Hero without a cape

Local man saves woman from drowning

By Roger Estlack, Clarendon Enterprise

Wes Smith says he isn't a hero. But his actions last week prove otherwise.

An Amarillo woman owes her life to Smith's quick response to save her from drowning at Lake Greenbelt on Tuesday, July 17.

Smith said he was parked on top of a hill near the Lakeside Marina early that afternoon, looking down on what the lake calls Short Beach. It was there that he saw a group of four women and felt like something was wrong.

"You just get a feeling that something isn't right sometimes," Smith said.

As he watched, he noticed that a float had gotten away from the group. Two women had gone after it while the other two remained on the shore.

"I'm not really sure what happened, but I saw one of them start flapping her arms like she was struggling," Smith said, "and the friend started toward her. That's when I hauled butt down there."

As a 22-year employee for Greenbelt Water Authority and a 15-year veteran of the Clarendon Volunteer Fire Department and Dive Team, Smith has dealt with his fair share of fatal drownings at the lake. He raced his pickup down to the shore by the dam, then stripped to his underwear, ran barefoot across the rock-strewn shore, and hit the water as the woman's friend in the water was calling for help.

Between 75 and 80 yards from the shore, Smith got to the woman as she was yelling, "I can't breathe!"

Wes Smith stands near the spot where he rescued a drowning woman last week. Smith swam to near the white buoy on the left side of the photo during the rescue.

"She was about to go under when I grabbed her," Smith said. "She was out as I pulled her to shore. Her friend helped me get her up to where I could start CPR."

An unidentified man boating nearby pulled up about that time, and Smith asked him to take over CPR so he could get back to his truck and call 911.

"She was in and out," Smith said. "Then the ambulances showed up. We carried her to the ambulance, and they Lifesavered her to Amarillo."

Smith said none of the women were wearing lifejackets and he didn't think they had been drinking. The Donley County Sheriff's Office identified the woman in distress as 21-year-old Crystal Brown of Amarillo.

Clarendon Fire Chief Jeremy Powell said Brown is very lucky because hers is not how these cases usually turn out.

"We was in the right place at the right time, and she is very fortunate to have someone that trained nearby when that happened," Powell said.

Although one of her friends did thank him that day, Smith, who had bruises on his feet from running across rocks, hasn't heard from Brown. That doesn't seem to bother him though, and he really doesn't want attention.

"I'm not anybody's hero," he said.

Smith said he joined the volunteer fire department to be on the dive team; and while he didn't want to go diving for another body at the lake, that thought wasn't the first thing on his mind last Tuesday.

"It was just instinct," Smith said. "I think anybody would do it. God just put me in the right place that day."

CC regents renew bank depository

Clarendon College Regents dismissed the recommendation of the administration last week and renewed CC's depository with Herring Bank.

Vice President of Administrative Services Rit Christian presented three proposals for the college's bank depository during a called meeting of the Board of Regents July 18. Banks submitting proposals were Herring Bank, the Donley County State Bank, and Happy State Bank.

Christian called attention to rates for two-year CDs over $100,000 and said Donley County's rate was 1.5, Herring's rate was 1.26, and Happy's rate was 2.2.

Regent Jerry Woodard, who is the president of Herring Bank in Clarendon, said Herring rates are "fixing to move" and that some adjustments have already been made.

Christian also discussed a liability of $35,000 from the Department of Education for an ATM not being available free of charge for CC students in Childress, which is a service not currently made available by Herring in that location.

Christian recommended the board go with the Happy State Bank proposal.

Regent Tommy Waldrop asked how much money was being talked about, and Christian replied that the college had $1.2 million on deposit in June.

Regent Edwin Campbell asked Christian to explain his recommendation, and Christian pointed to HARRY having ATMs in Clarendon, Pampa, and Childress; Happy's desire to work with education institutions and the bank's subsequent waiving of fees for the college, and Happy's offer to give free checking accounts to CC students.

Woodard said the difference comes down to Herring not having an ATM in Childress, and he spoke about Herring's support of the college on a daily basis.

Waldrop said he couldn't imagine banking outside of Donley County and then he later made a motion, seconded by Regent Susie Shields, to keep the depository with Herring Bank. The board voted 6-0-1 in favor of the motion with Woodard abstaining. Regents Bill Sansing and Darlene Spier were absent.

Regents also reviewed proposals for insurance coverage and accepted Christian's recommendation.

Firemen respond to Sunday grass fire

Clarendon and Howardwick volunteer firemen were called into action Sunday afternoon when a downed power line ignited a grass fire near the Greenbelt Dam.

Clarendon Fire Chief Jeremy Powell the departments were paged out about 4:30 p.m. after the AEP/SWEPCO transmission line started a fire on the south side of the Salt Fork of the Red River.

"The fire wasn't out of control, but it was in a rough area that was hard to get access to," Powell said.

Howardwick responded with three trucks, and Clarendon's department had six trucks respond.

The fire burned about 60 acres before being contained by 8:30 that evening, and firemen returned to the station an hour later.

The incident shows that, even with recent rains, high temperatures can create a dangerous situation.

"It's dry enough that it doesn't take much to start a fire," Powell said. "Last week's 105+ temperatures dried out grass, especially by the highways, so we're going to be under the fire gun for a while."

Howardwick firemen work to control a grass fire east of the Greenbelt Dam Sunday afternoon.

Thornberry signs on to co-sponsor PRINT Act

US Rep. Mac Thornberry's office announced Tuesday morning that he is signing on as a co-sponsor of HB 6031, the Protecting Rational Incentives in Newspaper Trade Act of 2018 also known as the PRINT Act.

The proposed legislation would suspend tariffs on Canadian imports of uncoated groundwood paper which includes newspaper used by newspapers, book publishers, printers and direct mail companies. The tariffs introduced earlier this year have negatively impacted many community newspapers in Texas and around the nation.

Thornberry (R-Clarendon) joins more than 30 other members of the House of Representatives in co-sponsoring the PRINT Act, which was originally introduced by Rep. Kristi Noem (R-South Dakota) and Charlie Crist (D-Florida).

Clarendon Enterprise publisher and Texas Press Association board member Roger Estlack praised Thornberry's action this week.

"We appreciate Mac Thornberry for standing up for community newspapers by signing on to the PRINT Act," Estlack said. "He had already stepped up by sending a letter to the Commerce Department on this issue, but this week's action goes further in support of a common sense solution to this problem."

According to the News Media Alliance, the legislation would temporarily halt both the preliminary and any final duties while the Department of Commerce (Commerce) completes its study on the economic health of the printing and publishing industries. The study would, among other things, examine whether the tariffs would harm local news coverage, reduce employment in the publishing and printing industries, or harm local businesses that advertise in local newspapers.

Many local newspapers and printers have experienced price increases and a disruption in supply since preliminary countervailing and antidumping duties were assessed earlier this year. They have warned policymakers that the import tariffs – as high as 32 percent – would jeopardize the viability of the industry and threatens the over 600,000 US workers in publishing, printing and related industries. The tariffs are sought by one mill, North Pacific Paper Company, that is owned by a New York-based private equity firm.

Americans don't know their rights

By Lata Nott, First Amendment Center

The majority of Americans are supportive of the rights guaranteed by the First Amendment, but are also unaware of exactly what those rights are, according to the recently released 2018 State of the First Amendment survey by the First Amendment Center of the Freedom Forum Institute.

When asked if the First Amendment goes too far in the rights that it protects, more than three-fourths of Americans disagree. That's fairly good news, but it's somewhat tempered by the fact that a third of Americans cannot name a single freedom guaranteed by the First Amendment. Another third can only name one. Only one survey respondent out of a sample of 1,009 could name all five. And 9 percent of Americans think that the First Amendment guarantees the right to bear arms. (For the record, that's the Second Amendment.)

But does it really matter that Americans don't know exactly what the First Amendment says? After all, while no one's done a survey on the state of the Third Amendment, I'd wager that most Americans have no clue what rights that one guarantees and I'm not losing any sleep over that. (In case you're curious, the Third Amendment says that no one can force you to quarter British soldiers inside your home. The issue doesn't come up much these days.)

But First Amendment issues do come up a lot (just look at the number of First Amendment-related decisions the Supreme Court made this term). And the fact that Americans are generally aware that the First Amendment gives them the right to express themselves but are pretty fuzzy on its actual details is problematic. As any teacher can tell you, a little knowledge can be more dangerous than no knowledge at all. In this case, it leads to people passionately invoking the First Amendment in some circumstances and ignoring its existence in others.

So, for a quick review, the First Amendment grants us five freedoms: religion, speech, press, assembly and petition. All of these freedoms are interconnected. The freedom of religion prevents the government from establishing its own religion, and from favoring one religion over another. It also keeps the government from interfering with the way people practice their religious beliefs. Religious freedom is a powerful thing, even if you yourself are not religious. It essentially grants each individual the freedom to develop their own conscience and their own values. The government doesn't get to tell you what your values should be — that's for you to decide.

Freedom of speech protects your right to express those values, even if that expression is critical of the government. Freedom of the press guarantees your right to uncensored information about the world around you and especially information about what your government is doing. And if you don't like what the government is doing — if its actions contradict the values you cherish — you have the freedom of petition, which is the freedom to ask for the laws you want, and the freedom to assemble a group of like-minded people to give that request some political heft. We need all five of these freedoms to have a democracy that ensures comprehensive protection of the American citizenry.

As a country, we'll probably always disagree about what the precise limits of the First Amendment should be. People will certainly always invoke the First Amendment in a self-serving manner, championing some of these freedoms while discounting others — think of Milo Yiannopoulos presenting himself as a defender of free speech but calling for vigilante squads to target journalists. Yes, it's his First Amendment right to make tasteless comments. But hopefully one day Americans will understand the First Amendment well enough to recognize how disingenuous it is to treat it like an à la carte menu.

A look back at some big losses

It will be the focus of books yet to be written, and of songs yet to be sung. Rarely does drama equal that of the rescue of a dozen Thai youngsters and their coach. They were assumed lost until flashlights revealed life and fearless rescue team members shared the good news. Voices around the world "seconded the emotion."

Humanity immediately seemed closely woven; pettiness that too often divides was ignored. Instead, we waited for news that there might be hope.

Survival odds seemed tiny, but bravery, commitment and cooperation led to a "rope of hope." The world pulled together, and millions prayed....

For 18 days, we focused in ways sharper than we thought possible. We prayed for victims in an underground jail, where dangers lurked, oxygen was "iffy" and food in short supply.

Estimates of distance to them varied greatly, ranging from 2-6 miles, the longer including twists and turns, ups and downs. The latter, someone guessed, was "as the bat flies."

Technology, bravery and prayers spoken in many tongues combined for a miraculous outcome, perhaps in reverse order....

The coach leading the youngsters into the cave never called such a "bone-headed play."

Yet, he was contrite, courageous and shared his food. The last to be rescued, he sought forgiveness for his blunder.

I want to hear more details, particularly about the heroic Thai Navy SEAL who perished during rescue attempts....

Two previous times, we waited with others to learn the fate of two youngsters in earthen entrapments. The first, in April of 1949, concerned two-year-old Kathy Fiscus, who fell into an abandoned well.

Ironically, it had been drilled 46 years earlier by the firm that employed her father.

Gargantuan rescue attempts were made to reach her, lodged 100 feet underground. Some 10,000 people gathered at the site when she was extracted and her death confirmed, three days after the fall. Historians say this tragedy introduced massive TV coverage in the U.S....

A similar accident in 1987 occurred in Midland, TX, where 18-month-old Jessica McClure (Morales) fell into a well in her aunt's backyard. This one had a happy outcome.

Dozens of rescuers frantically worked to remove her from 22 feet below the surface.

Millions following the saga through mass media were heartened when they heard the toddler singing a favorite song about Winnie-the-Pooh. She was removed to safety 56 hours after the ordeal began....

Five months after the Fiscus tragedy, there was similarity in the death of a 34-year-old Methodist minister. The outcome was not prolonged, and there the idle american by don newbury

was limited news coverage.

Rev. Vernon White, my revered uncle, fell into an abandoned well during a hunting trip. He and several other men had scattered across a field to hunt dove. He was alone when others heard gun shots, then yells. They assumed a farmer was calling his cows.

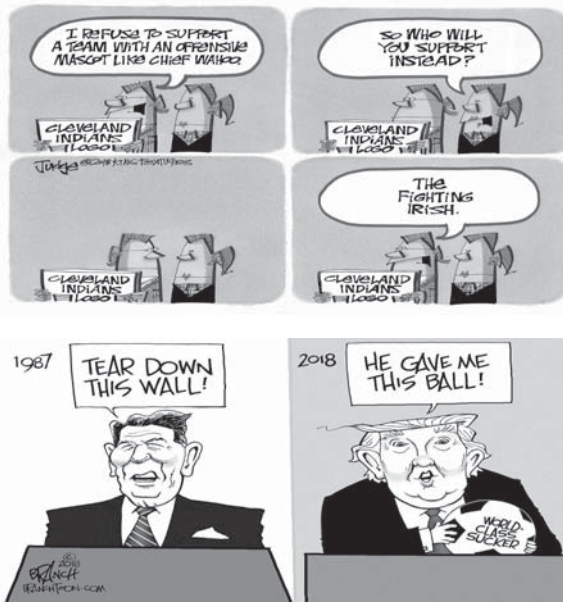

At hunt's end, they realized White was missing. He was believed to have shot some birds and was running to retrieve them when he fell into an unmarked, ground-level cistern....

Committed to ministry at an early age, he worked hard to make a living while attending Howard Payne and Southwestern. He received his degree from the Georgetown institution in 1942.

Pastor of Waco Lakeview Methodist Church for three years, he was serving there when he died on September 9, 1949. The congregation gave the parsonage to his widow, who was left to support seven-year-old daughter Dora Fay and son Terry, who were born a few months after the tragedy. (Terry now lives in Arizona; Dora Fay is Mrs. Bill McKenna, in Fort Worth. White's widow, Mildred, later married Dr. Clarence A. Sutton, longtime pastor of Arlington Heights United Methodist Church in Fort Worth. Their son, Jamie, lives in Wisconsin.)

At age 10, I first felt death's sting when my uncle died. I join others in claiming the century-old hymn, "Farther Along." The lyrics include: "Cheer up, my brother. Live in the sunshine. We'll understand it, all by and by." ...

Some words from a broadcaster

I've known Bev Brown for a long time. He's a broadcasting friend who lives in Carthage. He thinks a lot about his town. "Carthage is the best little town in Texas," he told me. "It's the third best town in the United States according to the guy who did the research and wrote the book on the best little towns in America."

He carries the family name, Beverly. Most of the men in his family used it as the middle name, but for him, it's his real first name. "Well I couldn't get a room in the girls' dorm when I got to college." He has never minded his name. When he gets mail addressed to Mrs. Beverly Brown he just throws it away. He was an infantry officer in the military and didn't have any problems with his name.

Bev was a car salesman in 1957 when he found out the local radio station KGAS was going to shut down. So he got some backing and bought it. "I was too lazy to work and too nervous to steal. I thought radio was an ideal career for me."

He owned the station 31 years. He used to broadcast football games. "I was a poor announcer. You wouldn't recognize the game from the way I described it. Course we were a daytime only station. We ran down at sundown. We recorded the game and played it back on Saturday. But we had a PA system we put up downtown and carried the game live on the PA system. People who couldn't go to the out of town games came to the square and listened to the ballgame. It was a big deal. We just fed the broadcast direct to the PA system with a telephone line. We did that for years. And I'll tell you the revenue wasn't bad. We had big bucks out of that because we had lots of sponsors."

Bev served as president of the Texas Association of Broadcasters and was on the board of the National Association of Broadcasters. "At that time, no one from a market this small had ever been chairman of the radio board. I'm so blessed. I've been honored so many times and received lots of awards but stories of texas

feel like I didn't deserve any of them. But I've got arthritis and don't deserve that, either."

Bev is known for his sense of humor. When you mention his name to anyone who knows him, it brings a smile. He enjoys entertaining people. Once he made a sales call in Longview. "I gave the secretary my card and told her my business. She went into her boss's office and soon came back out and said she was sorry but he was tied up and just doesn't have time to talk to you today and he's not really interested in buying any advertising right now. I said I understand. Would you mind going back in there and get my business card and bring it back to me. I have to pay for these things to be printed. She looked at me with this deer in the headlights expression and went in there and got the card and handed it to me. You could hear the guy laughing and he said to the secretary, 'tell him to come on in.' I went in and we had a nice visit. He didn't buy any advertising, but I got my card back."

Bev is 90 and still does a weekly broadcast about current events.

Clarendon ISD Board of Trustees meet

Clarendon ISD continued moving forward with enhancing school security when the Board of Trustees met July 16.

The district has spent several months studying ways to improve the safety of its students, and last week the board passed a resolution ranking architect firms for the district's Security Improvement Project as presented by the administration.

The action selected Hohe Design Group as the top ranked architect firm to provide such services and authorized the school superintendent to negotiate a contract with that firm, or to take other actions as needed, to secure an acceptable contract for architectural services to be submitted to the Board for final approval. Motion carried unanimously.

In other school business, the board met in closed session for over an hour to evaluate the performance of Superintendent Mike Norrell. Afterwards, the board returned to open session to approve his contract and compensation as presented.

The board also voted to accept the Superintendent's recommendation to offer contracts of employment for the following teachers, subject to assignment: Drew Ahrens, Savannah Ahrens, and Elizabeth Cranford.

Trustees accepted a Pre-K Family Engagement Plan presented by Elementary Principal Mike Word and acknowledged the Early Reading Report (TPR) that was also presented by Word.

A motion was approved to contract with Johnson & Sheldon for auditing services for the 2017-2018 school audit, and the board voted to accept the Region 16 ESC Contracts for 2018-2019 as presented.

The school's policy manual was updated, and trustees reviewed the employee and student handbooks for the 2018-2019 school year.

Trustees approved the special and extra duty stipend schedule for 2018-2019 as presented. Motion carried unanimously.

tion to stay with TASB for coverage as the best proposal despite higher deductibles due to roof claims in the area.

The college's investment policy was approved as presented, and regents appointed Woodard to the college's investment committee.

The food service agreement with Great Western Dining was approved for 2018-2019 with a minimal increase due to rising costs.

In his president's report, Dr. Robert Riza discussed working with the IRS on certain 2014 W2 forms that were not received by the government even though they were sent by the college and working with the Department of Education on student promissory notes made between 1968 and the early 1980s.

Also last week, the Board of Regents held its regular July meeting at the CC Childress Center where they ratified the new hires of Alyssa Oates as Ag Instructor / Equine Judging Coach, David Saffo, as English Instructor, and also acknowledged the resignations of Brent Childers, Industrial Maintenance Instructor and Clifton Burrows, Pampa Maintenance.

In his president's report at that meeting, Riza introduced Kim Jones from Judge Jay Madden's office and Jennifer Foster with State Sen. Charles Perry's office.

Riza also reported that the college had received its official letter from the Southern Association of Colleges & Schools that everything is in the clear for CC's accreditation, and he reported that two Childress foundations are helping students in that county with dual credit expenses.

Get Kids Packing! (Lunches, That Is)

Teaching kids how to pack their own lunches can be a fun back-to-school activity. The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services has some great suggestions:

- Keep it interesting. Pack a small quantity of several foods in a bento-type lunchbox (with multiple compartments) to keep things fun. Have your child use cookie cutters to cut sandwiches into different shapes. Add colorful fruits and vegetables in different sizes and pack yummy dips such as fat-free or low-fat yogurt or hummus.
- Encourage dipping. Cut a baked chicken breast into strips, and pack the strips with honey mustard for dipping. Include carrots and broccoli to dip in fat-free or reduced-fat ranch dressing. Apple slices and nut butter make a great pairing.
- Mix up the sides. Go beyond pretzels! Pack snap peas, sliced bell peppers or cucumbers for color and crunch. Add some variety with air-popped, low-fat popcorn.

The Clarendon Lions Club held its regular Tuesday noon meeting July 24, 2018, with Boss Lion Pro Tem Landon Lambert in charge.

We had ten members and two guests this week. Jason Robertson was the guest of Lion Chuck Robertson, and Terra Drackley was a guest of Lions Ashlee and Roger Estlack and a prospective new member.

The club voted to give a donation to the Lions District 271 Eye Bank for their effort to attend the Summer Celebration.

Lion Robertson brought a short program, a card game that uses questions to help you to get to know your friends better. It was a good way to learn more about our fellow members.

There being no further business, we were adjourned.

Grill Master of the Summer Celebration

On Monday, my Boy Scout troop and I set up a booth at the Summer Celebration, which is a big carnival-like thing but without rides. We were doing hot dogs and nachos, and my job was to cook the hot dogs. I think I must have cooked like a dozen packages, and I probably ate about five hot dogs, but that's a different story.

The boys that we had to help were Phineas, Daniel, and Mason along with our leaders, Russell, Tara, my Dad, and Linda. Keith Floyd also let us use his table and helped us out a bunch, and Bob Weiss let us use his grill and a canopy.

There was also a water balloon catapult nearby. For four dollars you get a bucket of water balloons to launch at another person. Whoever came out the driest won. I went

Avoid giving money to scammers

Hi, gang! This week we are looking at how to donate with honor, avoiding tech support scams, and complaints on interstate moving fraud. The little front Monday sure helped. Now some rain would be nice so let's all pray for rain. Bob

"Donate with honor, not to a sham charity" by Rosario Mendez, FTC

Would you donate to a charity called Help the Vets? What about if you get a robocall that asks you to donate your car to "Veterans of America"? Unfortunately, just because the word "veterans" is in the name, it doesn't mean that an organization actually helps veterans.

For example, Help the Vets didn't help disabled and wounded veterans as they said they would. And, the FTC sued Veterans of America alleging that the organization wasn't a charity at all it was just a front used by an individual who sold donated cars and boats and kept the money. Today, the FTC and its state partners announced that they have taken action against these and other schemes as part of Operation Donate with Honor, a nationwide law enforcement and education initiative to stop veterans-related charity fraud.

Charity regulators from 70 offices, including every state, DC, Guam, American Samoa and Puerto Rico, joined the FTC in this initiative. Collectively, they announced more than 100 law enforcement actions against veterans-related charities and fundraisers. This unprecedented joint effort signals that charity scammers who prey on Americans' patriotism and generosity should beware, law enforcement is watching and taking action.

But donors need to beware too. You don't want to donate to a fake charity; you want your donations to go to the many great charities that actually help veterans in need. Watch this video from the FTC and the National Association of State Charity Officers and get tips on how to do some research and avoid giving money to a veteran charity scam. https://www.consumer.ftc.gov/blog/2018/07/donate-honor-not-sham-charity?utm_source=govdelivery

"Avoiding tech support scams" by Carol K and Pineda, FTC

You're working on your computer when, suddenly, a message pops up on the screen: "Virus detected! Call now for a free security scan and to repair your device." That's a tech support scam. Don't call, text, or email. Legit tech support companies don't operate that way.

Scammers pose as big-name companies and use pop-up messages, fake websites, and phone calls to trick you into thinking your computer has an urgent problem. Their plan is to get your money by selling you worthless software, enrolling you in fake programs, or getting you to pay for useless tech support. The scammers urge you to call a toll-free number immediately, threatening that you may lose personal data if you don't.

When you call, the scammer might ask you to give them remote access, pretend to run a diagnostic test, or tell you they've found a virus or other security issue. They try to sell you a security subscription or other "services" that range from worthless (for instance, they're available for free elsewhere) to malicious (they install dangerous software that can help them steal your personal information).

What should you do? If you get a pop-up to call a number to fix a virus on your computer, ignore it. Your computer is almost certainly fine. But if you're concerned about your computer, call your security software company directly — and don't use the phone number in the pop-up or on caller ID. Use a number you know is real, like the one on a software package or your receipt. Tech support scammers like to place online ads pretending to be legitimate companies, so be sure you have the correct telephone number for the real tech company before calling.

And if someone asks you to pay for anything — including tech support services — with a gift card, cash reload card, or a wire transfer, that's a scam. No legitimate company will tell you to pay that way. If you see that, report it at FTC.gov/complaint.

"July is Military Consumer Month," Kathy Stokes, AARP

In 2016, there were over 3,600 reported complaints of interstate moving fraud. The offenses include taking goods hostage, overcharges, loss and damage, and insurance issues. The average loss claim was a jaw-dropping $8,000. How It Works: Rogue movers typically give you a low estimate over the phone or online without ever seeing the goods you want moved. Once your items are on their truck, they demand more money. They force you to pay more if you want your goods back.

What You Should Know: Red flags that you aren't dealing with a legitimate moving company: It doesn't offer or agree to an onsite inspection. It demands cash or a large deposit upfront. It does not provide a written estimate. The company's website has no local address and no information about their registration or insurance. What You Should Do: Do a search on the name of the company you are planning to use to check for complaints, company contact information and safety information. Find out if the company you are talking to is the same company that will move you. If it's not, research the actual moving company too. Don't sign a contract until you know who you are dealing with.

The federal government and legitimate moving companies are working together to fight interstate moving fraud. Go to www.protectyourmove.gov for a helpful checklist and to learn more. When it comes to fraud, vigilance is our number one weapon. You have the power to protect yourself and your loved ones from scams. Please share this alert with friends and family. Stay safe out there.

Animals Dig It!

Read the clues to fill in the puzzle with names of animals that dig:

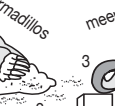

- have long slinky bodies, dig burrows for homes
- scaled reptiles, burrow underground for shelter, dig to hibernate
- mammals, dig with feet, claws, go underground to get roots, plants
- related to kangaroos, slightly larger than mice, dig for food
- mammals, leathery armored shells, dig to uncover grubs
- spineless animals, live underground, come out when it rains because it is hard to breathe
- have shells with hinges, burrow into the sand to keep from being eaten
- found in deserts in Africa, 20-30 live in large underground networks
- mammals that tunnel, making bumps in the soil (hills named after them)
- mammals with long snouts, dig up insects to eat, especially ants
- dig holes for shelter (hole that soldiers dig for protection is named after this)
- very large mammals, dig dens and drag in leaves and branches for bedding
- toothy mammals, dig shelters, called lodges, that are partly underwater
- like small squirrels, stripes on backs, burrow to hibernate and store nuts, seeds
- insects, dig lots of connecting pathways underground to join nests into colony

Can we dig it now? Can we? Huh? Huh?

Stop badgering me.
