Local woman jailed for June 23 burglary

A Clarendon woman remains in jail this week following her arrest for burglarizing a local business.

Jennifer Nichole Steele, age 38, was being held on a $5,000 bond for breaking into the Clarendon Outpost and stealing money.

Donley County Sheriff Butch Blackburn said his office was called about 5:45 a.m. on June 23 after the business' drive thru window was discovered broken out. Deputy Oddie Smith investigated and determined Steele was responsible. He arrested her later that same day.

Blackburn said Steele is also wanted out of Colorado for burglary in that state as well.

The sheriff's office also recently responded to a vehicle theft at Clarendon ISD.

Blackburn said a pickup truck was reported stolen from the school bus barn on June 20. The sheriff department's investigation identified 17-year-old Levi Hazelwood as the lone suspect in that case, and a warrant has been issued for his arrest.

The Parker Heights Police Department, near Killeen, recovered the pickup on June 26. Blackburn said Hazelwood has family in that area.

Court gives Carroll 14-year sentence

The District Court heard five pleas when it met in Clarendon on Monday, July 2, at the Donley County Courthouse.

District Attorney Luke Inman, along with Assistant District Attorney Harley Caudle, prosecuted the cases for the State of Texas, with the Honorable Judge Stuart Messer presiding.

Thomas Lee Wayne Carroll was convicted and sentenced to 14 years in the Institutional Division of the TDCJ for the second degree felony offense of assault on a public servant, enhanced.

Carroll, 31 from Clarendon, was arrested by Donley County Deputy Randy Stubblefield on April 10, 2017. Carroll originally was placed on felony probation when he pleaded guilty on October 10, 2017.

The State filed its motion to adjudicate on April 2, 2018, alleging three violations of community supervision. Pursuant to the plea agreement, Carroll is also required to pay a $6,000 fine to Donley County and $398 in court costs.

Britany Marie Maxey pleaded guilty and was placed on deferred adjudication community supervision for eight years for the first degree felony offense of possession of a controlled substance in penalty group 2, THC.

Maxey, 24 from Tuscon, Ariz., was arrested in Carson County by DPS Trooper Robert Bowden on June 2, 2018. Maxey pleaded guilty to an information filed by the State on June 29, 2018.

Pursuant to the plea agreement, Maxey is also required to pay a fine of $8,000 to Carson County, $336 in court costs, $180

Train smashes truck

A semi-truck carrying an oversized load for Moved By Love, LLC, was moved by a Burlington Northern Santa Fe freight train Saturday afternoon, June 30.

The Department of Public Safety said the truck driver, Cedric Lynn Hornbuckle of Houston, was southbound on FM 1260 following another oversized load, carrying coils of large pipe, when the first truck came to US 287. The first truck stopped at the highway; and although the railroad signals began flashing, the drivers thought they could both get onto the highway. The first truck could not move quick enough, and the crossing arms came down on the second truck. Hornbuckle escaped, and no injuries occurred.

The railroad crossing remained closed for repairs until Tuesday. Hornbuckle was issued an citation for disregarding a railroad crossing.

Law enforcement personnel respond to a train v. truck incident Saturday afternoon.

Rural college board taps CC president

Clarendon College President Dr. Robert Riza has been appointed to the Commission on Small and Rural Colleges at the American Association of Community Colleges (AACC).

"Obviously it is an honor to be chosen to serve on this commission," Riza said. "I look forward to working with my colleagues from around the country."

CC serves Donley, Gray, Childress, Armstrong, Briscoe, Hall, Collingsworth, and Wheeler counties in the eastern Texas Panhandle, and has dual credit partnerships with Miami ISD in Roberts County and Panhandle, White Deer, and Groom ISDs in Carson County. The college, which has four campuses (Clarendon, Pampa, Childress and Amarillo) has more than a $44.5 million impact on the region.

While CC is a small community college, its size is an advantage in terms of student success.

"Being one of the smallest schools in Texas isn't an issue, we don't use our size as an excuse but as motivation to achieve great things," Riza said.

Walter G. Bumphus, Ph.D., president and CEO of the AACC, wrote in a letter to Dr. Riza, "We are sure that your insights and leadership will significantly contribute to the Board's decision-making process and its ability to serve the interests of all AACC member institutions."

This appointment is a three-year term, and Riza will serve through June 2021.

City raises cost of water to Greenbelt

The City of Clarendon voted to renew its contract with Greenbelt Water Authority for the sale of groundwater during the regular city council meeting June 29.

Aldermen voted to increase the price the city charges Greenbelt for raw water from 53 cents per thousand gallons to 58 cents.

The council then voted in a separate motion to approve a new three-year contract with the water authority for that rate.

In other city business, Mayor Sandy Skelton read a proclamation recognizing the JA Ranch for its contribution of $25,000 to the city's water recreation project.

The council met in closed session for 25 minutes for the annual evaluation of City Secretary Machiel Covey. Following the closed session, aldermen voted to give Covey a four percent salary increase and raise her car allowance from $40 per month to $80.

In his report, City Administrator David Dockery gave an update on code compliance work, said the city is accepting bank depository bids, and said a pre-construction meeting will be held soon on the USDA water infrastructure project.

Aldermen also spent some time working on the fiscal year 2019 budget.

Mayor Skelton announced the Texas Municipal League's next Region 2 meeting will be hosted by Tulia and held in Amarillo on July 19. The council also received a thank you note from the Bread of Life for its donation to the food pantry.

President’s ‘Travel Ban’ a ‘Muslim Ban’

By Ilya Somin, Cato Institute

There are none so blind as they who choose not to see. That saying captures the grave error the Supreme Court made in Tuesday’s travel ban decision. In a 5-4 ruling written by Chief Justice John Roberts, the justices largely upheld President Donald Trump’s “proclamation” banning nearly all entry into the United States by citizens of five Muslim-majority nations.

They did so even though, during the 2016 campaign, Trump repeatedly called for a “Muslim ban” forbidding Muslims from entering the United States. When he later switched to a “territorial” ban focusing on Muslim-majority nations, he repeatedly equated this new approach with his original policy, and even called it an “expansion” of the earlier Muslim ban.

The overwhelming majority of the people barred by the “proclamation” are Muslim, and there is little if any evidence indicating that their exclusion protects national security. Over the past 40 years, the number of people killed in terrorist attacks on U.S. soil by entrants from any of the five nations is zero. On average, they probably pose less risk than even native-born Americans.

In any other circumstance, such clear and overwhelming evidence of discriminatory motive, combined with the absence of legitimate justifications, would be a violation of the First Amendment, which bans government policies that discriminate on the basis of religion. The court has repeatedly ruled that evidence of discriminatory motive targeting people on the basis of race, ethnicity or religion can invalidate even a seemingly “neutral” policy that does not explicitly mention the forbidden classification, unless the government can prove it would have adopted the same policy for legitimate reasons.

Just three weeks ago, in the Masterpiece Cake-shop case, the court invalidated a judgment against a baker who had violated state anti-discrimination laws by refusing to provide a cake for a same-sex wedding, on the grounds that two of seven members of a state agency that reviewed his case expressed hostility to his religious beliefs.

The evidence of bigoted motivation in the travel ban case is far stronger.

Chief Justice Roberts’ opinion cites Trump’s statements, and assumes that they are relevant evidence. Nonetheless, he essentially ignores their impact by ruling that legal challenges to presidential decisions on immigration policy are subject only to minimal “rational basis” review that can be satisfied so long as there is a plausible basis for the policy.

This approach comes close to gutting the Bill of Rights as a constraint on presidential power over immigration. Almost any discriminatory exclusion can be justified on the theory that the people barred pose some sort of threat, especially if the courts refuse to consider the quality of the evidence that supposedly justifies such claims.

Nothing in the Constitution justifies such near total exclusion of immigration policy from the constraints of the First Amendment. Like most of the rest of the Bill of Rights, the amendment is phrased as a general constraint on government power, not one limited to particular types of policies, or protecting only a specific group of people, such as citizens of the United States. The Founding generation recognized this, which is why they applied the Bill of Rights even to pirates captured at sea, regardless of whether they were American citizens or not.

It is true that immigration and national security policy involve issues on which the executive has greater expertise than the courts. But the same can be said of many other policies covered by the Bill of Rights, including those involving internal violence and terrorism. And even if executive expertise on national security is normally due deference, that should not apply in a case where there is overwhelming evidence that security is not the true purpose of the government’s policy.

Roberts endorses the government’s claim that the travel ban is based on a “worldwide review process.” But that supposedly thorough review produced a cursory report only 17 pages long, and the resulting proclamation does not even consistently apply the report’s supposed “information-sharing” criteria for determining which nations should be subject to a travel ban and which should not.

The majority also emphasizes that the travel ban does not cover all the Muslims in the world. But that does not change the fact that those countries it does cover were barred because the vast majority are Muslim. Imagine a head of a government agency who repeatedly states that he wants a ban on hiring African-Americans. He adopts a “territorial” approach that bars the hiring of residents of five majority-black neighborhoods, but emphasizes that the new policy is essentially similar to the old. There is little doubt that this territorial hiring ban would be unconstitutional, even if it does not exclude all black applicants.

In one of the few bright spots in Tuesday’s decision, the court overrules Korematsu v. United States, the notorious 1944 ruling in which the court used deference to the executive to uphold the cruel policy of internment thousands of Japanese-Americans who posed no real security threat during World War II. But even as it rejected one decision that immunized discriminatory policies from effective review, the court established another that has the same terrible flaw.

Brother, can you spare a Bible?

She’s persuasive without being pushy, soliciting Bibles with resolve like the late Clara Peller. You’ll recall how Clara continually questioned, “Where’s the beef?” in Wendy’s long-ago hamburger commercials.

The comparison to Peller ends with “resolve,” however. Dallas’ Jo Witte – staring 90 in the face – isn’t seeking fame or fortune.

A while back, she read about the SoupMobile Church in South Dallas. She was moved by the pastor’s prayers for 10,000 Bibles – the number needed to provide one for every homeless person in Dallas.

Jo is neither hungry nor homeless, but she took the appeal personally. She committed to collecting 1,000 Bibles, and is well on the way....

“Most all Christians have extra Bibles,” she commented. “When they learn of specific projects like this, they’re eager to help out.”

She requested help from Bill Hinds, one of my fellow church members Jo knew during their childhood years in Weatherford. He, in turn, alerted his life group (Sunday school class) members about the project. His class endorsed it, and the project is off and running.

The sprightly lady told of other churches she has called on. They, too, are participating in this “Good Book” project for Dallas’ homeless folks. “So many prayers have been answered along the way,” Jo said....

She gives little thought to time spent and expenses incurred as she drives around the Metroplex, telling her

“Bible story.”

Clearly, she’d rather “wear out than rust out.”

One man, hearing about the project, said, “My late brother left a big box of Bibles. Now I know what to do with them.”...

David Timothy, pastor of the Soup-Mobile Church, says it is an outgrowth of the SoupMobile food project begun in 2003 to “feed the homeless.” He provided 5,000 meals the first year. There has been dramatic growth each year; in 2017, 250,000 meals were served.

SoupMobile Church began Sunday services three years ago. Located at 2423 South Good Latimer, it overflows regularly. Several dozen worshipers sit in folding chairs outdoors to hear Pastor Timothy’s sermon. They come “as they are.” Some bring their dogs along, fearing they might be stolen if left behind at their tents or under-the-bridge, makeshift accommodations.

No offerings are taken, and volunteers give $2 to each attendee, a financial “jump start” for the new week. It is common for the total figure to reach $500....

Timothy said that for years, he felt something to be missing. “We were feeding their stomachs without feeding their souls.”

The Good Book tells us that the poor will be with us always, and is replete with lessons that we all are made in God’s image. That “God don’t make no junk” has been expressed for years, and applies across the centuries. It is good to remember that the ground at the foot of the cross is exceedingly level.

There are destitute folks in all communities. Maybe Jo Witte “clones” will rise up – determined to join the quest for Bibles to provide spiritual food....

That’s also the prayer of the spunky woman, widowed seven years ago. Upon mounting this project, she has a new lease on life. It has become a source of excitement, and she awakens each morning with eager anticipation. Many days hold God-inspired miracles resulting in acquisition of Bibles for the poor.

How many Bibles could you round up? If you’d like to know what got Jo Witte started, peruse the Dallas Morning News’ archives of February 10, 2018. Look for a big picture of the SoupMobile Church, on the front page of Section B, and the headline: “Pastor finds it’s better to give.” If it doesn’t warm the cockles of your heart, you may have unwarmable cockles. (Check out soup-mobile.org. It’s an “upright” organization in an upside down world.)

During His earthly ministry, Jesus repeatedly admonished: “He who has ears to hear, let him hear.” His words still ring true....

The story of ‘Blanche The Movie’

Some years ago a man in a pickup was traveling on a ranch road south of Alpine. The man’s dog riding in the bed of the pickup saw a chicken and decided to jump out and chase it. The chicken outsmarted the dog and flew into a nearby tree. That chicken flying incident was the inspiration for the new movie, BLANCHE, which will have its premiere at the State Theater in Austin on July 28.

The man behind the movie is Sam Pfister of Georgetown. He and his friend Steve Davis started talking about chickens and Sam recalled an incident that occurred in Fort Stockton during the 1950’s. Few homes had televisions and the Fort Stockton movie house had burned down, so entertainment depended a lot on people’s imagination. Beer joints were cultural centers where men gathered to discuss things.

They often made bets with each other, sometimes involving ridiculous things. One ignited the community’s interest. “It was between two fellows on whose chicken could fly the furthest,” says Sam, who used to live in Fort Stockton. “They enlisted a pilot who had an air service. Ranchers hired him to do predator control by shooting coyotes from his old Piper Cub. They made a deal with him to take the chickens to one thousand feet and throw them out of the plane. The one that stayed up the longest won the bet.

“A whole lot of people got involved and a lot of money was on the line. Unbeknownst to the owners of the chickens, the pilot had bet on one of the chickens. So as he was taking the chickens up he put the one he was betting against behind the pilot’s seat and plucked a few feathers. When he reached a thousand feet he threw out the chickens. One glided back to earth making large beautiful spirals, landed safely and walked away. The other one dropped like a rock and didn’t survive. Legend says the pilot had roast chicken that night. There were shouts of foul play.”

Sam and Steve wrote a screenplay

stories of texas
by tumbleweed smith

about the bet. “It took a month to write, but much longer to convince people we were going to make a movie.” This is a movie made by amateurs, the first film most of the participants had ever done. The only people paid were the videographer and editor.

Sam’s brother Ed is a personal injury lawyer in Los Angeles and in the movie he has filed a suit at the courthouse in Fort Davis on behalf of the lady whose chicken was chased by the dog in the pickup. “The suit, brought about by an animal rights group, alleges the dog caused a great deal of anxiety to the chicken, named Blanche.”

The movie trailer is on Twitter, Facebook and Instagram and includes interviews with the actors. Twelve days after the trailer was available for viewing 200,000 people all over the world looked at it. Sam is trying to get the movie in other theaters.

Blanche The Movie was shot in two weeks around Alpine and Marfa by people with the West Texas can-do why-not attitude. “It’s a heartwarming and uplifting movie, rated PG, and is really about old friendships and caring about others,” says Sam.

Be aware of door-to-door sales scams

Hi, gang! Please remember that Sheriff Blackburn warns us that "If it's happing in Amarillo, it is happening in Donley County." All solicitors are required to obtain a permit from the City of Clarendon, prior to doing any type of door to door sales in Clarendon. If someone comes to your door without one, or refuses to provide proof, call the Sheriff's Office at 806-874-3533. And even if they do have one, but you don't feel comfortable or want more reassurance that it is valid, please call the City of Clarendon at 806-874-3438.

When a door-to-door salesperson comes to your door, my advice to you is DO NOT answer your door and watch to make sure they leave your property. If they don't leave or start to the back of your house, call the Sheriff's Office at 911 and advise them what is happening. They will send an officer to check. Door-to-door magazines scams are the worst and home repair scams are second. Remember these scammers will try any trick to get your money, and I feel you can't be too careful especially us older folks. This week door-to-door Home Security Sales. Bob

"Be Wary of Door-to-Door Home Security Sales" by Kathy Stokes, AARP.

The summer months unleash door-to-door sales agents across the country. We've received reports of a scam run by con artists claiming to be from home security companies. While many home security companies conduct legitimate business using door-to-door sales agents, be wary of anyone using high-pressure tactics or creating a false sense of urgency – common traits of a scam!

How It Works: It may be a scam if an agent comes to your door offering a great promotion on a home alarm system, but you have to act now to get the deal. Or, if you have a home alarm company sign in your yard, the person may say he is a technician from that company and he's there to install system upgrades. Yet another twist is that the person will say he is from a company that bought out your current home alarm company, and he has to install new equipment.

What You Should Know: Home security scams are hard to spot because scammers work hard to make the deal look legitimate. The scam artist may claim you'll get a big insurance discount by purchasing an alarm system, but that isn't always the case. A legitimate alarm company would never send a technician to upgrade equipment without first making an appointment with you.

What You Should Do: Realize that not all salespeople are legitimate

Celebrating our Declaration of Independence

This week we celebrate our Declaration of Independence from British rule that happened in 1776, more than 240 years ago. At the time, Britain was the most powerful country in the world with colonies scattered everywhere. They were using America as a dumping ground for prisoners and undesirables thus establishing classes of independent, strong-willed individuals who were willing to fight for the right to survive.

The American Revolution started many years earlier with the erosion of rights of the colonies to self-govern. King George III seemed determined to make American citizens dominated by the British as the citizens were in Britain. Taxes were collected without representation in the legislation, tariffs were imposed, British troops were quartered in homes and inns without recourse, and finally," the shot heard around the world," the first armed conflict between the British and American militia at Lexington and Concord, Mass.

This revolution was something the colonists went into with deep soul-searching but by the early part of 1776 the situation was becoming intolerable with colonial legislatures sending delegates to Philadelphia to the Continental Congress to work out details for action.

On June 11, 1776 the 2nd Continental Congress appointed a committee to draft a formal declaration of independence from Britain. Those committee members were Thomas Jefferson, Benjamin Franklin, John Adams, Roger Livingston,

Boy Scouts practice skills learned at camp

Continuing from last week's article about Boy Scout camp at Camp MK Brown: On Wednesday after breakfast, we went to Polaris and we worked on our Totin' Chip and our Firem'n Chit. A Totin' Chip allows us to carry pocket knives and hatchets, and our Firem'n Chit allows us to make a fire and teaches us fire safety. We did the same thing as normal, and went to first aid and swimming merit badge.

Instead of kayaking, a few of us just went back to camp for free time so we could take showers and we could play badminton before dinner that night.

That night we each got to make our own individual fires. After that, we used our fires to make one huge fire in the middle. Before we went to bed, we made s'mores and played Uno.

Thursday was the same as Wednesday.

But on Friday, our final day, we had the campwide games. And so Darius did trivia then ran down and approach a door-to-door deal with caution. Rather than accepting offers at your door, get references from friends and neighbors when looking to buy a home security system and then reach out to the company yourself. When you are approached by a door-to-door sales agent, research the company by entering its name into an online search engine, to see if any complaints come up. If you do decide to accept a door-to-door offer, read the fine print.

The written contract should include everything you agreed to orally. And triple check the contract length to make sure it suits your situation and needs. If you do sign up for a home alarm system or an upgrade, and then regret it, you have a three day "cooling off" period during which you can cancel your purchase, thanks to a rule by the Federal Trade Commission. It applies if you sign the contract at home or a location that is not the seller's permanent place of business.

When it comes to fraud, vigilance is our number one weapon. You have the power to protect yourself and your loved ones from scams. Please share this alert with friends and family.

Amarillo Police advises area residents not to answer your door to someone you don't know, especially after dark or if you are home alone.

Stay safe out there.

and Roger Sherman The committee elected Thomas Jefferson to write the first draft which he completed in one day.

After some revising and tweaking, the document was presented to congress on June 28. On July 2, 1776, twelve of the 13 colonies voted in favor of the Declaration with New York abstaining until July 14 when their legislation could convene. On July 4, 1776, Congress formally endorsed the Declaration, and we were at war.

We now celebrate those very brave men and women every July in Clarendon with a parade, barbecue, turtle races, rodeo and dancing on the slab with some fireworks thrown in there.

Take time to remember those early brave folks; and if you have ancestries that fought in the Revolutionary War, tell their story to your children, and don't let their stories die.

and tagged Steven at leather working. Then Jacob R. ran the leather finger guard to Nathan, who did marksmanship, and then he went and tagged Phineas, who paddled across the lake to get a kit full of first aid handed them to Daniel and Tanis, who ran the first aid to me, Jacob M., and Blake. We had to treat a broken wrist and a gashed palm then transport the patient to the dining hall where we performed CPR to Koltyn.

We sadly didn't win overall, but we did do best in Marksmanship and First Aid.

I had a lot of fun at camp, and I hope to go to winter camp this year.

House fails to pass immigration bills

WASHINGTON - US Congressman Mac Thornberry (R-Clarendon) released the following statement after the House failed to pass both H.R. 4760, the "Securing America's Future Act of 2018," and H.R. 6136, the "Border Security and Immigration Reform Act:"

"I am disappointed that the House was not able to pass either of the immigration bills. Among other immigration provisions, both bills supported border wall infrastructure, addressed DACA recipients, and provided additional border security personnel. These bills were a much needed step in the right direction.

"There are moments that we cannot get everything we want, but we have to move forward and do what is best for the country, without letting politics stand in the way."

Congressman Thornberry voted in support of both immigrations bills.

Both bills would: Improve border security by including full funding of a border wall and increasing technology and law enforcement officials on the border.

Reform our legal immigration system by eliminating the lottery visa program and replacing it with a merit-based system. Family visas would be focused on uniting the nuclear family.

Allow DACA recipients to apply for a renewable status (3 years under H.R. 4760 and 6-years under H.R. 6136) to pursue existing pathways to green cards and further legal immigration processes.

Eligibility Requirements: entry into the U.S. prior to June, 15, 2007; 16 years of age at the time of entry; under 31 years of age on June 15, 2012; enrolled in an educational institute in the U.S. or has acquired a high school diploma/GED; and no serious criminal convictions.

Ensure families detained when attempting to enter the country illegally are able to stay together.

Comptroller issues guidance on high court’s tax ruling

(AUSTIN) — Texas Comptroller Glenn Hegar last week issued initial guidance on the implications of the recent U.S. Supreme Court decision in Wayfair v. South Dakota, commonly referred to as Wayfair.

“As is often the case with Supreme Court decisions, the principles can be applied broadly on a nationwide basis, including here in Texas,” Hegar said. “But it’s up to my office to implement those principles in the way that best serves the state of Texas, our citizens and the businesses operating here. We’re going to make sure we do this carefully, deliberately and with ample input from the public, the Legislature and the business community.”

Under its existing legal authority, the Comptroller’s office has started reviewing rules that may need updating. Hegar stressed, however, that this would not include any retroactive application of the new law to remote sellers that have no physical presence in Texas.

“We’re looking forward to working with those affected businesses to ensure this is a smooth transition and a successful partnership,” Hegar said.

Early 2019 is the target effective date for rule amendments; however, that could change pending issues that arise during the rulemaking process. Agency staff intends to meet regularly to solicit input from interested parties, including retailers, remote sellers, trade associations and the Comptroller’s Taxpayer and Business Advisory Group. The agency also will consult with local taxing entities on potential impacts to local collections and allocations.

The Comptroller’s office also expects the Texas Legislature to play an important role in addressing key issues when they return in January 2019.

“We have started reaching out to state leaders and legislators and will ensure they’re kept fully briefed on our progress,” Hegar said.

The agency anticipates that the state and local governments will see tax collections increase, but the amount depends on the implementation and resolution of several significant issues raised by the Supreme Court’s ruling.

Gains from the ruling are likely to be lower than previous estimates of taxes uncollected by remote sellers. In the past year, for example, some remote sellers have volunteered to collect in anticipation of the Wayfair decision or for other reasons. Wayfair, the named plaintiff in this case, already collects Texas sales and use taxes. Also, in order to avoid imposing an undue burden on interstate commerce, the state will likely relieve some out-of-state sellers from collection responsibilities. More specific estimates will be available as the implementation and legislative process continues.
