25th annual cookoff to be held Saturday

The Saints' Roost Museum will hold its 25th annual Col. Charles Goodnight Chuckwagon Cookoff this Saturday, September 28, with a big celebration that includes two performances by Red Steagall.

Tickets for the cookoff are sold out, according to museum officials. Admission is free, however, for the other activities at the museum Saturday including live entertainment, museum tours, and the Western tradeshow.

The wagon teams will arrive Friday to host area students for a day of learning about the chuckwagon and cooking the cowboy-way. Friday afternoon will also include the junior cookoff, which pairs kids, ages 8-17, with mentors on participating wagon teams to learn the ropes of cooking over an open fire.

The tradeshow Saturday starts at 10 a.m., and museum tours will be available throughout the day. Local and area entertainers will also be performing.

The authentic wagons will serve at 1 p.m. with the traditional chicken fried steak dinner, and other activities will include a hay auction and the Goodnight family reunion.

Later that afternoon, Steagall will take the stage at the Mulkey Theatre at 5 p.m. and 7:30 p.m., marking his first return to Clarendon since he headlined the first Chuckwagon Cookoff in 1995.

For more than 50 years, Steagall has entertained around the globe as a recording artist, songwriter, television, radio, and motion picture personality and cowboy poet. In 1991, the Texas State Legislature selected him as the "Official Cowboy Poet of Texas."

He launched his one hour syndicated radio show, Cowboy Corner. Critics across America have referred to Cowboy Corner as "masterful." Heard in about 155 markets in 34 states, Cowboy Corner is in its 26th year of broadcast.

Steagall has has been recognized with 12 Wrangler Awards for music and television from the National Cowboy & Western Heritage Museum in Oklahoma City.

He has published four books, and for his significant contribution to the western way of life, he was inducted into the Texas Trail of Fame in October of 1999. In addition to numerous other awards and honors, he was most recently presented in 2018 with the Golden Spur Award from the National Ranching Heritage Center at Texas Tech University.

Steagall's appearance, hosted by the Museum and the Mulkey Theatre, is designed to help raise funds for a new transportation exhibit building at the Museum and to benefit the theatre.

Tickets to see Steagall are $50 each and are still available for each show through the Visitor Center at 806-874-2421 or online at MulkeyTheatre.com. Tickets will also be available the day of the show.

Donley producers qualify for assistance

Donley County producers may qualify for Farm Service Agency emergency loan assistance following action taken by Agriculture Secretary Sonny Perdue on September 9.

The secretary designated three Texas counties as primary natural disaster areas based on damages and losses caused by drought occurring

August 20, 2019 and continuing. Those counties are Hall, Randall, and Swisher.

In addition, 14 other counties, including Donley, were named as contiguous where eligible family farmers may qualify for loan assistance. Those counties were: Armstrong, Briscoe, Carson, Castro, Childress, Collingsworth, Cottle, Deaf Smith, Donley, Floyd, Hale, Motley, Oldham, and Potter.

This designation makes farm operators in both primary and contiguous counties eligible to be considered for low-interest emergency loans from the FSA) provided eligibility requirements are met. FSA will consider each loan application on its own merits, taking into account the extent of losses, security available, and repayment ability.

Applications will be received through May 11, 2020 for production and physical losses.

For more information, contact Bob Pessel in the Donley County FSA office at 806-874-3561, ext. 110.

CISD board taps Jackson to be interim

Mike Jackson was named the interim superintendent of Clarendon CISD Monday night during a called meeting of the board of trustees.

Board Vice President Weldon Sears said Jackson will begin work this week, and the district will begin advertising for a new superintendent next week.

Jackson has also served as interim superintendent in Vega, Claude, Happy, Texoma, and River Road.

Jackson said he's familiar with Clarendon schools through friendships with Elementary Principal Mike Word and CHS Principal Larry Jeffers, and he also has family ties to Clarendon with both of his parents having attended school here in the 40s.

"Clarendon is a great school district," Jackson said. "I toured the campus Monday with [board president] Wayne Hardin, and I was impressed with the facilities and how well maintained they are."

He also said Clarendon has a reputation, dating back to the 1990s, as an innovative school in terms of implementing technology.

Jackson said the search for a superintendent will run six weeks with a first round of interviews planned for late November and a second round in early December.

"I hope to have a new superintendent to start the new semester in January," Jackson said.

Getting a new superintendent in the middle of the school year is not unusual, according to Jackson. But he also said if the initial search does not produce a candidate the board likes, he's willing to stay on and do another search.

Incident leads HISD to reschedule events

Hedley High School's homecoming activities were canceled last Friday and have been rescheduled for this week following an incident at the school September 19.

Superintendent Garrett Bains says a joke taken too far led to the decision to cancel the football game and activities even though the administration and law enforcement determined there was no threat to the school or its students.

"It was a bad topic for comedy," Bains said. "It would be like yelling 'bomb' in an airport. You just can't do that, and we decided to take a tough stance."

Donley County Sheriff Butch Blackburn said his department agreed there was no actual threat to the school.

"We worked with the school, and there was no credible threat," Blackburn said. "I do agree with the superintendent and the way he handled it."

The superintendent said the administration's policy is that disciplinary action means a kid cannot participate in an athletic event that week, which can have a big impact when a school only has eight football players.

"If you take out two or three, then you don't have a team," Bains said. "If you have two or three that can't play, you have to cancel."

Bains said it's important for kids to learn when a joke isn't funny anymore.

"These are good kids, and it's part of growing up," he said. "It was a bad decision by a couple of young men. It looks terrible. It looks much worse than it really is."

Bains said all homecoming activities have been moved to this week. He also said there has been a mixed reaction from parents but he thinks most support the school.

Conversation evolving in Texas politics

By Ross Ramsey, Texas Tribune

It seems safe to say that neither the Texas Legislature nor the Republican Party is going to follow Beto O'Rourke's call for a mandatory buyback of assault weapons.

Actually, it seems safe to say lots of Texas Democrats are just as unlikely to sign up.

But it's also clear that the hard lines drawn over years and years of debating about guns in Texas and in the U.S. are getting a little blurry.

Texas politicians and officeholders are talking about guns in new ways. Repeated mass shootings can change minds, slowly. Legislative committees and state leaders are talking now about restrictions that were recently considered well out of bounds for Texas, like "red flag" laws and background checks and the like. Democrats, generally more willing to regulate firearms, are lugging around a pile of bills that haven't passed in recent sessions that would tighten laws around possession, use and sale of guns.

Republicans are not lugging a similar stack. But some of them are reconsidering long-held positions.

After mass shootings at Sutherland Springs Baptist Church and Santa Fe High School, Gov. Greg Abbott pulled together some roundtable discussions to talk about possible state action. What came out were suggestions — many of them now appearing as new state laws — for mental health monitoring, laws that might make schools safer from attacks and other measures that stayed safely away from possession, use and sale of guns.

Abbott had another idea, too, that has been adopted elsewhere but not in Texas: What about a red flag law that would allow judges, after full hearings, to temporarily take guns away from people deemed dangerous to themselves or others?

It was a move into the gray area between gun control advocates and Second Amendment advocates, and it didn't last a month. Lt. Gov. Dan Patrick announced at the time — this was a little more than year ago — that the idea wouldn't get anywhere in his Texas Senate.

But after the more recent shootings this summer in El Paso and in Odessa, Patrick has wandered into that gray area, suggesting an expansion of background checks to include "stranger to stranger" sales between individuals. He wouldn't require background checks when people sell guns to family and friends, but even with that cutout, Second Amendment advocates who have generally considered Patrick a powerful ally are kicking and screaming about his suggestion.

It's not like Texas leaders are suddenly hostile to the Second Amendment, or to gun owners or sellers or even to firearms. Heading to hunting leases or shooting ranges with political reporters in tow remains a staple of state politics. That kind of demonstration of individualism is not going to fade any time soon.

In fact, during their legislative session earlier this year, Texas lawmakers loosened some restrictions on guns.

And you might notice the distance between what Abbott and Patrick and others have dared to talk about and what is still considered untouchable. Expanded background checks don't prevent people from getting guns and don't really affect most buyers. Red flag laws are arguably more about gun owners' mental health and condition than about their guns.

Texas Republicans have not wiggled on issues that directly address the hardware involved. They're maintaining a safe and frankly delighted distance from positions like presidential candidate Beto O'Rourke's "Hell yes, we're going to take your AR-15, your AK-47" declaration in last week's Democratic presidential debate.

O'Rourke and Patrick and Abbott do have one thing in common, however, even though they appear to share little common ground. Each is talking about things that have been verboten in state politics, and in the politics of their two parties.

But the political duck-and-cover drills on Second Amendment issues have changed: Republicans can talk about red flag laws and say they're just considering Greg Abbott's suggestion. They can talk about background checks without being painted as liberals, since they're in lockstep with the lieutenant governor. And the Democrats? They can point to Beto O'Rourke as a radical outlier, claiming everything short of his proposal is a moderate idea.

Maybe the laws won't change in a significant way; there's no way to know, really, until the Legislature or Congress does something. But there is a conversation.

Fixing issues with standing in lines

Probably no governor in the history of the Lone Star State has faced double-barreled "standing in line" issues like the current Texas boss, Greg Abbott. Throngs coming from the south want in, and flustered Texans are standing in line for hours to obtain or renew driver's licenses. Life must be more than tedious for the Gov.

It makes me think of my dear old dad, whose dander was raised when federal troops were sent to stop a long ago influx of immigrants at the Rio Grande. At the time, his "goat was gotten" far worse by Yankees swarming across the Red River to the Lone Star State.

"As usual, the feds got things backwards in tackling immigration problems," said my dad, who was a rebel to the bone. "They're guarding the wrong river."...

Well, better minds than mine are flailing about unsuccessfully on the immigration subject. I'll decline if ever asked to help. Politicians have to "fake it 'til they make it."

My stumbling would be even worse.

I can help them, however, concerning the long lines for driver's licenses. Instead of showing up with documentation of their birth, prospective licensees may be better off to arrive with smiles and wrinkles deep enough to plant corn rows. Other indications that such applicants have survived the snows of many winters can't hurt....

When one is older'n dirt, some records are hard to come by. Take 95-year-old Albert Bigler, an Ennis, TX, resident whose driving these days has been limited mostly to a three-mile stretch between his home and his church.

Unable to get a driver's license, he's been "looking over his shoulder" on his drive to church, where he regularly mows the lawn.

Poor guy claims he was born at home in 1925, but he's not sure whether it was in Fort Worth, or somewhere west of Cowtown. Authorities have tried to pinpoint his place of birth, but most log cabins have fallen into disrepair....

His plight was highlighted on social media, and some newspapers wrote about him.

State licensure honchos got "high behind" after Bigler had "struck out" looking for evidence of his birth at DPS centers, courthouses, his doctor's office and even a trip to the Vital Statistics Office of Texas Health and Human Services in Austin. No "squeaking wheel" ever got a quicker oiling. Social Security paperwork — along with DPS assistance — led to hasty issuance of his driver's license....

Never has identity been so important; probably that's the reason so many of 'em are being stolen.

And starting next year, when all states must comply with the REAL ID Act, authenticity of "who we are" will grow even tougher.

the idle american by don newbury

Better that Bigler's license expired this year instead of next. While renewal may have seen improbable in 2019, it might have been virtually impossible in 2020....

I may face a challenge similar to his, thanks to a cashier recently who asked if I were a military veteran. If so, I would have qualified for a 10 percent discount. I answered, "No, my military service was limited to eight years in the Army National Guard."

"I'm in the National Guard, and I qualify," he bristled. "Find your papers and take advantage of discounts."

I can't find my separation papers that would prove that I was a member of the Army National Guard from 1954-1962. I do, however, have a newspaper photo showing me in combat gear, with a bayonet in my teeth. Reckon that will count?...

A fellow about Bigler's age was a menace to California freeways.

He never traveled great distances, either, and he always drove 30 MPH, his speed of choice most of his life. Trouble was, the minimum speed on the "take-life-in-your-hands" freeways was 50 MPH.

Highway patrol personnel — weary of pulling him over — urged him to drive faster. "If you don't," one trooper warned, "I'll order you to take a class in offensive driving"...

Saving the historic Horny Toad Bar

There are more things happening in Cranfls Gap, Texas. than in most major cities. It was settled by Norwegians and four families from Norway maintain homes in Cranfls Gap. "They come here about four times a year," says Gap resident Sandi Carlson. "They travel all over Texas and know more about the state than most Texans. They keep up with our music and everything that's going on in the state."

Sandi and her husband Carl own the Horny Toad, perhaps the most photographed bar in the state.

"We were at a Ducks Unlimited meeting and we talked about saving some kind of critter," says Carl. "We were all drinking and somebody mentioned saving the horny toad. We decided it would be too much trouble, so instead of starting a program to preserve the Texas lizard we decided to just preserve the Horny Toad Bar."

It's the town's community center. Farmers drive their tractors up to the Toad and go in for lunch. Some years ago a man from Las Vegas was in the bar and said he was looking for the ideal small town.

"We thought it was some sort of scam," says Carl, "but it was legit. The Convention and Visitors Bureau of Las Vegas had a nationwide search going on to find the best little town in America. As the search went on, we were one of the top 10 finalists, and then there were two, then we won. A busload of Gap residents flew to Vegas and spent a week, all expenses paid."

Every December Cranfls Gap has a lutefisk dinner that's been going on for more than 30 years. Carl has done the cooking.

"That fish gets a lot of bad press and people make fun of it, but it's a staple for poor people in Norway. It looks like a shingle of beef jerky but it cooks out nice. Sandi and I really like it. Apparently others do, too."

Cranfls Gap has a Bacon Bash every October. It started in 2012 and attracts more than 2,000 people.

stories of texas
by tumbleweed smith

"We limit it to 2,500 tickets," says Carl. "We figure that's about all our downtown can hold. Tickets are fifty dollars each and the proceeds go to sending kids to a diabetic camp and providing blankets and other winter gear to homeless people."

Some 40 cooking teams enter the contest. Organizers provide everything but the bacon, which is furnished by a grocery store in Hamilton. Cooks create items ranging from steaks to ice cream. Sandi loves bacon ice cream.

"I'm usually not an ice cream eater, but that's something really good. They caramelize the bacon."

Prize money is $10,000 and sometimes the winners just donate the money back. Carl said they have a trailer load of blankets, coats, hoodies, gloves, caps and backpacks and take it to Austin, Waco, Dallas and Abilene passing out the winter items. It's all free. Since the bacon Bash started it has raised nearly half a million dollars. Last year it raised $100,000. This year the event is scheduled for Saturday, October 19. A team from Norway has entered.

Golden Needles Quilting Club met

Golden Needles Quilters met Thursday, September 19, at the Senior Citizens Center with Louella Slater hosting. Louella provided a lovely standard sized quilt with “Nine Match” as its pattern. The ladies very much enjoyed the work and fellowship.

Those present were Louella, Tiny Alderson, Wilma Lindley, Allen Leathers, Janan Koontz, Mary Lynn Manning, Frances Thompson, and Barbara Helms.

The Clarendon Lions Club held its regular Tuesday noon meeting September 24, 2019, with Boss Lion Scarlet Estlack in charge.

We had ten members, Sweetheart Kira Weatherton, and District Gov. Dan Suman present this week.

The Boss Lion updated everyone on the circus coming up next Monday, September 30, with performances at 5:00 and 7:30 p.m. Tickets are available at the Enterprise, the Visitor Center, Lowe’s, and the Outpost.

Lion DG Shuman discussed his plans to visit all 37 clubs in the district this year and also encouraged us to strive for the Club Excellence Award. He also discussed the Texas Lions Camp and the impact that such programs as the Lions Eye Bank and the Leader Dog for the Blind have on people.

He is focusing his attention on the Lions’ vision programs this quarter in an effort to raise awareness about the good Lions Clubs do in helping people see. He also noted that more than two million pairs of used eye glasses have been donated to people in need last year.

There being no further business, we were dismissed to spread Lionism and good cheer throughout our fair county.

Nancy Kidd swears in Carey Wann last week to the Clarendon College Board of Regents.

CC Regents fill vacant seat

Carey Wann was sworn in as the newest member of the Clarendon College Board of Regents during its regular meeting last Thursday, September 19.

Wann takes the seat vacated by former regent Jack Moreman, who resigned in April after the board voted down a motion to extend President Robert Riza’s contract.

Regents voted last month to appoint Randy White to serve out Moreman’s term or appoint Wann if White declined the position.

Last week’s meeting lasted two hours with about twenty minutes devoted to correcting and re-writing minutes from three meetings in August. During that time, Chairman Tommy Waldrop appointed a committee of Regents Edwin Campbell and Jerry Woodard to meet with the college auditor and report back to the board at the next meeting.

The next hour was spent on the college’s quarterly investment report and August financial report, which were both heavily critiqued by Woodard and Regent Darlene Spier before the board voted not to accept them until they were verified.

In other college business, regents accepted bids on delinquent properties in the City of Howard-wick; approved the Donley Appraisal District’s contract for assessing and collecting taxes, approved the 2019-2020 college catalog; ratifying personnel changes; and adopted updating bank resolutions with Herring Bank, Aim Bank, and First Bank & Trust following the resignation of Vice President of Administrative Services Rit Christian.

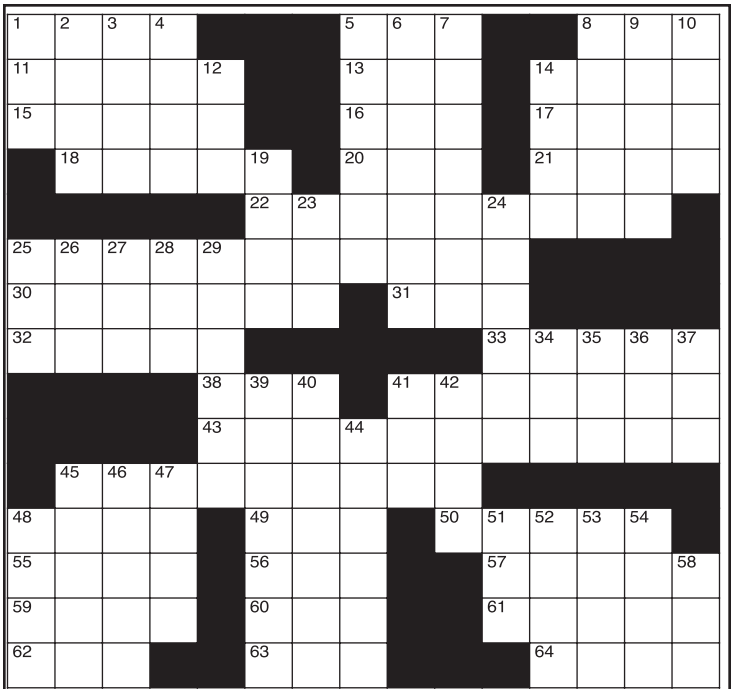

In his president’s report, Dr. Riza discussed policy updates through the Texas Association of School Boards (TASB) and updated the board on clarifying legislation related to the Texas Open Meetings Act prohibiting walking quorums, which he described as “a series of conversations between board members outside of a regular board meeting.”

“Basically, they made it easier to prove and prosecute,” Waldrop summarized.

H’wick received much needed rain

The Lord is watching over our little community. We received more than two inches of rain at our house this weekend. The downside of rain is it appears to increase the pollen in the air, which increases sneezes and watery eyes, but there is always Claritin to keep that under control.

The District 9 Volunteer Fire Department held a meet-and-greet at their future home on Plainview Lane with a crowd of around 100 enjoying a meal of brisket, beans, and potato salad along with live music supplied by Mac Miller and Gary Cockerham along with some friends.

There has been some confusion over the two fire departments forming at the same time; I will attempt to explain. The Clarendon Volunteer Fire Dept. is responsible for fires in Clarendon and Donley County. The City of Howardwick Volunteer

Clarendon breaks ground on new pool

Last week was a really good week!

For starters, on Tuesday, we broke ground on the new swimming pool project downtown. It’s been a four-year long process of gathering money, finding someone who can build the pool, and designing the pool. Finally, now after all that, we’re finally going to get a pool in Clarendon!

Junior high student council members from this year and last year, including myself, along with the high school student council, Bronco cheerleaders, and the fifth grade classes got to attend. My sister and I got to dig with the shovels the first scoops of dirt for the pool.

Then on Thursday, the junior high football team played in Chil-

Fire Dept. is responsible for fires in Howardwick, the Hedley Volunteer Fire Dept. is responsible for fires in Hedley.

The District 9 Volunteer Fire Department will serve an area defined with boundaries set by Donley County as being from the Howardwick City Limits north to I-40 and east to Alanreed. This will include the south side rest stop on I-40. I feel very privileged in having two fire stations in close proximity. We should be well protected.

We played the second offense and second defense most of the entire game. I’m on both of those, so I got to play a lot. The Childress boys were bigger than most of us, but we still ended up winning 54-8. My friend Mason Allred scored two touchdowns and a two-point conversion as a part of our secondary offense.

I just had a really good week last week, and I would invite you to come to our Colt football game this Thursday in Memphis at 5 p.m.

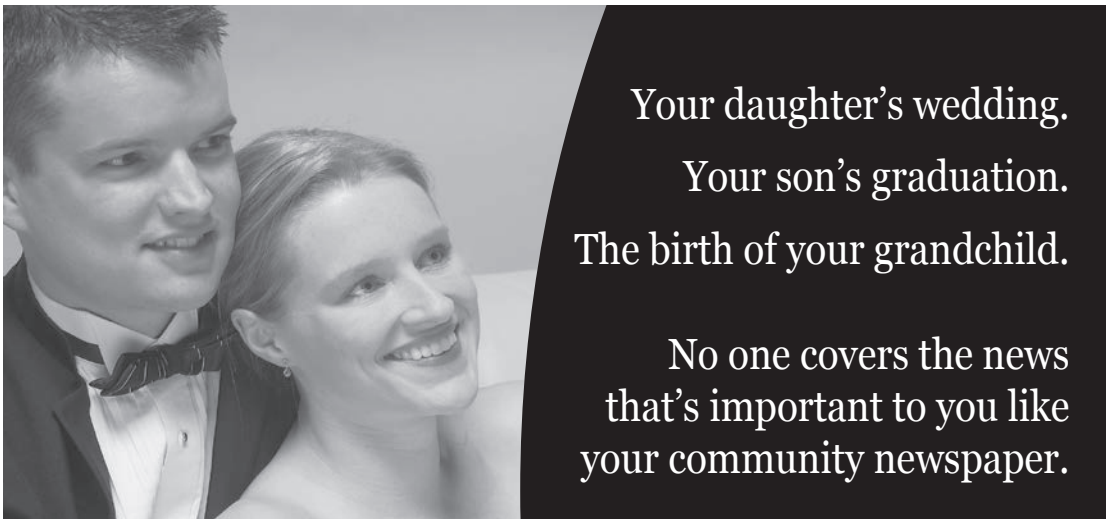

Skeeter the Clown visited Clarendon Monday to spread the word that the Culpepper & Merriweather Circus is coming to town on Monday, September 30.

Tech breaks ground on vet school

Administrators and officials from Texas Tech University and Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center (TTUHSC) gathered last Thursday in an empty field just north of the Amarillo campus to break ground on the Texas Tech University School of Veterinary Medicine, the latest milestone that will bring about the state of Texas' first new school of veterinary medicine in more than 100 years.

The turning of dirt symbolized the culmination of years of dedication and hard work that will result in the Texas Tech University School of Veterinary Medicine, designed to address the imperative need for rural and large-animal veterinarians. Within two years, Texas Tech University expects to enroll its first class of veterinary students who will receive a cost-efficient education through an innovative, world-class curriculum designed to address the critical shortage of veterinarians that is threatening small, regional and agricultural communities throughout the state.

"This groundbreaking celebrates an achievement that symbolizes the best of what can result from cooperation that captures the synergies between education, city and state government, industry and individuals of exceptional vision and generosity," said Lawrence Schovanec, Texas Tech President.

"Because of the support of so many, the Texas Tech School of Veterinary Medicine will be able to provide students greater access to affordable and innovative education that will prepare them to serve the people of our state, especially those in rural areas, and the large-animal industry that is so important to the state and especially West Texas. This is a proud day for our state, West Texas and Texas Tech."

The academic building will be named the School of Veterinary Medicine Amarillo Campus. In addition, a separate set of facilities that will serve as the large-animal focal point of the school will be named the School of Veterinary Medicine Mari-rosa Station. Together, these facilities support the school's instruction, research and outreach mission.

The two-story academic building will consist of two learning wings. The east wing will consist of three large classrooms, breakout rooms and office suites on the first floor, with leadership and faculty offices and graduate study and work rooms on the second floor.

The west wing will consist of laboratory and research spaces, as well as locker rooms, surgery suites, housing for small animals and support rooms for anatomy and pathology instruction. The west wing also will include a lobby where veterinary partners can drop off animals for examination and surgical procedures.

"This is a monumental day for the Texas Tech University System, the city of Amarillo and our great state as the groundbreaking of the Texas Tech School of Veterinary Medicine signifies the cementing of this initiative," said Dr. Tedd L. Mitchell, chancellor of the Texas Tech University System and TTUHSC president.

"Today's celebration is more than a century in the making and is proof that when our communities come together, our greatest ambitions are possible. From the beginning, our vision for the veterinary school has been to answer the needs of an underserved region and industry and to provide affordable higher education to citizens of Texas. We wouldn't be here without the endless support of many, and I thank you all."

The School of Veterinary Medicine is expected to open in the fall of 2021 and will enroll an initial pioneering class of approximately 60 students. The program also is designed to support graduate students involved in advanced research.

Texas Tech's model will recruit and select students with a passion to practice and succeed in small, agricultural and regional communities and utilize a curriculum focused on the competencies and skills necessary to be successful in practices that support these communities. The model eliminates the need for a costly teaching hospital and, instead, partners with the community of veterinary practices across the state to provide clinical learning through collaboration.

The groundbreaking is the year's latest milestone, after state leaders recognized the need for a new school of veterinary medicine. In June, Gov. Greg Abbott signed into law the state budget for the next two years, which appropriated $17.35 million for the School of Veterinary Medicine in Amarillo that will go toward operational needs in order to get the school up and running. The appropriation included language directing Texas Tech to move forward in establishing the school.

Donors and civic leaders have pledged more than $90 million toward infrastructure, construction and scholarships for the School of Veterinary Medicine on the site of TTUHSC in Amarillo, which made Thursday's groundbreaking possible.

"We are here today because of the dedicated work and leadership of so many," said Guy Loneragan, dean of the School of Veterinary Medicine. "At its heart, this has been driven by passionate veterinarians across the state. They have been involved from the beginning and have shaped this school into something greater. I also appreciate the great leadership of the Texas Veterinary Medical Association in advancing the needs of the state and the profession."

"Words cannot express the gratitude and admiration I have for the Amarillo community, its vision and its leadership. Their generosity makes these buildings possible. It also provided our legislators critical support with which they could show their colleagues the return on investment of state investment in the new school."

Broncos slam Moguls in Munday

By Sandy Anderberg

The Bronco football team found a rhythm in Friday's game with Munday despite a two-hour weather delay. Clarendon was able to shut out the Moguls, 40-0.

The Broncos quickly turned 341 total yards into six touchdowns to get by their opponent. Quarterback Brock Hatley was responsible for 39 of those yards in the air on two passes. One was caught by Jamal Butler for a big gain at 37 yards, and Jordan Herndon caught a two-yard pass.

"We played good Friday night," head coach Clint Conkin said. "I thought our kids played very well."

Once again, the Broncos looked good on the ground as they racked up 302 yards rushing on the offensive side of the ball. Sylvester Ballard had a good night running with 102 yards on 10 carries and three touchdowns. Lamarus Penigar carried seven times for 37 yards, and Antwan Bassett had 12 carries on the night for 53 yards.

Herndon made good on two scores for the Broncos on three carries for 59 yards. Jordan Evans found the end zone once and was four for ten on the ground and Jmaury Davis posted 10 yards on four carries.

"Defensively, we held them to 135 total yards," Conkin said. "They had 32 rushing yards and 103 passing yards." Davis finished with seven tackles and two QB sacks, and Hatley had seven tackles. Ballard had six tackles and one interception, and Ivan Gonzalez had four tackles and one interception. Herndon played strong and had four tackles, two sacks, and one caused fumble, while Butler had five tackles and sacked the QB once. Evans had three tackles and one sack, Zane Sneathen grabbed five tackles, one sack, and one caused fumble, and Penigar finished with one tackle and one interception.

The Broncos will play Memphis Friday, September 27, in their Homecoming game in Bronco Stadium beginning at 7:00 p.m.

TxDOT seeking public input on Texas Transportation Plan 2050

AUSTIN – The future possibilities are intriguing, and TxDOT wants to know what Texans think will be the most pressing transportation needs for the next 30 years. TxDOT is hosting a second round of public meetings to gather public input that will be essential to developing the state’s long-range transportation plan, which helps inform the direction for the future of Texas’ multimodal transportation system.

The Texas Transportation Plan 2050, or TTP 2050, will guide TxDOT’s planning and programming for the next 30 years and set long-range goals for all forms of transportation. Texans who can’t make the meetings in person can participate online by visiting www.txdot.gov and searching for “TTP 2050”. TxDOT is providing an interactive survey to gather public input. The virtual open house also features a transportation usage survey.

This second round of public involvement follows a series of public meetings conducted earlier this year. Anyone who previously participated online, or who attended an open house, is encouraged to continue their involvement as there will be new information and additional opportunities to comment. To receive information or submit comments, email TTP_2050@txdot.gov or call the toll free messaging center at 1-855-TEXAS50 (839-2750). All meeting materials will be available at www.txdot.gov via searching “TTP 2050” on the site. Persons with disabilities who plan to attend and who may need assistance, or persons with special communication needs or who need an interpreter, should contact Casey Dusza at (512) 486-5149 or casey.dusza@txdot.gov at least three business days prior to the meeting so that appropriate arrangements can be made. Every reasonable effort will be made to accommodate these needs.

Online surveys will close Friday, November 15, 2019, and public comments will be accepted throughout the development of the TTP 2050 until early 2020. Written comments can be submitted via email at TTP_2050@txdot.gov or by USPS mail to: TxDOT TPP Division – TTP 2050, Attn: Casey Dusza, PO Box 149217, Austin, Texas 78714-9217.

Senior center’s staff dedicated to service

By Mary Lynn

Hours before the rest of us are thinking about lunch, the Donley County Senior Citizens Center is busy with preparations for the noon meal.

Two women are in the kitchen preparing meals to be served and delivered to residents of Howardwick and Clarendon.

Adenia Baird has worked here for ten years. She attended Clarendon schools and played clarinet in the Bronco Band. Her husband, Tony, works for Clarendon College. Adenia has a love for her “seniors” and demonstrates that with warm hugs for all. She treats everyone with respect and welcomes them as if they are family.

Sarah Braim also attended Clarendon schools and played the flute in the Bronco Band. She was a bell ringer for football games, a Junior Historian, and a member of the homecoming court.

Volunteering and singing in talent shows round out her list of accomplishments. Her husband, Ryan, works for the City of Hedley. Sarah also expresses a sincere “respect for all people.” Her hugs also bring happiness to many.

Both of these dedicated women are a joy to be around. Come and meet them and enjoy food, fun, and folks at the Donley County Senior Citizens Center!

No good deed goes unrewarded

It started out as a joke, says the Association of Mature American Citizens [AMAC]. But it ended up as a gesture of kindness when 24-year-old Carson King managed to get his poster on TV during an Iowa State football game.

It asked viewers to use their Venmo digital payment apps to send him beer money and they did just that.

It wasn’t long before the “unexpected” happened and he found that $400 had been deposited into his account. The sum quickly grew to $20,000.

In the meantime, King said he had a change of heart. Instead of beer he would donate his newfound wealth to the University of Iowa Stead Family Children’s Hospital. His request for beer money went viral and days later, the New York Post reported that the amount of King’s contribution had risen to over a million dollars and counting – a worthy donation for the children’s hospital.

The Busch Brewery took care of King for his generosity; they’re providing him with a year’s worth of beer.
