frazzled, she asked Judy to fetch her lipstick and wrinkle cream. Sustained by deep faith and rehab, she's walking again. Hymns describe her. She knows whom she has believed, and is persuaded that He is able....Ethelyn knows she's never alone, in the garden or any place else.

Currently, though, she's miffed by her new driver's license photo that "looks like an old woman." Expect her to see if retouching is an option....

Marco Rubio I don't know enough about to form a good opinion. He seems to have some good ideas and is well spoken.

Ted Cruz. Oh, Lord. Can we get Rick Perry moved up to represent the Lone Star State? This guy is the Bozo the Clown of the Grand Old Party. I'm sorry, but I want to see Ted's birth certificate before we risk having a Cuban-Canadian faux Texan in the White House.

Scott Walker has something weird going on with his hair. Hard to take him seriously.

And then there's Rand Paul. He also has funny hair, but he does have a passion for libertarian principles. He has this insane idea that the government should respect our rights, follow the Constitution, not collect our cell phone records without a warrant. He's crazy. But in a good way.

The interesting thing going forward will be to see if whoever's the Republican nominee, can they possibly win against the overwhelming entitlement mentality in America. With a larger and larger group of people on the government nipple, it may be impossible for anyone other than a Santa Claus, give 'em everything Democrat to be president.

The 2016 American comedy tour is getting well underway. Future episodes will no doubt provide a lot of good editorial fodder but little substance for the voters.

Rules leaves consumers fewer options

By Richard W. Rahn

What is the purpose of financial regulation? Advocates of more and more financial regulation say it is necessary to protect the consumer against greedy bankers and other financial professionals and institutions. But what if excessive financial regulation is actually reducing consumer choice and increasing the cost of banking, saving and investing well beyond the point of any benefits?

Most people understand that competition is good in that it results in better products at lower cost and more choice. Yet the government has been destroying financial market competition, increasing consumer cost and reducing choice. In 1921, the United States had 31,000 commercial banks, and now we have only 5,500 for three times the population. Part of the reason for the decline in the number of banks is due to natural market forces, such as mergers, to gain the benefits of economies of scale and to allow banks to have nationwide branch banking, both of which benefit consumers. But another major reason for the reduction in the number of banks, particularly in recent years, has been the cost of bank regulation, which puts small and community banks at a severe competitive disadvantage. In fact, no new banks have been charted since the beginning of the Obama administration. The massive increase in regulatory costs has resulted in fewer and more costly bank services for the consumer.

Regulations on banking and the rest of the financial industry are developed and enforced by the Federal Reserve, the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, the Treasury Department, the Internal Revenue Service, the Justice Department, and now even the Department of Labor. Officials in the Obama administration at the Department of Labor are attempting a power grab with the claim (without providing supporting evidence) that financial advisers may be ripping off their customers by putting them in investment funds controlled by their own companies (which may actually be a good choice) and charging them commissions on the purchase and sales of funds and other products.

Most investors need investment advice. Professional financial advisers need considerable schooling given the complexity of financial markets, products and regulations. And, like other professionals, they need to be paid for their services. It may take a financial adviser no more time to advise and service a client with a $10 million account than a client who has a $50,000 account.

Under the proposed Department of Labor rule, many small investors will be unable to get investment advice and education for their Individual Retirement Accounts since the companies would no longer be able to cover the cost by charging commissions on many of the transactions. Small investors would be forced into index funds (which may or not be appropriate for a given investor) or pay a negotiated fee for investment advice, which is likely to increase the overall cost for the small investor, causing some of them to go without needed guidance. A number of members of Congress have written to Secretary of Labor Thomas Perez in opposition to the proposed rule, noting the "regulation will reduce access to investment options and increase cost for retirement savers" and that the "proposed rule is hopelessly complex, confused, and in its current form, unworkable."

Yes. a few investment advisers may not be fulfilling their fiduciary responsibility to their clients, but there are already plenty of laws on the books to take care of this problem, if the existing intense competition in the industry is not sufficient. Yet every day, government fails in its fiduciary responsibility to spend taxpayer money wisely. Perhaps if the administration spent more time making sure that the Veterans Administration, the Office of Personnel Management, the IRS and others are well managed and not corrupt, rather than taking on a largely non-problem and turning it into one, Americans would be better off. It is as if a guy from the mafia comes and tells you that for a big fee, he is going to protect you from the carwash overcharging you.

If the administration is so concerned about the cost of financial services to consumers, why has it persisted for more than two years in forcing a global regulation (the Foreign Account Tax Compliance Act, or FATCA) on banks and other financial institutions, which has had the effect of making it almost impossible for millions of Americans living abroad to obtain bank accounts without prohibitive cost? As in the proposed Department of Labor regulation, the administration has failed to do a cost-benefit analysis of the FATCA regulation, even though it will likely cost millions of jobs and hundreds of billions of dollars in needed foreign investment. This is a real failure in fiduciary – and moral – responsibility.

Morgan said that multiple applications of post-directed herbicide applications can be made when the cotton seedlings are at 3-8 inches tall and 8-14 inches tall. However, all products differ for timing of applications, targeted weeds and rate of application.

In many cases, a combination of herbicide modes-of-action should be considered to provide postemergence activity, and preferably a herbicide with some soil residual activity, he said.

Excessive rainfall has reduced the efficacy of pre-emergence herbicide controls in cotton this season, which has minimized the cottonto-weed height differential. Without enough height differentiation between the cotton and weeds, overglyphosate-resistant the-top herbicide application is the appropriate weed control measure.

These companies are called "lead generators." They collect information on people who may be interested in a given product or service. Marketers pay them for specific lists of these "leads." Many lead generators explain clearly what they do, and you might find their services helpful – for example, they might link you with the right seller or service provider. Other lead generators might not be so forthcoming – for instance, some make attractive offers that stretch the truth. And some may not do a good job protecting your sensitive information.

Because lead generation can be a key, unseen aspect of online commerce, the FTC is interested in how these practices affect consumers. On October 30, 2015, we will host

New Infant Formulation for Treatment of HIV

A pharmaceutical company based in India, recently announced that one of their medications has been approved by the FDA for infants who suffer from the presence of Human Immunodeficiency Virus (HIV). The approved treatment is for lopinavir/ritonavir. Oral pellets have been formulated in a patient-friendly form to help encourage routine medication use. The oral pellets are opened and sprinkled in sweetened porridge for infants to take the appropriate dose. HIV is a virus that enters the body through body fluids and destroys immune protector cells in the body. When the amount of immune cells is too low, the virus can lead to another condition called acquired immunodeficiency syndrome (AIDS). Lopinavir/ritonavir has been available as a fixed-tablet capsule, tablet, or oral solution under the brand name of Keletra. Lopinavir stops the production of a necessary enzyme that helps spread the HIV virus. Ritonavir is combined with lopinavir to help reduce the amount of viruses present. The most common side effects include stomach pain, weakness, nausea, loose stools, and vomiting.

Planned Parenthood out of cancer screening program

By Alexa Ura, Annie Daniel and Mallory Busch, The Texas Tribune

Throughout August, The Texas Tribune will feature 31 ways Texans' lives will change because of new laws that take effect Sept. 1. Check out our story calendar for more.

As part of the GOP's ongoing fight against Planned Parenthood, poor, uninsured women in Texas will soon be unable to obtain government-subsidized breast and cervical cancer screenings at the organization's clinics.

In an effort to boot Planned Parenthood from the joint state-federal Breast and Cervical Cancer Services program, Texas lawmakers wrote a provision into the state budget to prohibit clinics affiliated with abortion providers from receiving taxpayer funding for breast and cervical cancer screenings. That state budget takes effect Sept. 1.

Cutting off the dollars Planned Parenthood received from the cancer screening program had long been a goal of Texas Republicans, who have likened directing any state funds to Planned Parenthood affiliates to

Back-to-School Smile Time

Remember to put a dental exam and cleaning on your back-to-school list this year! Statistics show that 19 percent of children ages 2 to 19 years old have untreated tooth decay, and resulting dental pain can make it difficult for students to learn, play and pay attention in school. Make sure your kids are ready for a successful school year with the professional pediatric dental care they need to feel their best!

Morrow family gets together for reunion

For this family it all started in Randlett, Oklahoma on February 24, 1909, when I.B. Kenneth Morrow was born. Later that year on December 30, Jewel Walker was born in DeKalb, Texas. The two married December 18, 1926, in Plainview. The Morrow family was small; I.B. the older and two sisters Lula and Ileen. The Walker family was large; Jewel the youngest girl and four sisters Anna, Helen, Maggie, Mary; four brothers Tom, Wiley, Riley, and John.

I.B.'s father had several brothers and the Morrow families and Walkers moved around from job to job working on grading roads and railroad beds. I.B. and Jewel started their family in Truscott where Helen was born; Kenneth in Alanreed; Lucy in Vernon; Ina in Cheyenne, Oklahoma; Earl in Healton, Oklahoma; Mary and Rosey, John, and Maggie in Goodnight. The family moved to Clarendon in 1945.

Clarendon on the third Sunday in August of 1950 at the home of I.B. and Jewel Walker Morrow north of the present day rodeo grounds. The last Walker Reunion was held August 16, 1998, at the home of Jewel Morrow on Parks Street.

Five years later the Morrow Reunion was started on the 1st Sunday in August. John Tom's daughter Missy McKeever requested that it be held on the first Saturday in August. So we did, good choice.
