THIS WEEK

4 Clarendon Scouts get ready for a week of adventure at MK Brown.

5 Clarendon Lions learn more about a World War II veteran.

6 Check out the scenes from the Chamber Business After Hours last week.

8 The Chamber names its quarterly winner in its Totally Locally promotion.

All this and much more as The Enterprise reports in this week's amazing edition!

Dance set for this Saturday

It's time to dance the night away at the second annual "Summer on the Slab" benefit concert in Clarendon this Saturday, June 22.

Gates and a burger bar open at 5:30 followed by live music and open air dancing on the COEA Slab at the rodeo grounds from 6:00 p.m. to midnight.

Ed Montana will serve as master of ceremonies and will open the entertainment with musical performances scheduled to follow from the Gary Nix Band, the Buster Bledsoe Band, and the Drake Hayes Band.

A cowboy breakfast will follow the dance at 12:30 a.m.

Proceeds benefit the St. Mary's Catholic Church Building Fund. St. Mary's is the oldest Catholic church in the Texas Panhandle.

The church's historic 19th century building was damaged beyond repair by an automobile accident, and the congregation is working to rebuild their historic church.

Tickets are $20 for the Summer on the Slab. Bring your own cooler for only $10 more, and VIP tickets are also available for $50 each and include the gate fee, waiver of the cooler fee, and access to the Coors VIP Tent. Families are encouraged to attend, and children three years old and under get in free.

Major sponsors for the event are Reed Beverage, Floyd's Automotive, Charles Lynch Architect, and the Clarendon Outdoor Entertainment Association.

For more information about this weekend's event, check out the "Summer on the Slab" Facebook event page or call Chriss Clifford at 806-206-6767.

Local cities' sales tax revenue grow

All three Donley County municipalities posted higher sales tax revenues this month when Texas Comptroller Glenn Hegar delivered June allocations last week.

The City of Clarendon, coming off a record sales tax allocation last month, posted revenue of $31,879.42 for its June allocation, reflecting a 6.05 percent increase over the same period last year.

Clarendon is now 6.19 percent ahead for the calendar year-to-date with 2019 revenue totaling $213,203.88 so far this year.

Hedley was up 1.44 percent for the month at $709.14 with a year-to-date total at $5,485.86, up 12.91 percent.

Howardwick's June allocation was $1,176.85, which is an increase of 24.72 percent compared to last June. That city is now running 6.96 percent ahead for the year with revenue of $6,825.11.

June allocations are based on sales made in April by businesses that report tax monthly.

Statewide, Hegar delivered $782.1 million in local sales tax allocations for June, 10.1 percent more than in June 2018.

CC rodeo team places third at nationals

Clarendon College's Riggan Smith won the Saddle Bronc contest and the CC men's rodeo team took third place overall at the College National Finals Rodeo last week in Casper, Wyo.

Competing among more than 50 colleges and universities, Clarendon had several outstanding performances during the college's first team appearance at the national finals.

"I couldn't be more tickled with how it went," rodeo coach Bret Franks said. "They stepped up and did great!"

Franks said it was impressive how the CC team performed and put themselves in a position to win in the short round.

"We're competing with much larger schools," Franks said. "There are some small schools, but most of these are much bigger. But rodeo kind of is a more even playing field."

Clarendon finished with a total score of 660. Hill College was second with 675 points, and Panola Junior College was first with 825.

R. Smith won the national title in Saddle Bronc Riding with 370 points. His cousin, Teagan Smith, was third with 180 points. T. Smith also placed 19th in Bull Riding.

Dylan Jones placed fourth in Team Roping, and Casey McCleskey was 33rd.

Brody Rankin was 21st in Tie-Down Roping, and Joshua Green was 24th in Bareback Riding.

Franks said the national finals appearance and results were very important for Clarendon College as it seeks to build a program with a solid reputation.

"I want to give Clarendon College something that will be a feather in our hat," Franks said.

Of the six men's team members who went to the national finals, all but Rankin is the only freshman.

Franks said he appreciates the support his team has received.

"I sure want to thank the community, the college, and the administration for giving us what we need to succeed," Franks said.

CC President Robert Riza praised the rodeo team and its coach.

"I think this team has taken on their coach's grit and determination," Riza said. "They see how hard he works to make them better, and they don't want to let him down.

"I'm proud of the job he has done in a short period of time," Riza said. "This is what we thought he was capable of achieving when we chose him to lead our program."

Downtown refreshment

Kassie Askew serves up a cup of lemonade Monday afternoon in front of Saye's Tack Store. Kassie said she thinks the library needs some new books, so she decided to sell lemonade, limeade, and brownies for $1 each to benefit the Burton Memorial Library. She also plans to have her stand open Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

Howardwick aldermen deny zoning variance

The Howardwick City Council acted on several agenda items during its regular meeting June 11.

In his mayor's comments, Tony Clemishire announced that Red River Water Authority had lifted all water restrictions in the city and said that work continues on developing a new well for the city.

Clemishire also reported on progress with the SchoolNet weather monitoring site for the city, which is expected to be completed this week, and said the first annual Howardwick Hoe Down on June 8 was a success, raising more than $5,100.

"It was good music, good food, and a good time, and hopefully we can do it again," the mayor said.

Clemishire also said the Howardwick entrance sign at State Hwy. 70 and Rick Husband Blvd. is owned by Greenbelt Electric and that the cooperative is willing to pay to have a new sign put up. The city will hold a contest with a cash prize to be awarded for the winning design. Details will be available soon.

The council heard a request for a variance that would allow a travel trailer to be put on a lot to help sell the property. Council members suggested the lot be paired to with a neighboring lot to make it more useful and voted down the variance request.

Heidi Phelps discussed the FireWise program. Howardwick is one of only nine FireWise communities in the Panhandle. The program helps inform citizens of ways to protect their properties from fire and works to mitigate dangers of fire.

The council met in closed session for almost an hour about legal matters but took no action after closed session.

Budget information was presented to the council ahead of calling a budget workshop, and the council approved buying a two-page ad in the next fall/winter edition of the Clarendon Welcome Guide.

The council also approved a motion allowing Texas Communities Group to provide code enforcement services for the city, and the city will begin looking for a new municipal judge.

A vote was taken to reauthorize the city's planning and zoning commission as it was originally set up with aldermen serving on the committee. All meetings will be open to the public.

Man claims state's laws do not apply

The Donley County Court met in Judge John Howard's office Tuesday afternoon for a pre-trial hearing in the case of a man who is fighting a traffic citation by saying the state's laws do not apply to him.

County Attorney Landon Lambert said Caleb Nathaniel Hudson was given a citation for speeding on December 20 near Mile Marker 166 on US 287 west of Clarendon.

Lambert said a jury was assembled for a trial in the court of Justice of the Peace Pam Mason last month but nothing happened because Hudson objected and said he wanted to have a trial "on the record." During that court appearance, Hudson was found in contempt, jailed for a few hours, and fined $50. He was also compelled to enter a plea.

"He could have entered any plea," Lambert told the Enterprise. "Guilty, not guilty, or no contest — but he had to enter a plea. He pled not guilty."

During Tuesday's county court hearing on the record, Judge Howard explained his court's legal jurisdiction in the case. Hudson objected, and Howard asked the defendant, who was representing himself, whether or not he believed the law applied to him as the defendant.

Hudson responded that the law of the US Constitution applies to him but the laws and statutes of the state do not. He also repeatedly asked for his rights under the "laws of the Republic" as a "free man" and asked for an "Article Three court."

Judge Howard explained that Article Three defines federal courts under the United States Constitution but that county court, which has jurisdiction in the Texas Transportation Code, is defined by Article Five of the Texas Constitution.

"I believe I have a right to the laws of the Republic," Hudson said.

Howard ruled that the laws of Texas apply to the defendant. Hudson objected and was overruled. The judge also explained how court proceedings would work in a jury trial in county court.

The defendant got into a disagreement with the Lambert about whether or not the defendant had entered a not guilty plea. At one point, the county attorney declared Hudson had "wasted enough time" and asked the defendant if he needed to be sent to a mental health facility.

Judge Howard told the defendant he was "making this a lot more complicated than it should be," and said that, from his writings, the defendant was trying to apply the Uniform Commercial Code when the Texas Transportation Code applies."

When Howard said Hudson was driving at the time of the alleged violation, Hudson claimed he wasn't "driving," he was "traveling," and "the Constitution guarantees my

The final journey home

Donley County residents join other patriotic Panhandle citizens Monday to honor the late John Willis Hayes, a Hall County resident who died in Europe in 1945 during World War II. Hayes' remains were identified in April of this year, were flown into Amarillo Monday, and escorted all the way to Memphis while being greeted by citizens all along the way.

Where’s the Real Harm?

By Ryan Bourne, Cato Institute

If you use Facebook, Amazon, Google or an Apple iPhone, then Congress and federal agencies fear you could be a victim of anticompetitive business behavior. The House Judiciary Committee has announced a “top-to-bottom review of the market power held by giant tech platforms.” The Justice Department and the Federal Trade Commission likewise are divvying these companies up for their own investigations.

These inquiries will generate a host of claims and counter-claims about supposed economic harms, or potential for them, from these firms. But given current debates, politicians and regulators risk making two huge mistakes in their analysis: mis-defining the markets these huge firms operate in, and overhauling policy based on highly speculative predictions about the future.

Behind Microsoft, the four major tech firms are the biggest U.S. companies by market capitalization. They operate across a range of sectors, and most people interact with at least one of them on a near-daily basis. As a result, they occupy “psychological monopoly” status in our public discourse. So synonymous are they with their primary industries – social networks, online retail, search engines and phones – that it’s hard for people to imagine meaningful competition to them.

But a first step in assessing whether the firms are actually engaging anticompetitively is to define the contours of their markets. This is surprisingly difficult. Is Google GOOG, +0.11% GOOGL, +0.02% competing in the market for advertising revenue (given advertisers are its paying customers), digital advertising revenue, or in search engines?

Should Facebook FB, +0.20% be thought of as an advertising space seller or a social network? Might we, as Facebook’s Nick Clegg suggests, consider it as competing in sub-markets, such as messaging, photo sharing, contact storage and more? Is Amazon AMZN, +0.01% a retailer in individual product lines, a digital retailer, or a marketplace platform? Or all three?

And is Apple AAPL, +0.08% primarily run as a phone company, or a platform for app producers?

How one answers these questions determines how “dominant” the companies seem. Even then, the size of a company tells us little about consumer welfare. Network effects (the value of a service growing with the number of users), economies of scale and extensive user data can create markets where consumers actually benefit from one firm dominating for a time, albeit with new technologies and firms offering competition over longer periods.

Absent strong evidence these firms currently harm consumers, proponents of breaking up or regulating them instead claim these economic phenomena might create barriers to entry that give these firms damaging monopoly power in future. In her article “Amazon’s Antitrust Paradox,” lawyer Lina Khan explicitly argued that antitrust authorities should “ask what the future market will look like.” If that sounds familiar, it may be because it’s a variation on the theme from “Minority Report,” Steven Spielberg’s movie about detectives who use information fed to them by prescient oracles to catch criminals before they actually commit a crime.

Given that a quarter-century ago Facebook, Google and Amazon did not even exist, such fatalism about enduring monopolies seems misplaced. In fact, many major firms have dominated markets concurrent with these economic features before, only to be outpaced by new companies or better products.

Almost exactly the same arguments about how “network effects” might make Facebook or Google entrenched monopolies were used against Myspace, Microsoft’s Internet Explorer and AOL’s Instant Messenger. Analysts worried that web managers optimizing sites for IE because of its high use numbers would ossify the browser market in Microsoft’s favor. In the case of AOL, 40 companies wrote to the Federal Communications Commission asking it to make AOL’s network compatible with others. Of course, Myspace was rendered obsolete by Facebook, Internet Explorer by Google Chrome, and AIM by, well, a lot (there are many apps with instant messaging facilities).

But it’s not just network effects. In 2007 Forbes was running articles about how economies of scale for Nokia would act as a barrier to entry for rivals. The higher profits were generating “more money to invest in research and development.” It was said Nokia’s supposed technological superiority meant “no mobile company will ever know more about how people use phones than Nokia.” That year saw the first iPhone launch.

Today, consumer groups wail against Apple’s supposed “monopoly” power with its app store, saying it’s unfair to bundle it into its phone while prohibiting other means of download. Yet similar arguments were made about Apple’s iPods inability to play songs that weren’t downloaded from iTunes. Of course, developments in the music purchase market, mobiles and speaker technology completely unbundled music purchase from listening devices.

The point here is not that today’s tech giants are incapable of anticompetitive behavior or harming consumer welfare. But with the cacophony of hostilities to these firms, politicians and regulators must be mindful of the need to accurately define markets, recognize that one-firm dominance need not equate to consumer harm, and acknowledge that there is little historical support for economically deterministic predictions of enduring monopolies.

Happy birthday to my Uncle Mort

Uncle Mort, who attains age 107 come July 4, issues requests for “no talking” and “no chore assignments” about this time every year.

It’s no bother to Aunt Maude. In fact, she looks forward to the week or two annually when her hubby is in deep thought. She charitably calls such interludes “thought.”

Others might more accurately say he’s scheming, trying to figure out how to cash in on his birthday without appearances that he’s cashing in on his birthday....

This year, he is embracing social media. It’s a 180-degree opinion switch. Instead of carping about the Internet in general, he’s praising a recently-discovered “cash cow” called “Go Fund Me” on Facebook.

He’s been intrigued by what he calls “big bucks” collected to cover all kinds of health issues.

Though he is “horse healthy” in general, he has crafted a carefully-worded appeal that friends might easily misunderstand, and so far, they are. Truth to tell, Mort is the master of double talk, and sometimes triple....

*****
Here’s what I saw perusing FB the other day. “For my birthday this year, friends may choose to send cash that may be needed for expensive eye surgery. My ophthalmologist confirmed what I have long believed to be true. While he didn’t mention a specific date for possible surgery, he said he’s 100% certain that I have ATTACHED retinas in both eyes. Financial help can be sent via mail, or handed to me at my birthday party.”

He signed it “Mortimer,” as if anyone might wonder who would contrive such a ruse.

When I called him the other day, he said he’s already received $600 by mail from 15 friends, with notes from others promising that they’ll hand him checks at the party....

*****
Mort is leaning on recent action by the Texas Legislature to fatten his personal coffers.

He’s inviting children from throughout the thicket to set up lemonade stands, now that it’s legal for them to operate such stands legally.

There’ll be a $25 entry fee, and guests will cast votes to determine which kid is selling the best lemonade. “I’m presently contacting Country Time Lemonade to see if they’ll help me,” Mort said. “They offered ‘Legal-Ade’ to help pay for permits and fines for kids across the state who have been cited for failure to secure permits for their lemonade stands before the Governor signed the bill into law. I’m thinking they’ll consider such assistance as positive PR, emphasizing that many “lemon bills” coming through the legislature CANNOT be made into lemonade.”...

*****
Actually, the new law protecting youngsters’ lemonade stands starts on the idle american

by don newbury

September 1.

My Uncle Mort is not worried in the least.

“News of what happens in the thicket rarely trickles out, and even if it does, September 1 will have come and gone before authorities realize we ‘jumped the gun’ on applying the new law a little early down here. Besides, police citing kids operating a lemonade stand several years ago didn’t win friends. Turns out they were trying to raise funds to take their dad to a water park on Father’s Day....

As soon as the birthday party ends, Mort will resume his project befriending left-handers.

“If you don’t think we’re in the minority, notice the door handle when you go to the post office,” he yammered. “The right handle invariably is the one worn smooth by so many ‘righties.’”

He says his first-grade teacher tried to teach him to print letters with his right hand, and his pencil ran right off his Big Chief tablet. “Being left-handed helped me out at high school graduation,” he admitted. He claimed the other 11 graduates were predicted to be “most likely” in numerous fields of adult life. “I was voted most likely to remain left-handed,” he joked. No one dreamed then that he’d count on a “Go Fund Me” appeal to help him celebrate a birthday.....

Supreme Court rules on bakers

By Noab Elam

On Monday, the Supreme Court threw out a ruling against two Oregon bakers who refused to bake a wedding cake for a lesbian couple. The couple brought this to court citing religious beliefs as the baker’s reason for not providing their services for a gay wedding. This incident comes after similar headlines in Colorado.

During the Colorado case, the justices ruled in favor of the Colorado baker who refused to bake a cake for gay couple.

The Supreme Court sent the case against the two Oregon bakers back to a lower court for further consideration in light of their Colorado Decision.

According to court documents, this case started when Rachel Bowman-Cryer, one of the brides, came to the Kleins’ for a wedding cake. Whenever Aaron Klein asked for information on the wedding, such as the name of the groom, Bowman-Cryer told him there was, in fact, no groom at all. Klein then told Bowman-Cryer that the bakery did not make cakes for gay weddings.

Apparently, the Kleins had to pay a $135,000 fine to the couple for discriminating against them in violation of a state public accommodations statute, which led to the Kleins having to close down their bakery.

The reason they were fined is because they live in Oregon, which is a very authoritarian and leftist state. That means that government tends to get very involved in personal and business life in that state.

This is one of the big problems with authoritarianism. While the left has its flaws, authoritarianism has bigger flaws. An example of those flaws is exactly this situation. Oregon is fining Aaron and Melissa Klein for following their religious beliefs in the work place. They weren’t hurting anybody and they were harassing anyone with their religious beliefs but were still fined.

I am a big proponent of certain parts of libertarianism because of stuff like this. Does anyone actually want the government involved in who you can and can’t sell your product to? I don’t and I don’t think the government should be able to tell anyone how to run their business. Yes, discrimination is a bad thing and without government intervention there is a possibility that discrimination rates would rise a little. However, I don’t think government is the solution. I feel like the market would take care of discrimination because once people hear about the incident they can choose to support the business or not.

With cases like this though, it shouldn’t have been a big deal to begin with. Just go to a different bakery. But, of course, everyone has to play the victim now.

Plans set for Clarendon's Saints' Roost Celebration

Make your plans now to enjoy the 142nd annual Saints' Roost Celebration on July 4, 5, and 6 in Clarendon.

With just three weeks to go, the celebration's schedule is pretty well set with the Clarendon Outdoor Entertainment Association opening the festivities with a July Fourth Junior Rodeo. Junior team entries are $125 each and can be made by calling 806-679-2738.

The celebration gets under full steam on Friday, July 5, with merchant sales and the annual Depression Luncheon at the Downtown Ministry Center from 11 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. The cost for the beans and cornbread meal is 25 cents.

That night, the COEA Ranch Rodeo opens at 7:30 at the COEA Arena followed by a dance at 9 p.m. featuring the music of Rhett Uhland opening for Mitchell Ford & The Volunteers.

The big day will be Saturday, July 6, beginning with the Arts & Craft Fair on the square at 9 a.m. sponsored by the Donley County 4H. Booths are $25 each and should be reserved through the Donley County 4H by calling 806-874-2141.

The Chamber of Commerce's Old Settlers Reunion and the Kids' Bicycle & Tricycle Parade also begin at 9 a.m. The Kids' Parade will line up and register at 8:30 at Keith Floyd's shop at Third and Sully. Ed Montana will provide music and serve as master of ceremonies on the square.

Line up for the Herring Bank Parade will also start at 9 a.m. on Sixth Street north of Prospect Park. At 10:00, the parade will then take its usual route – north on Kearney to Third Street, west on Third to Sully, south in front of the Courthouse, and then wind back to the ball parks.

The Herring Bank Parade features $850 in cash prizes with $200 available for the best float, $100 for the best car or truck entry, $100 for the best animal or riding unit, $100 for the best tractor or farm equipment entry, and $100 for the best "other" entry.

From those first place winners, judges will select a Grand Prize winner who will receive an additional $250. Pre-registration is required for entrants to be judged for the prize money, and entry forms are due in the Visitor Center by 5 p.m. on June 28. Entry forms are available at the Visitor Center and in this week's Enterprise.

The Al Morrah Shrine Club barbecue will follow the parade at about 11 a.m. Tickets are $12 each and will be available at the Visitor Center and the Enterprise.

The Lions Club Cow Patty Bingo will follow the barbecue. Parade winners will be announced at 1 p.m.

The Henson's Turtle Race will then take place at 1:30 p.m. And the Ranch Rodeo will close out the day at the COEA Arena beginning at 7:30 p.m. with the dance to follow with Luke Koepke providing the music.

Also happening during the celebration weekend, the Whistle-Stop will have its monthly trade days Saturday and Sunday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the former Chamberlain Motor Company property. The Whistle-Stop features more than 100 vendors as well as live music, food, and fun for the entire family.

For more information about the celebration, contact the Visitor Center at 806-874-2421.

Howard to wed McCaffery
Bruce and Gwynne Howard of Hedley have announced the wedding of their daughter Lydia Gale Howard to Derek Matthew McCaffery of Ferndale, Washington. The couple will wed on Saturday, June 29, at 2:00 p.m. at the First Baptist Church of Hedley. Lydia graduated from Clarendon High School and West Texas A&M University with a degree in Elementary Education. She plans on teaching once the couple move to Washington. Derek graduated from Ferndale High School and is presently a student majoring in Biochemistry at Western Washington University in Bellingham, Wash. He plans on pursuing a Master's degree after his undergraduate degree is completed and is presently employed in the medical field.

CISD trustees to hold meeting

Clarendon school trustees will meet next Monday to adopt a budget for heating and air-conditioning work to be done at the school.

The improvements will be made to rooftop units on the elementary and junior high buildings, and plans are also in the works to air-condition the Bronco Gym.

The board approved on May 7 selecting Huseman Consulting Engineers to provide construction manager-agent services relating to the HVAC project and authorized Superintendent Mike Norrell to negotiate a suitable contract with Huseman.

That contract was presented and approved at a called meeting on May 20.

In other school business at the May 7 meeting, trustees canvassed the results of the May election, and the oath of office was administered to Robin Ellis, Chuck Robertson, and Zach Robinson. The board also elected the following officers: Wayne Hardin, president; Weldon Sears, vice president; and Robin Ellis, secretary.

The depository contract with Donley County State Bank was extended, and the purchase of MacBooks for elementary teachers was approved.

The results of the fifth grade and eighth grade STAAR Math and Reading were presented. Tax deeds were approved for trust property in the city of Howardwick as presented.

After a closed session, the board approved offering a contract of employment to Trevela Dronzek.

During the June 10 meeting, the board increased cafeteria prices as presented and received the results of STAAR and EOC results for each campus.

After a closed session that evening, contracts were offered to Yancy Malloy, Meranda Graves, and Mel Evans.

Professional food manager training to be held

LUBBOCK —The Texas A&M AgriLife Extension Service is offering a professional food manager certification training course July 11-12 at the AgriLife Extension office for Lubbock County, 916 Main St., Suite 401.

The course will run 8 a.m.-5 p.m., both days. A $125 fee includes training materials and a national food manager certification examination. The food manager's certification is valid throughout the state for five years.

To register, call the AgriLife Extension office at 806-775-1740 by June 25.

The course will cover: Identifying potentially hazardous foods and common errors in food handling; Preventing contamination and cross-contamination of food; Teaching and encouraging personal hygiene for employees; Complying with government regulations; Maintaining clean utensils, equipment and surroundings; and Controlling pests.

Under the Texas Department of State Health Services jurisdiction, each food establishment is required to have one certified food-service manager employed.

“The program is designed to prepare foodservice managers to pass the certification examination, and it will provide valuable education regarding the safe handling of food,” said Kay Davis, AgriLife Extension community and health agent, Lubbock County.

“Almost 50 cents of every dollar Americans spend on food is spent on meals prepared away from home,” Davis said. “Therefore, careful attention to food safety is important to help keep customers safe and satisfied.”

She said foodborne illnesses can cost an establishment thousands of dollars in lost wages, insurance and medical bills, so knowledge of how to prevent foodborne illness is crucial.

According to Davis, the benefits of improved food safety include: Increased customer satisfaction; Improved relationships with health officials; and Prevention of bad publicity and lawsuits due to foodborne illness.

“Statistics indicate that foodborne illness continues to be a health issue in the US,” Davis said. “Each year, one in six Americans will become sick, 128,000 will become hospitalized and 3,000 will die due to foodborne illness.”

For more information call Davis at 806-775-1740 or visit <https://foodsafety.tamu.edu>.

He also claimed that case law says traffic citations can’t be heard by criminal courts. Howard and Lambert both challenged him to produce such case law.

“You’re telling me that every court in the State of Texas is doing it wrong?” Howard asked.

Later, Judge Howard further explained how a jury trial will be conducted.

“We will not argue matters of law before the jury,” Howard said. “We will not waste their time. The trial will be on the question of if Caleb Hudson...”

“I’m not Caleb Hudson,” the defendant said, cutting off the judge.

“If you’re representing someone else, then you are practicing law without a license, so I’m not accepting that,” Howard said.

The judge also said if Hudson attempted to argue matters of law that he had already ruled on in front of the jury, he would warn him once and then find him in contempt.

The court set Hudson’s jury trial for Tuesday, August 6, at 9 a.m.

Nursing Home Residents have Rights!

Would you be their voice?

Volunteer to be an advocate today!

If you would be interested in becoming a Certified Ombudsman for Nursing Home residents, please do!

We need people who would like to visit the residents in Nursing Homes and be a good listener. You will be trained on what to do during your visits and how to be an advocate for the Resident.

Nursing Home residents are sometimes forgotten, and we need to let them know how important they are and that they still have rights in the Long Term Care facility.

If you have a gift for this and a desire to help others, please contact us now and let's get started on helping make life better in our nursing homes.
