Estlack elected as TACCM secretary

Clarendon College's Ashlee Estlack was elected as the secretary of the Texas Association of Community College Marketers (TACCM) during the group's annual conference in Corpus Christi, June 12-14.

Estlack will serve as a member of the executive committee of association's 15-member board during the next year. Additionally, she is serving on the statewide Communication Advisory Board for the Texas Association of Community Colleges.

CC President Robert Riza commended Estlack's election and the role she is playing for community colleges on the state level.

"This is a reflection of the work Ashlee has done not only here at Clarendon College but also in getting our message out to legislative officials in the Panhandle and across the state," Dr. Riza said. "We're proud of her accomplishments and know she'll do a great job representing the association."

Topics addressed at this year's TACCM conference focused on marketing and communication tools as well as issues facing the state's 50 community colleges.

The Texas Association of Community College Marketers is a statewide consortium of marketing and public relations professionals for public community and technical colleges in Texas. The organization serves as a clearinghouse for information, promotes public community and technical colleges in Texas, and serves in an advisory capacity to other statewide organizations.

FFA contest draws hundreds to CC

The Clarendon College campus was crowded early last week as more than 400 people showed up for the annual Area I FFA Leadership Camp.

CC Director of Ag Programs Johnny Treichel said 340 students were on campus accompanied by 85 teachers. The group represented about 60 of the 96 schools in the FFA's Area I, which is bordered by Lubbock County on the south and extends north the width of the Texas Panhandle.

"It was pretty successful," Treichel said. "I was told the hotel was full all three days, and one restaurant owner told me that he was very busy for three days also."

Best Western Red River Inn proprietor Steve Hall echoed Treichel's comments about the event's economic impact.

"We had a lot of ag teachers who helped fill us up those nights," Hall said. "It's a nice event."

Hall said events like the FFA Leadership Conference contribute to CC having a significant impact on his business, and he said the college itself was a strong factor when he invested in the hotel property here.

Clarendon High School FFA student Chardy Craft was one of the students in attendance and said she enjoyed the camp.

"I get to meet new people and it's a great experience for leadership," Craft said. "I've learned a lot of new skills that I will definitely put to use in the future."

The event which began in 1969 is an excellent opportunity for Clarendon College to recruit kids from the Panhandle and South Plains.

"It's a major recruiting tool for us," Treichel said. "I think you could put a figure of 10 percent on it as the number of kids who will become our students if you understand that some of those are dual credit."

CC President Robert Riza also said the event is a chance for good kids to get acquainted with Clarendon College.

"Outside of the economic impact, this event is a great opportunity to showcase the college and the community to potential students who are examples of what's right with the Texas Panhandle, the state, and the nation," Riza said.

The camp at Clarendon College is modeled after the state FFA leadership camp, and Area I officers actually run the programs at the camp with the support of adult sponsors and employees of the college.

That old house back up for city discussion

It was the same subject with not much of a different outcome when the Clarendon City Council met last Thursday, June 23, and discussed the old Neece house at 602 Bugbee Avenue.

Owner Linda Lewis again appeared before the council to discuss work that has been done and work that is planned for the property, and aldermen again expressed little satisfaction with the progress that has been shown.

The house was facing a condemnation process in 2014 before Lewis got a grace period from the city to address code compliance issues.

Last July, she successfully avoided the condemnation process by rectifying certain dangerous conditions on the property under what was then termed Phase One of improvements to the property. Lewis is now at the end of the first year of Phase Two, which has been previously described as a three-year plan to rehabilitate the property.

Mayor Larry Hicks said the city council took no formal action on the property last week but did urge Lewis to keep the property cleaned up.

In other city news, aldermen approved a request from the Christ's Kids Ministry for $1,000 from the city's community programs budget line to support a summer lunch program. City Administrator David Dockery said the program feeds as many as 150 meals per day and costs about $8,000 to operate.

Aldermen also approved a budget adjustment to hire a new road grader operator for 20 hours per week for the rest of the fiscal year.

The council approved applying for a Community Development Block Grant for waste water improvements, specifically to improve lift stations and deteriorating collection pipes. City officials say, however, that there is little chance of receiving the grant because the city has not raised sewer rates and has not raised the tax rate more than the effective rate recently. Both of those factors will negatively affect the scoring of the city's application.

The council also met in closed session to review the job performance of City Secretary Machiel Covey, and she was commended for her work when the council reconvened in open session, the mayor said.

DOE picks CC for pilot Pell grants in prisons

Clarendon College is one of 67 colleges and universities selected nationally to participate in the US Department of Education's Second Chance Pell pilot program, which will allow incarcerated Americans to access Pell Grants to pursue post-secondary education.

Only seven colleges in Texas were named for the program, and CC is the only college in the state selected west of I-35.

"This is a great opportunity that will allow motivated students to begin or continue their educational goals," CC President Dr. Robert Riza said. "The recidivism rate for inmates that complete educational credentials is amazing, if they achieve their GED, or college degree, while incarcerated, their odds of returning go down into the single digits. This program allows those inmates a chance to better themselves once released."

The Second Chance program launched in July 2015 as an experiment to test whether participation in high-quality education programs increases after expanding access to financial aid for incarcerated individuals. The pilot program will allow eligible incarcerated Americans to receive Pell Grants and pursue post-secondary education with the goal of helping them get jobs and support their families when they are released.

Clarendon College began offering courses again in the prison in 2014 after a prior program ended in 2011 due to action by the state Legislature. The College currently has about 50 students enrolled at the Jordan Unit in Pampa, Texas, and plans to expand offerings to the T.L. Roach Unit in Childress this fall. With this new experimental Second Chance program, CC expects to reach 100 Pell-eligible students in 2016-17.

"We are extremely excited to be one of seven institutions in the state to be chosen for this program," Riza said. "We have been working hard with the units in Pampa and Childress to expand our course offerings and prepare for the Second Chance Pell Program, if it was approved. This is an initiative of extreme importance for the College."

This announcement builds on the Obama Administration's com-

Past repeats itself in our news items

Delving into the depths of the past, we present to you for the 20th time our annual Pioneer Edition of THE DONLEY COUNTY LEADER, included in this week’s ENTERPRISE.

This special section has become a favorite of our readers and advertisers and is certainly a favorite of your editor. For a lover of history, it is easy to become lost in the archives as one story leads to another or the hunt to identify a mystery photo becomes consuming.

It has always struck me as remarkable the ways history repeats itself. Looking back, the current news of the day often bears striking resemblance to the news of yesteryear.

One of the first articles that emerged as we prepared for this year’s Leader, was an early 20th century story about street improvements – presumably just grading – that was being done by the city. The work met with great approval from the people of the day... but unfortunately funds had run out to go any further. The story of our lives. That story didn’t make the cut for this edition. But others did.

In trying to learn more about a photo of the Pastime Theatre, we ran across a topic in 1935 that seemed just as relevant today as it was eight decades ago... an effort to light what we now know as Bronco Stadium. There was a series of articles building up the idea of lighting the football field, the effort to raise funds for the project, and then ultimately the lighting of the field. Unfortunately for the old Bronchos, the first lighted game – which should have resulted in greater “athleticism” in the cooler night temperatures – ended up in our first loss of the year to the visiting Shamrock team.

It was interesting also that eight light poles were installed in 1935. And from a story we ran earlier this month, six light poles were installed in the 1970s and were replaced with just four light poles this year. Forty years hence, will Bronco Stadium be lit by just two light poles or perhaps a hovering drone that bathes the entire field in artificial sunlight?

We also recently ran a story about commissioners taking on the job of trimming trees on the courthouse lawn. County Judge John Howard told your editor that the county felt the work was necessary because there were dead limbs that could fall and hurt someone. Compare that then to the 1935 article in which my great grandfather called on the county to trim the deadwood from the courthouse trees because a visiting editor had his face lacerated by a dead limb on the courthouse square.

Speaking of family connections, your editor sometimes gets hung up on bits of trivia that may not mean much to the general public but is of high interest to him. This year, we uncovered the obituary of my great, great grandmother, Calista Miller Estlack, who died in 1933 at the age of 74. I posted on my personal Facebook page that article detailing the life of this hearty pioneer woman who did her part to settle the West. And that set off a virtually viral reaction among my cousins and resulted in the exchanging of photos of our ancestor that some of us had never seen.

All this makes me wonder what Ben or Ella or their grandkids might find fascinating after I am long laid to rest in Citizens Cemetery. Will they be as fascinated with our lives as we are of those who came before us? Will they find interest in our weekly struggles and victories?

More importantly, I wonder if our generation is upholding the words of former Mayor W.H. Patrick who called on his fellow citizens in 1938 to “rededicate our lives and talents – our all – to the perpetuity of the pioneer spirit in our beloved land of the Southwest,” and if we are properly passing that determination and those virtues on to our children.

Donley County folks come from hearty stock and we are proud to take this moment to remember those old pioneers who came before us. Let us honor them by continuing to work to improve this place we call home.

We hope you enjoy this year’s Donley County LEADER, and we wish you all a very glorious Independence Day.

Finding humor in real life situations

In the company of three physicians and a veterinarian recently during a three-day span, I queried their personnel about day-to-day occurrences that make them smile.

In three cases, answers came quickly. The vet, however, thoughtfully detailed a foul-up at a clinic decades ago. Hearing the account makes me wonder if it is included in lectures at the mother school of veterinary medicine, Texas A&M University. If not, it should be.

I now present them, one at a time.....

The staffer at Ophthalmology Associates says this one happens daily. When patients are asked to open their eyes, some can’t. “Okay,” she says, “Open your mouth.” Almost always, both eyes and mouth fly open.

A hygienist at Dr. Marshall Brown’s office confirms the “trick” works in reverse, too, admitting, though, that patients can almost always open their mouths on command.

For her, humor comes regularly after patients stretch out in the dental chair. As she prepares to take blood pressure readings, it is common to ask them to uncross their legs. More times than not, she claims, their legs are crossed, either right over left, or vice versa. They almost always simply reverse the leg crossing configuration, at which time she says – politely, I should add – “No, let’s try it again. Uncross your legs. When they are side by side, I can get an accurate reading.”...

At Solis Women’s Health, there aren’t as many predictable humor moments as there were when the women’s lockers had no locks. Now they have keys, not that larceny was ever prevalent. Occasional absent-mindedness and leanings toward senility are obvious, but not nearly as often as when there were no locks. (Please try not to get ahead of me!)

For years, some patients forgot which lockers were theirs. And yes, they left ALL clothing items in the lockers, donning instead those contrary gowns that have strings in the back that are hard to tie or snaps difficult to get lined up.

Sometimes, patients who entered in orange pant suits might depart in purple dresses, usually only minutes before another patient is screaming, “Someone stole all my clothes!” Usually, the offending patient discovers her mistake and returns immediately for the “big swap.” Occasionally, though, they had to be reminded....

The vet story, long ago and far away, perhaps involves forgetfulness at best or senility at worst. One morning, a fellow brought in his dog. After listening to the vet rattle off all the problems and learning the dog was near death, he decided the humane thing to do was have the dog put down.

The vet said he would take care of the matter. The dog was bedded down at the clinic, and the man returned to his home nearby. Oh, no! The vet simply forgot and somehow the dog managed to get out the back door. At day’s end, the pet owner called the vet, asking, the idle american

by don newbury

“Did you put my dog down?” The vet answered affirmatively, figuring he could still do so within minutes to correct an outright lie.

“Well, there’s something I can’t understand,” said the perplexed owner. “There’s a dog at my back door, and he looks exactly like mine.”...

I can’t leave veterinary stories without recounting one said to have occurred during the Depression. A contrary woman the vet hated to see coming showed up at the end of a harried week. He dreaded the tirade that always accompanied her learning “going rates.”

She felt it was time to put down her ancient cat. She asked the vet what the charge would be. He answered, “Seven dollars.” She was livid, dismayed it would cost anywhere close to that. “Is there any way you can do it cheaper?” she questioned.

Rubbing his chin, he answered, “Tell you what. I’ll take the cat out back and choke it to death for $2.”...

By the way, the doctor who performed my recent retina surgery is pleased with the progress, and my hygienist is reducing thrice-annual visits to two.

I’m still plodding along in 18th year since open-heart surgery and my wife is in her seventh year since breast cancer surgery. And our dogs? Doing great; no vet bills yet this month. We are blessed....

A toast to America’s military folks

By Tumbleweed Smith

In 1969, when Thomas Padilla of Big Spring was in the Army stationed in Europe, he visited a tavern in Innsbruck, Austria. One of the patrons went to Thomas’s table and knocked three times, indicating he wanted to visit. Thomas returned the knock and the man sat down. Thomas was able to speak some German, so the two started a conversation. They exchanged cigarettes and found out a little about each other. Then the man got up and announced to the crowd that an American sergeant from Texas was on the premises. That was enough to get the party started.

“I was being bombarded with questions,” says Thomas, “like ‘do you have a gun?’ ‘do you have a horse?’ ‘do you have a ranch?’ ‘how many oil wells do you have?’ ‘do you ride with a posse to chase bad people?’ They started bringing me these one-liter beers. I don’t know how many I had on my table. Then in unison they all said, ‘prost, America’ and repeated it three times. I raised my glass in appreciation.”

The oompah band struck up a Texas tune.

“I was sitting there with all the commotion going on and wasn’t listening very close, then it started sounding familiar. I finally recognized the melody. It was The Yellow Rose of Texas.”

Thomas says everybody was having a good time and all of a sudden it got real quiet, like somebody turned off the switch. People who were sitting down stood up. A twelve-year-old girl entered, followed by an elderly gentleman. Thomas thought he must be somebody extremely important in the community. The girl walked up to Thomas and asked if he was an American. Before he answered, Thomas thought to himself, ‘in Innsbruck I’m considered an American. In Texas I’m considered a Mexican.’

He proudly replied yes, he was an American. The young girl said the man

texas tales
by tumbleweed smith

with her was her grandfather and he wanted to tell Thomas something. The man didn’t speak English, so the girl said she would translate.

“When the Nazis were here,” said the gentlemen through his granddaughter, “we were being suppressed and being controlled and it was horrible. Then one morning, there was a lot of commotion outside, lots of screaming and hollering. I ran out and asked one of the citizens what was going on. The citizen replied that the Nazis were running. ‘They’re getting out of town. The Americans are coming. Right now they’re on the outskirts of the city with tanks.’”

The grandfather continued, “The Americans came through, but they didn’t bother to stop. They just kept on going. I wanted to stop them and give them thanks for getting the Nazis out. But I never had the opportunity to see another American military person. One of the citizens that was in this gasthaus ran over to my house and told me that an American soldier was here. So here I am. I want to thank you for getting the Nazis out of Innsbruck.”

mitment to creating a fairer and more effective criminal justice system, reduce recidivism, and combat the impact of mass incarceration on families and communities through educational opportunity.

The US has the highest incarceration rate in the world with approximately 2.2 million people incarcerated in American prisons and jails. Hundreds of thousands of individuals are released annually from these facilities. A Department of Justice-funded 2013 study found that individuals who participated in correctional education were 43 percent less likely to return to prison within three years than those who did not participate in any correctional education programs.

“The evidence is clear. Promoting the education and job training for incarcerated individuals makes communities safer by reducing recidivism and saves taxpayer dollars by lowering the direct and collateral costs of incarceration,” said US Secretary of Education John B. King Jr. “I applaud the institutions that have partnered to develop high-quality programs that will equip these students with invaluable learning. The knowledge and skills they acquire will promote successful reintegration and enable them to become active and engaged citizens.”

Experimental sites, such as the Second Chance Pell pilot program, allow the Department to test innovative practices in the delivery of Pell Grant dollars and use the resulting evidence to inform improvements in policies and processes in federal student aid. Under the experimental sites authority of section 487A(b) of the Higher Education Act (HEA), the Secretary will waive existing financial aid rules that prohibit otherwise eligible students who are incarcerated from accessing Pell Grants. A 1994 Congressional change to the HEA eliminated Pell Grant eligibility for incarcerated individuals in Federal and state penal institutions.

Selected colleges and universities will partner with 141 federal and state penal institutions to enroll roughly 12,000 incarcerated students in educational and training programs. Through the Second Chance Pell pilot program, these institutions may provide Federal Pell Grants to qualified students who are incarcerated and are likely to be released within five years of enrolling in coursework.

Annual forage crop insurance sign-up deadline

AMARILLO – Although recent rains have livestock producers looking at green pastures, most know it can turn dry quickly and may want protection against drought loss on annual forage crops, according to a Texas A&M AgriLife Extension Service specialist.

The first deadline to sign up for the Rainfall Index – Annual Forage Insurance plan, known as RI-AF, is coming in July, said DeDe Jones, AgriLife Extension risk management specialist in Amarillo.

The risk policy is designed to allow livestock producers to look at possible future weather conditions and buy protection against losses due to a lack of moisture, Jones said.

The sign-up deadline for RI-AF is July 15 for the fall growing season, Sept. 1 through March 31, 2017. Dec. 15 is the deadline for the spring season, which is March 1-Sept. 30, 2017.

Payment is not determined by individual damages, but rather area losses based on a grid system, she said. RI-AF requires coverage on all certified acres not intended for grain production, and the same crop can't be covered on both a multi-peril policy and RI-AF policy.

Coverage levels between 70 and 90 percent of annual rainfall are available, she said. A loss is triggered when actual rainfall for an area is less than the chosen coverage level for the time period selected.

Producers also choose a protection factor between 60 and 150 percent, which is a price multiplier that allows an increase or decrease in the policy's base value. Each county has a base value established by the Risk Management Agency.

To sign up, producers should contact their crop insurance agent.

The Clarendon Lions Club held its regular Tuesday noon meeting June 28 with Boss Lion Jacob Fangman in charge.

We had 13 members and three guests – Cassidy Riza, guest of Lion Robert Riza; and Nathan and Daniel Estlack, guests of Lion Scarlet Estlack.

A sign-up sheet was filled in to staff the bounce houses Saturday. Those will be run from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Lions Hall, and wristbands will cost $5.

Officer installations is usually held the first Tuesday in July, but with several incoming officers out of town next week, Boss Lion Fangman will retain command until the second week of July.

Lion Riza reported on the college which was chosen by the US Dept. of Education as a pilot for the 2nd Chance Pell for prisoners program. Clarendon is one of seven colleges in Texas chosen for the pilot and is the only college west of I-35 in the state.

Lion Mike Norrell reported that some local athletes had gotten all-state recognition, and Lion John Howard reported on the county.

Lion Scarlet Estlack presented a program on planting native plants to attract and raise butterflies. Her message was simple... “Don’t squash that caterpillar.”

There being no further business, we were adjourned to spread Lionism and good cheer throughout our fair county.

Research before you donate

Hi, gang! Hope your summer is going well. A couple of good articles this week with people asking for your help for people that have lost everything. Please don't give to any charity, check them out before giving. There are many people in need of help but money to scammers is just lost. Do the research it only takes a little time and remember it is your hard earned money the scammers are wanting.

"A false appeal to your sense of charity" by Aditi Jhaveri, Consumer Education Specialist, FTC

If you get a call asking you to give to a charity, you might be tempted to say yes without a second thought. But as with any call you get from someone asking for money out of the blue, pause and do some research to avoid fraudsters who try to take advantage of your generosity.

Unfortunately, there are for-profit companies like American Handicapped and Disadvantaged Workers, Inc. (AHDW) that pretend to be charitable organizations and lie about how they use donations. The FTC sued AHDW for deceiving people and shut them down.

Here's the story: AHDW's telemarketers called and asked people to donate either by giving money or buying overpriced household products from them. These telemarketers, often falsely claiming to be disabled themselves, implied that most of the money raised would be used to pay wages to disabled employees at the company. And as a bonus, people were told they'd get a free gift in the mail for donating. In reality, most of the telemarketers weren't disabled, and only a small portion of the company's earnings were paid to AHDW's few disabled employees. And those free gifts people got in the mail? They came with invoices, followed by harassing calls demanding payment for products people never ordered.

If you get a call about buying overpriced products to support a charity: Do some research. Confirm an organization is really a charity before committing to spend extra money. That "charity" might be a for-profit company trying to trick you into overpaying for things you routinely buy. You can search for names on this list of tax-exempt organizations from the IRS, or check with the BBB or your state Attorney General. Don't pay for unordered merchandise. You can keep any gifts you get in the mail from a charitable organization that asks for contributions. If you didn't order it, you don't have to pay for it even if someone sends a bill or calls you saying otherwise.

It's legal for charities to call and ask for donations, even if your number is on the Do Not Call Registry. But it's against the law for telemarketers to imply they're from a charitable organization when they're not. For more tips on spotting a charity scam, check out our article Before Giving to a Charity.

"“Doctor Trusted” couldn't be trusted" by Aditi Jhaveri, Consumer Education Specialist, FTC

by bob watson

Do you ever shop online for health products, like dietary supplements? Maybe you've seen various seals and certificates on sites you visit showing that a site is secure, or that products on the site have been tested and evaluated. You'd think you could trust those seals and certificates but unfortunately, that's not always the case. The FTC recently announced a settlement with SmartClick Media, a company that sold deceptive "Doctor Trusted" health seals to over 800 websites.

When people clicked on the seal, they were told products were "carefully evaluated by an independent medical doctor," and the website was making "reasonable science-based health claims." In reality, the seals were meaningless, according to the FTC. The agency found that two doctors were paid to quickly review the sites, but they didn't evaluate any of the products for safety or effectiveness. That wasn't SmartClick Media's only deception, the FTC says. The company also misled people by promoting its own site, betterlivingjournal.org, as an independent blog with unbiased advice on health products. But it was really just a bunch of ads for health products in disguise. And SmartClick Media made money from people clicking on or buying from the site. So what's the takeaway? Don't rely on a seal or a lifestyle blog alone when making decisions about whether to trust the quality and safety of health products. Do some research, and ask your doctor before taking dietary supplements that you find online or in a store.

Be safe out there.

Come Celebrate the Fourth

Last Friday was my sister's birthday party, and she invited four of her friends to spend the night and have a tea party; and me and my cousin Daniel got to serve sandwiches and fruit.

Last weekend, me and my cousins built a swing out of a lasso, and we can take it down and move it to their tree in their front yard. Also last weekend, my older cousin Nathan got to go to a Boy Scout camp and got three badges.

This weekend is Clarendon's Fourth of July celebration. I like the celebration because it brings people together and it's close to my sister's birthday. We watch fireworks for a couple of days usually. We also go to the rodeo, and I also like being in the parade. This year I'm going to be a Bulldog bobble head in the college's float. I think I'm going to have a lot of fun this year doing that.

The Fourth of July is the day they signed the Declaration of Independence to make America free from England. Then George Washington defeated the British in war. They wanted to make him a king afterward but he didn't believe in that, so they elected him president.

Independence Day for America

A parade, barbeque and gathering on the courthouse lawn, rodeo and dancing on the slab, turtle races and fireworks on the lake; all celebrating the Declaration of Independence of the United States in Donley County, Texas in 2016.

What really happened on July 4, 1776? That was the day the Second Continental Congress approved the final wording of the Declaration of Independence and that date is on the copy that is displayed at the National Archives in Washington, DC. This document states, "Action of Second Continental Congress, July 4, 1776, The Unanimous Declaration of the Thirteen United States of America." The preamble begins, "When in the course of human events it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve political bands which have connected them to another" and continues to the introduction, "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their creator certain unalienable rights, that among these are Life, Liberty, and the pursuit of Happiness."

Oh, my goodness! I heard this was the greatest break-up letter of all time, and I would say this group of guys were mad. Ole King George

III of England needed money to pay for all his wars, especially against the French, and his answer to obtaining more money was tax the colonies. The America colonies with tobacco, timber, cotton, and many other resources were well-to-do but were only allowed by George to trade with England.

The final blow came when all American ports were closed and American ships were seized by England and word also arrived saying Ole George was hiring German mercenaries to fight the Americans. Pay close attention to this; on June 7, 1776 Richard Henry Lee, a delegate from Virginia submitted a resolution declaring independence and John Adams read a fiery speech before the Second Continental Congress which led to the Committee of Five.

These five men, Thomas Jefferson, Ben Franklin, Roger Sherman, John Adams and Robert R. Livingston, were appointed to write that declaration. After a few days of

'wick picks
by peggy cockerham
Howardwick • 874-2886

rough drafts, they appointed Thomas Jefferson the job of writing the document and planned to meet July 2, 1776.

What? The committee of 5 were appointed June 7 and wanted a completed document by July 2? These days the shape of the table wouldn't be decided on, much less the type of chair they would use. Nevertheless, Jefferson presented that document on July 2, opportunity for changes were made and the Declaration of Independence was ratified on July 4, 1776, by unanimous decision of all 13 states and signed by 56 very brave men. These men understood what they were doing, signing their death warrant if captured but the last sentence says it all, "And for the support of this Declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes, and our scared Honor".

As we participate in the activities of the fourth, give thanks to those brave forefathers who fought for our freedom.

As you wander around the courthouse lawn on July 2, look for the bake sale the Howardwick Fire Dept. will have; buy something good and support a good cause.

FLIP BREEDLOVE

In the history of July Fourth Celebrations in Clarendon, one man stands out has having a long-time contribution to the festivities. The late H.M. "Flip" Breedlove moved to Clarendon in 1935 to start a 31-year career as the Donley County Agent. During his career, he was in charge of the annual July 4th barbecue for more than 20 years at a time when thousands attended the celebration.

A 1972 article in The Clarendon Press, stated: "Flip has more friends than most anyone because of a quality that is an intricate part of his personality. He has considered everyone he has ever met to be his friend. Longtime friends say they have never heard Flip say a bad word against anyone."

Flip passed away in 2001, but his spirit still resounds in today's Saints' Roost Celebration.

The Whistle-Stop and the community salute the memory of Flip Breedlove for his love of Donley County and his dedication to its people and their children. Thank you, Flip!

USDA announces new assistance to help rural utility customers conserve energy, lower bills

TEMPLE, TEXAS, June 21, 2016 – Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack today announced a new program that will help rural residents conserve energy and save money on their utility bills. The new Rural Energy Savings Program (RESP) will make $52 million in loans available to energy providers to help rural families and small businesses reduce their energy use.

“Investments like the ones we will make through the Rural Energy Savings Program not only reduce energy costs for consumers, but also build a cleaner and more sustainable energy future,” Vilsack said. “This program is the latest of many financing options USDA provides to rural communities to expand energy efficiency efforts and strengthen rural economies.”

“RESP will provide loans to rural energy providers who in turn fund projects for consumers to make energy efficiency improvements in their homes and businesses that will lower their energy use,” said USDA Rural Development Texas State Director Paco Valentin. “We would like to encourage all of our current and former Rural Utilities Service borrowers or entities that provide retail electric service in rural Texas areas to consider this program.”

RESP borrowers finance loans at zero percent interest for up to 20 years, making the program an attractive and affordable option to finance energy-saving measures. Energy customers participating in programs financed through RESP then repay the loans at an interest rate of up to 3 percent for up to 10 years through their electric bills.

RESP builds upon the work that USDA Rural Development has done to help improve the energy efficiency of single- and multi-family housing, businesses, farms and utilities. It aligns with the Obama Administration’s StrikeForce for Rural Growth and Opportunity and Promise Zone initiatives to help revitalize communities and expand economic opportunity through targeted funding, technical assistance and partnerships. RESP will be used to focus on low-income, high-energy-cost communities.

Congress authorized the program in the 2014 Farm Bill. RUS administers RESP as well as the similar Energy Efficiency and Conservation Loan Program (EECLP). RESP is open to a broader pool of eligible borrowers, has a zero percent interest rate, and has a longer loan term than EECLP. To be considered for RESP funding, applicants should submit a letter of intent by August 5, 2016. E-mail the letter of intent to RESP@wdc.usda.gov. Applications will be processed on a first-come/first-served basis until funds are expended. For additional information, see page 40262 of the June 21 Federal Register (<https://www.federalregister.gov/articles/2016/06/21/2016-14617/announcement-of-loan-application-procedures-and-deadlines-for-the-rural-energy-savings-program-resp>).

USDA’s Rural Utilities Service also administers infrastructure programs that bring broadband, safe drinking water and improved wastewater treatment facilities to rural communities.

DPS: leaving children in vehicles can be deadly

AUSTIN – The Texas Department of Public Safety (DPS) is warning residents that warmer weather places children at greater risk of injury or death if left unattended in a vehicle. Every year children die from heatstroke after being left in a vehicle or entering a vehicle unnoticed. A child should never be left unattended in a vehicle.

“Because the consequences can be deadly, DPS urges parents and caregivers to always make sure children are accounted for and not left behind in a car,” said DPS Director Steven McCraw. “Members of the public can also do their part to keep kids safe by notifying emergency personnel if they witness a child alone or in distress inside a vehicle – regardless of the weather.”

According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, temperatures inside a car can rise more than 20 degrees in only 10 minutes; and even with an outside temperature of 60 degrees, the temperature inside a car can reach 110 degrees. Leaving windows partially rolled down does not help. In addition, young children are particularly at risk since their bodies heat up faster than an adult.

DPS offers the following tips for preventing vehicular heatstroke deaths and injuries:

- Always check the back seats of your vehicle before walking away.
- Establish reminders that help ensure you remove children from the vehicle. For example: leave your bag, lunch or cell phone in the back seat with the child’s car seat.
- Call 9-1-1 if you see a child alone in a car, and emergency personnel will instruct you what to do next.

- If a child goes missing, open the doors and trunks to every vehicle in the area. Many heatstroke deaths occur when a child accesses a parked car unnoticed.
- Teach children not to play in vehicles and make sure to place the keys out of reach when not being used.

For more information, visit www.safercar.gov/parents/index.htm.

Additionally, don’t forget animals are also susceptible to heat-related injury or death – don’t put your pets in these dangerous conditions.

USDA reminds americans to avoid foodborne bacteria

WASHINGTON – No matter where you find yourself on the Fourth of July, you will probably see lots of food, beverages and grass-stained sneakers. Whether you're enjoying a barbecue in the great outdoors, traveling to see family or friends, or spending time at home, the US Department of Agriculture's (USDA) Food Safety and Inspection Service (FSIS) is urging everyone to take extra food safety precautions when planning their menu.

The US Centers for Disease Control and Prevention estimates that 1 in 6 Americans (that's 48 million people) suffer from food-borne illness each year, resulting in roughly 128,000 hospitalizations and 3,000 deaths.

"Because foodborne bacteria thrive and multiply more quickly in warmer temperatures, foodborne illness can spike during summer," said Deputy Under Secretary for Food Safety Al Almanza. "This is likely because people are spending more time outside – away from the sink and equipment in the kitchen that help consumers keep food safe."

The Danger Zone is the temperature range between 40 °F and 140 °F in which foodborne bacteria can grow rapidly to dangerous levels that can cause illness. Leaving perishables out too long in the Danger Zone is one of the most common mistakes people make, especially during warmer months. The USDA's Meat and Poultry Hotline, staffed by USDA food safety experts, routinely gets calls from consumers with questions about the perishable foods left out too long. Below are their recommendations on how to steer clear of the Danger Zone this Fourth of July:

- Without refrigeration or a heat source, perishables should not be left out more than two hours if the temperature is at or below 90 °F, and only one hour if the temperature is at or above 90 °F. Since the weather will likely be very hot on July 4th, food should be returned to the cooler within an hour. If you are not sure how long food has been sitting out, throw it out immediately.
- Always keep cold food COLD, at or below 40 °F, in coolers or in containers with a cold source such as ice or frozen gel packs. Keep hot food HOT, at or above 140 °F, on the grill or in insulated containers, heated chafing dishes, warming trays and/or slow cookers. If food needs to be reheated, reheat it to 165 °F.

- Pack an appliance thermometer in your cooler to ensure food stays at or below 40 °F. Divide large amounts of food into shallow containers for fast chilling and easier use.
- Packing drinks in a separate cooler is strongly recommended, so the food cooler isn't opened frequently. Keep the cooler in the shade, and try to cover it with a blanket or tarp to keep it cool. Replenish the ice if it melts.
- Use the food thermometer to check the internal temperature of meat, poultry and seafood. Use our Is It Done Yet? guide to learn where to place the thermometer in each item. You absolutely cannot tell whether the meat is safely cooked by just looking.
- If you plan to marinate meat and/or poultry for several hours or overnight prior to the event, make sure to marinate them in the refrigerator – not on the counter. If you plan to reuse the marinade from raw meat or poultry, make sure to boil it first to destroy any harmful bacteria.

- To ensure safety, leftovers must be put in shallow containers for quick cooling and refrigerated to 40 °F or below within two hours.

If you have food storage questions, download our FoodKeeper application. This app offers guidance on the safe storage or more than 400 food and beverage items. It'll give you a peace of mind knowing you served your dish safely.

As always, FSIS would like everyone to remember the four easy food safety steps of Clean, Separate, Cook and Chill and have a food safe Fourth of July! If you have questions about the Danger Zone, or any other food safety topics, call the USDA Meat & Poultry Hotline at 1-888MPHotline or chat live with a food safety specialist at AskKaren.gov. These services are available from 10:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. Eastern Time, Monday through Friday, in English and Spanish.

DPS increases traffic enforcement for Fourth of July

AMARILLO – The Texas Department of Public Safety (DPS) is encouraging Texans to make safe driving practices a priority during the July Fourth holiday weekend. From July 1 – July 4, DPS Troopers will join law enforcement from across the state in looking for drunk drivers, and speeding, seat belt and other traffic violators.

"DPS is calling on Texans to help keep our roadways and communities safe by celebrating responsibly and using extra caution during Independence Day festivities," said DPS Director Steven McCraw. "During the holiday weekend, Troopers will be on the lookout for impaired and dangerous drivers; and anyone who plans to drink alcohol should also plan to take alternate transportation or designate a sober driver."

During the 2015 Fourth of July enforcement period, DPS Troopers made 496 DWI arrests, and issued 7,211 speeding citations, 1,156 seat belt/child safety seat citations and 1,007 no insurance citations. In addition, Troopers made 268 fugitive arrests and 187 felony arrests.

According to the Texas Department of Transportation, in 2015, 960 people were killed in motor vehicle traffic crashes where a driver was under the influence of alcohol, accounting for 27 percent of the total number of last year's traffic fatalities. DPS offers the following tips for a safe July Fourth holiday:

- Do not drink and drive.
- Slow down – especially in bad weather, construction areas, traffic and unfamiliar areas.
- Monitor weather conditions.

In the event of inclement weather, avoid high water and use extra caution on roadways.

- Eliminate distractions while driving, including the use of mobile devices.

- Buckle up everyone in the vehicle – it's the law ... "Click It or Ticket."
- Be careful when driving off road since hot catalytic converters can ignite dry vegetation.
- Never toss a cigarette out of a car window, and don't put cigarettes out on the ground.
- Keep a fire extinguisher and water handy if cooking outdoors or during a campfire.
- Slow down or move over for tow trucks and police, fire, EMS and Texas Department of Transportation vehicles stopped on the side of the road with emergency lights activated – it's the law.
- Also, move over a lane or slow down if you see a fellow motorist on the side of the road.

For more information on how to protect against wildfires, visit Texas A&M Forest Service at <http://texas-forestservice.tamu.edu/default.aspx>.

HHSC seeking grant applications to help veterans and their families

AUSTIN – Texas is reaching out to community non-profits and local governments, announcing the availability of up to $20 million to help veterans and their families find the mental health services they need.

The Health and Human Services Commission will issue a Request for Applications for Phase II of the Texas Veterans + Family Alliance grant program. The program focuses on providing community collaboratives with grant funds to address the mental health needs of veterans and their families that are not currently being met.

“Not all wounds are visible, and the needs for our fighting men and women and their families are priority obligations for Texas,” Health and Human Services Executive Commissioner Charles Smith said. “These programs will help those whose suffering continues after the fighting ends.”

The Texas Veterans + Family Alliance was created by state Sen. Jane Nelson in the 2015 session and has already awarded about $1 million in its first phase.

The community programs must match the grant dollar-for-dollar, bringing together state, local organizations and the private sector to meet the specific needs of veterans in their communities.

Visit the Electronic State Business Daily website to find the application. Applications for the one-year grants are due Aug. 1.

For information regarding the Texas Veterans + Family Alliance grant program, please email MentalHealthTX@hhsc.state.tx.us. For questions regarding the RFA for the Phase II Texas Veterans + Family Alliance funding, please contact HHSC Procurement Project Manager Robert Sonnier at Robert.Sonnier@hhsc.state.tx.us.

Fixing and expanding roadway system can bring economic benefits

(AUSTIN) — Poor roads cost Texans money – and sometimes their lives. Yet transportation infrastructure spending positively affects local and state economies by connecting businesses, customers, goods and services more efficiently, which in turn enhances business expansion and road safety.

In the latest issue of Fiscal Notes, the Comptroller’s office continues its examination of Texas road finance by turning to the economic impact of road construction. A Comptroller study indicates that $25 million in road spending in urban areas can add as much as $43 billion to the state economy over time.

“In addition to immediate employment in construction and related industries, road projects yield long-term benefits by improving our productivity and economic competitiveness,” Texas Comptroller Glenn Hegar said.

Fiscal Notes is an extension of the Comptroller’s constitutional responsibilities to monitor the state’s economy and estimate state government revenues. It has been published periodically since 1975, featuring in-depth analysis concerning state finances and original research by subject-matter experts in the Comptroller’s office.

Published monthly, Fiscal Notes is online at comptroller.texas.gov/fiscalnotes, and can also be received by subscribing via the Comptroller’s website.

Brush identification, control topic of webinar

COLLEGE STATION – Brush Identification and Control Measures will be the name of a July 7 natural resources webinar conducted by the Texas A&M AgriLife Extension Service ecosystem science and management unit.

The webinar is a part of the Texas Range Webinar Series scheduled the first Thursday of each month from noon to 1 p.m., said Pete Flores, webinar coordinator in Corpus Christi.

This month’s presenter is Dr. Bob Lyons, AgriLife Extension range specialist and Texas A&M University ecosystem science and management associate department head, Uvalde.

“Different species of brush are troublesome to landowners across Texas,” Lyons said. “Often times, the focus of webinars or presentations are on the main species, such as honey mesquite. This webinar will cover a number of invasive brush species and explain the best ways to control these plants on rangelands.”

The webinar is approved for one Texas Department of Agriculture continuing education unit in the integrated pest management category for pesticide applicators.

Participants seeking Texas Department of Agriculture continuing education units must pay a $10 fee on the website. For all others, there is no fee, Flores said.

This webinar and others in the series can be accessed at <http://naturalresourcewebinars.tamu.edu>. For more information on the webinars, contact Flores at Pete.Flores@ag.tamu.edu.

As we celebrate Independence Day, we are once again reminded that freedom is not free. Just as America fought for independence in 1776, American troops continue to defend freedom around the world today. July Fourth is a day to honor the men and women who have sacrificed so much to protect our liberty. It’s a day to proudly celebrate our great country and the ideals it represents.

FDA Approves Nitroglycerin as a Powder

The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) recently approved GoNitro (nitroglycerin) sublingual powder for the relief and prevention of certain heart problems. A sublingual powder is administered under the tongue to allow for quick absorption of the medication into the blood. Nitroglycerin works by widening blood vessels to allow for more blood flow. Nitroglycerin is always prescribed to people who already had a heart attack because it is an emergency medication until help arrives. Nitroglycerin is also used by people with other conditions where there is less blood flow to the heart.

GoNitro will be commercially available towards the latter half of the year as single packages with four hundred micrograms of medication. The clinical trials showed that a higher amount of nitroglycerin was absorbed into the body in GoNitro compared to the Nitrolingual Pumpspray; both of these formulations are manufactured by Espero Pharmaceuticals.
