VFW Auxiliary asks for help with flags

The Donley County VFW Auxiliary is making plans to celebrate Veterans Day and needs some volunteers.

The group will put flags on the graves of veterans interred at Citizens Cemetery on November 4.

Would you please let the citizens know that the auxiliary will be putting out flags at the cemetery on Monday, November 4, at 4:30 p.m. They need several folks to help, and refreshments will be served. If the weather is bad on November 4, they will try again on November 5.

Hedley coach to face son on Lefors gridiron Thursday

Extra bragging rights will be up for grabs Thursday when the Hedley Owls face off against the Lefors Pirates as father and son coaches square off for the first time.

Hedley Head Coach Richard Jackson with 23 years of coaching experience will be across the field from his son, Lefors assistant coach Brandon Jackson, who has been coaching for nine years.

"As a dad, I'm really excited," Richard said Tuesday. "It's been a long time coming."

The younger Jackson grew up by his father's side in the coaching world, and Richard recalls Brandon going to with him to work at Midland Lee as a kid.

"He would go to the field house with me and watch films and fall asleep while I worked," he said.

Richard coached Brandon as he grew up, but it first looked like his son would take an entirely different career path.

"He was in an international science fair as a junior in high school," Richard said. "He said he wanted to be a doctor... not a doctor who saw patients but a doctor who made things or a scientist."

But something changed Brandon's senior year, and he decided to follow in his father's footsteps. He went to Howard Payne University on an academic scholarship, played American football in Europe for a year, and then went into coaching.

Richard Jackson

Brandon Jackson

"He's just done a great job," Richard says.

Richard said. "We constantly talk back and forth, and he tells me I'm doing it wrong. I ask what's wrong with it, and he says, 'Nothing really; it's just not how it's done now.'"

Although the father and son did coach together for two seasons at Lockney, they have never faced each other before. Their coaching styles are somewhat different but they know each other's offense and defense very well.

"I'm more old school," Richard said. "We constantly talk back and forth, and he tells me I'm doing it wrong. I ask what's wrong with it, and he says, 'Nothing really; it's just not how it's done now.'"

While the two schools may be rivals, the father and son don't see each other that way.

"My wife had shirts made supporting both schools," Richard said and noted that his two other sons are planning on attending the game.

Richard thinks Hedley can be victorious despite the opposition having an inside track to the Owl coach's thinking.

"He doesn't quite know everything the old man knows yet," Richard says laughing.

But regardless of who comes out in the lead on the scoreboard, Richard is confident of one thing.

"It's a Jackson family win either way," he said.

Hedley plays Lefors on the road at 7:30 Thursday night following the junior high game at 5:30.

XC runners advance to state meet

By Sandy Anderberg & Roger Estlack

Two Donley County cross-country runners are state bound following the regional meet in Lubbock Monday.

Clarendon's Kenny Overstreet and Hedley's Jordan Upton will compete in the Class 2A and Class 1A divisions respectively at the state meet.

Overstreet

A CHS senior runner Overstreet gave a great effort at the regional meet to earn the right, once again, to compete at the State level. Overstreet ran the 5000m race in a time of 17:12.40 and finished fifth in a field of 143 runners for Class 2A. Panhandle's Elijah Brown won the meet in a time of 16:37.80.

Hedley junior Upton came in tenth with a time of 18:22.10 in the Class 1A division. Other Owls running in Lubbock included Collin Monroe 19:30.50, Tyler Harper 20:15.90, Joshua Booth 20:19.40, and Elijah Booth 22:56.50.

Presidents gone wild with orders

By Michael D. Tanner, Cato Institute

Barrels of ink and countless hours of news time have been devoted to President Trump’s casual embrace of unilateralism and authoritarianism — with good cause. This is, after all, someone who says, “Presidents can do whatever they want.” As president, he has now issued more executive orders than Barack Obama, of the infamous “phone and a pen,” did over the same period. He has asserted the power to redirect congressionally appropriated funds, wage war, and ignore subpoenas.

Rhetorically, Democrats have loudly criticized this latest iteration of the imperial presidency. Yet, out on the campaign trail, the Democratic presidential aspirants have been quick to embrace a view of almost unlimited presidential power.

We now shrug off the grandiose promises of candidates to remake the economy, establish universal health care, and so on, as if Congress had no say in the matter. But when the need to build a legislative consensus does come up, the candidates simply promise to do it themselves.

Neither party acknowledges any limits on a president’s power to rule by decree.

Former vice president Joe Biden has criticized the use of executive orders. However, his website clearly states, “On day one, Biden will sign a series of new executive orders with unprecedented reach that go well beyond the Obama-Biden Administration platform and put us on the right track.”

Elizabeth Warren has already promised more than a dozen specific executive orders on issues ranging from immigration to worker non-compete clauses, from banning fracking to “requir[ing] every federal agency to incorporate diversity as part of their core strategic plan and create support networks through a government-wide mentorship program that centers Black and Brown employees.” And that doesn’t count all the executive orders she plans to undo Trump’s executive orders, which were designed to undo Obama’s executive orders, which were . . . you get the idea.

The other candidates are equally enamored of going it alone. Bernie Sanders would ban cuts to pension benefits through executive order, and Kamala Harris would impose a variety of gun-control measures. Julian Castro would unilaterally impose a carbon tax. And on and on.

Some of these ideas might be good ones and could form the basis for important legislative debates. But the American system of government rejects the idea that the president is some sort of elected king. As James Madison warned in Federalist No. 48, “An elective despotism was not the government we fought for; but one in which the powers of government should be so divided and balanced among the several bodies of magistracy as that no one could transcend their legal limits without being effectually checked and restrained by others.”

Article I of the Constitution says, “All legislative powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress of the United States.” If Congress has repeatedly abdicated that authority, it doesn’t change the fact that, as Chief Justice Jackson wrote in the 1952 case of Youngstown Sheet & Tube Company v. Sawyer, “In the framework of our Constitution, the President’s power to see the laws are faithfully executed refutes the idea that he is to be a lawmaker.... The Constitution is neither silent nor equivocal about who shall make laws which the President is to execute.”

Even when candidates turn to Congress, their authoritarian tendencies show through. Warren wants to eliminate the Senate filibuster and, along with Harris and Buttigieg, is considering packing the Supreme Court.

Nor do the candidate’s authoritarian impulses stop with usurping the powers of Congress. They apparently also want to be the courts as well. President Trump was rightly criticized for leading chants of “Lock her [or him] up” about his political rivals. But Democrats seem to have no end of people they want to lock up: President Trump and members of his cabinet, of course, but also pharmaceutical executives, insurance-company heads, gun manufacturers, and others that Democrats disapprove of. Obviously, if crimes have been committed, the perpetrators should be vigorously prosecuted. But there is something deeply unsettling about presidential candidates opining on guilt or innocence.

Nothing seems too small a matter for presidential oversight. Kamala Harris wants to censor Trump’s Twitter feed.

Presidential power has been increasing for decades. We’ve reached the point where presidents can go to war, appropriate funds, impose revenue measures, and far more, all without congressional approval. President Trump is pushing the boundaries of presidential authority even further. Sadly, though, Democratic complaints seem to boil down to Trump using that power for policies that the Democrats disagree with. They are all too happy to grab that power for their own purposes.

Unfortunately, this “might makes right” approach to governing is unlikely to end well.

A veteran after all these years

When the prospect of military service popped up, I didn’t know the National Guard from a cattle guard.

Generally speaking, that’s still the case, despite my having “served” in the Texas Army National Guard for nine years, not too long after muskets had been cast aside in favor of more effective firearms. More than 50 years have passed since those years sandwiched between Korea and Vietnam. My military training was confined to periodic evening and weekend drills, plus two weeks of more intense training each summer at Fort Hood. It was during an era of comparative peacetime.

Some of the troops were grizzled veterans, having served and experienced World War II horrors in the 36th Infantry Division. We 18-year-olds were still on our first package of razor blades, and some had never previously fired a weapon. Some civilians viewed us youngsters as “weekend warriors,” and with good reason....

This being said, after my final salute in 1965, I felt I had “signed off” on military service. It was “out of sight, out of mind.”

We sweated out the Cuban Missile Crisis, when the US was said to have missiles that could take out targets thousands of miles away.

Someone asked why we couldn’t use them on Cuba, a mere 60+ miles off the southern tip of Florida. “We don’t have any missiles that can hit targets that close,” one military chief mused....

In the past 55 years, it never once occurred to me that I was “due” any recognition for my years in the National Guard. When asked if I’m a veteran by various store cashiers, I’ve always answered “no.”

By happenstance, I’m reconsidering my status as viewed through the eyes of some merchants. Some of ‘em think I am, and offer 10 percent discounts.

I owe such recognition to a young man cashiering at Lowe’s in Burleson; call him “Eric E.” He straightened me out the other day after I’d dealt with his “veteran question.” My response was that my service was limited to the National Guard, and he reacted....

“I’m in the National Guard,” he said. “And when I complete my obligation, I’ll be a veteran.”

I felt a bit weak-kneed, realizing that I had forfeited thousands of dollars in discounts over the years with my “no” answers to having military service.

Had I known, Lowe’s and I could have built even more “somethings” together...

All I had to do was provide proof of service. At first, this seemed to be a “tall order.” I didn’t remember my military service number, had no proof of discharge and only foggy memories of achieving marksman status with an M1 rifle.

I shouldn’t even mention the “rifle

the idle american by don newbury

thing.” Some guys at the target range said that most of my rounds hit rocks nearby, with numerous fragments tearing into the canvas targets. They claim I was credited with the best fragment “hits.”

But, we don’t need to “go there,” do we?....

The search was on, at offices in Washington, St. Louis, and finally Austin.

I hit the “mother lode” in Texas’ capital city.

Sure enough, I became a Guardsman on February 22, 1956, in Brownwood, TX. After a trio of three-year enlistments, I attained the rank of SP-E5, whatever that is. I was a clerk typist and information specialist.

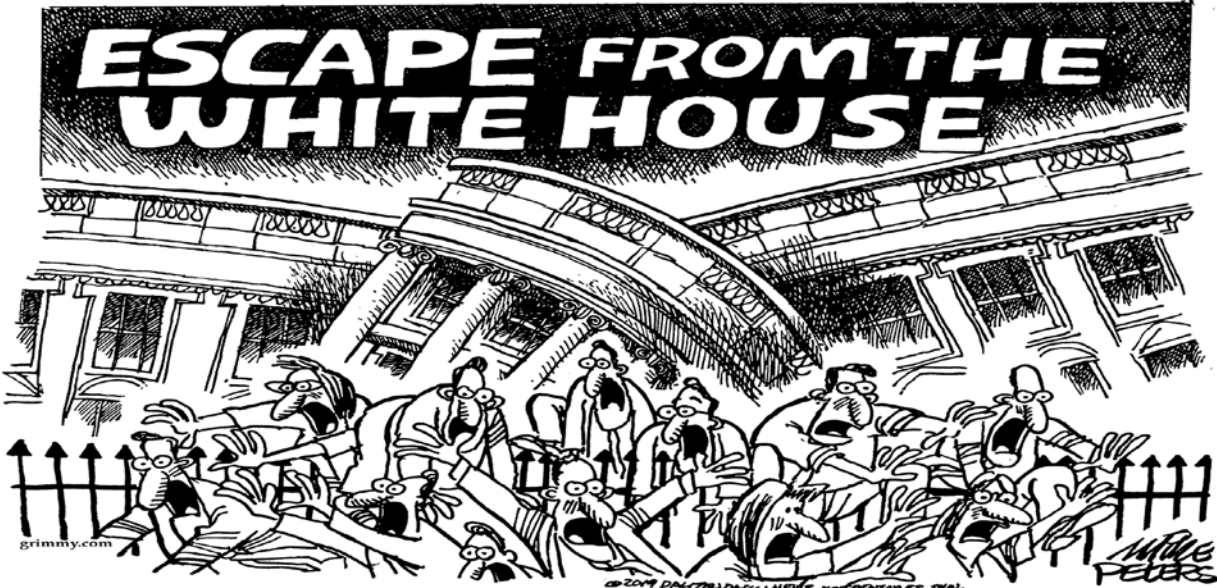

I wrote news stories about the National Guard, and had a weekly radio broadcast that always concluded with the reminder that listeners could “sleep well tonight, because the National Guard is awake.”...

Don’t misunderstand. I am grateful to the tens of thousands of vets whose service dwarfs mine. Still, I now have documentation about my military service. Some may understandably question my 145-pound weight at the first “weigh in.” (That was 75 pounds ago.)

But at Lowe’s, I’m considered a military veteran.

Thanks, Eric. Without you, I could have died without ever knowing I was eligible for a discount!...

A Cleburne man of many talents

I have a small horned toad made of spoons and forks. It is a clever piece of whimsical art produced by Roger Stanley who lives on a ranch near Cleburne. “We call it Bent Wheel because we found an old bent wheel and put it on a gate,” says Roger. When I met him for the interview, the first thing he did was pull out his guitar and start playing Red River Valley. He went through a couple of tunes and ended up with Ghost Riders in the Sky. His daddy gave him a guitar when he was 13.

‘I learned to play the guitar by looking in a mirror. I’d put a record on the record player and try to duplicate it. My daddy was musical and loved the old cowboy ballads. When I was 5 years old we’d go chase cows and I’d be standing up in the front seat listening to daddy sing.”

Roger is extremely talented when it comes to making things with his hands. “I used to make my own toys from old skate wheels, pieces of junk, just anything. I made myself a rod and reel when I saw one for the first time. I was 7 or 8 then. I have this little porch on the house and it has a wood-burning stove in it. That’s my world. I sit there with a jeweler’s torch and make things.” His items are popular at Cleburne’s weekly Wednesday flea market. “I always bring a bunch of my art items. We also liquidate estates and we have a lot of that stuff with us.”

In the 3rd grade Roger read through a complete set of encyclopedias. He makes custom hunting knives and is learning to make arrowheads. He built 2 cars from scratch, starting with the frames. One of them was featured in a hotrod magazine.

Roger writes and recites cowboy poetry and performs it at poetry gatherings all over the state. Once when he was at an event in the tiny town of Woodbury near Hillsboro the person on stage asked the audience of anyone had a joke or story they would like to tell. Roger walked on stage and recited a poem about a wolf that he had written. “It went over pretty good and stories of texas

by tumbleweed smith

they invited me back several times. One time a publisher was in the audience and suggested I do a book, so I did. I went to a Red Steagall event at the stockyards in Fort Worth, recited some poetry and the book sold out. I’ve also done a few CDs of my poetry. It got to where I was doing commission poetry for everything from fraternity parties to family reunions. I do poetry every month in Cleburne’s Performing Arts Center.”

His daddy dabbled in art, making sculptures of flying ducks and other wildlife. Roger called his mother a Cherokee Squaw and she was an artist with a needle and thread. “She had me making little leather pouches, doing the beadwork and everything. I keep one with me all the time. It contains things that are special to me, little things my wife has given me over the 50 years we’ve been married.”

Roger has made his living in construction, both designing homes and working as building foreman. He taught woodshop in high school and later painted the interiors of 14 schools in central Texas. I treasure my little silverware horned toad.

Golden Needles held meeting

The Golden Needles Quilting Club met in the Senior Citizens Center to quilt and eat a delicious lunch. Louella Slater made the quilt top of the Strip quilt done in wedding colors of gold, cream, and blush, with a heart and cross in the center.

We mourned the passing of a quilter and helper, MaryLynn Manning.

Those in attendance were Gay Cole, Wilma Lindley, Janan Koontz, Carlene Hollar, Dortha Reynolds, Allene Leathers, Frances Thompson, Mary G Lynn, and Louella Slater.

Quilting held at Senior Citizens

By Mary Lynn

Quilting at the Donley County Senior Citizens Center takes place every third Thursday of the month.

Entering the building you see a large quilt stretched onto a frame and several women sewing and visiting. Laughter and smiles are abundant. They are enjoying fellowship and the company of each other, as well as sharing a love of the craft.

The Golden Needles Quilting Club uses the facility because of the space and the good lighting. It takes lots of room to set up and accommodate everyone plus a large piece of fabric combination.

A great meal is served at noon so all can stay for lunch and visit with others who come to eat. They see their neighbors and friends in one place.

People coming in during the day watch the work and visit. Most have stories of sleeping under quilts as children and of mothers and grandmothers who held “quilting bees” in homes or churches.

Come by to see these rich and beautiful creations. It is something to appreciate.

On a sad note, the quilters lost a dear friend with the passing of Mary Lynn Manning. There’s an empty chair in the circle. She’ll be greatly missed.

Colt spirit

Colt Band members Jared Musick, Patrick Monds, and Kaleb Bolin play the Fight Song during last week's Clarendon Junior High pep rally. There was great enthusiasm at the pep rally, but ultimately the Colts' game with Booker was canceled due to a winter storm bearing down on the Panhandle.

H'wick to host Trunk or Treat

What a week for weather! One day it was 85°F; the next it was snowing along with a true blue norther with winds howling with thunder.

I am a poor judge at the amount of snow we received, but it covered the roads and grass and looked so pretty. The kids didn't have a snow day, but school started late at 10:00. Amarillo made the national weather news with, "Unusual Thundersnow in October."

The year 2019 may well be remembered as the year with two major snow storms before Halloween because another storm with ice and sleet is predicted for this week.

Well, the Trunk or Treat originally planned from the cars at the Howardwick park has been moved inside the Community Center. Nine booths have been reserved, so bring the kiddos to pick up treats in a warm place and show off their costumes.

Jerry Mulanax, in charge of the Neighborhood Watch, is offering anyone the opportunity to sponsor a Neighborhood Watch sign to be placed around the community to alert everyone of their presence. These are an aluminum sign about 10x14 and mounted on a steel pole which sell for $40. If you are interested in becoming a sign sponsor, contact Jerry Mulanax through City Hall.

Please be in prayer for the people affected by the wildfires in California. We have been in that situation and remember all the help we received.

Birthday bowling and laser tag

Two week-ends ago, I went to Western Bowl for my birthday, and I took a few of my friends and my family.

Western Bowl is a place where they have bowling, arcades, and laser tag. We started by playing a game of bowling. I ended up winning with 112 points, my friend Mason came in second, and then my friend Bryce got third place.

We started to play another game, but we wanted to go play laser tag.

After that we went and had cake and pizza then I opened cards and got my new electric scooter that goes 15 mph! It's fun to drive. I've already put almost 70 miles on it. I've driven my scooter every day now for almost ten days now.

We also went and played a bunch of games in the arcade, and I got 1,600 tickets. I had a lot of fun, and I loved my birthday party. I appreciate everyone who attended my party and who wished me a happy birthday.

IN APRIL OF 2004, I journeyed south across the Salt Fork for the first time to hang my shingle in Clarendon. It has been my pleasure to have met the dental needs of this area for fifteen plus years having developed many wonderful professional and personal relationships, which is the best part of any professional practice.

I suppose it is true that all good things must come to an end, and so it is with me and Clarendon. I did not want to leave you in a lurch, so I have made arrangements for Dr. Ed Vlosich, D.D.S., of Amarillo to assume the duties in Clarendon. His plans will be a significant improvement for Clarendon as he will ultimately double the number of days in Clarendon. Also, in emergency situations, Clarendon patients and new patients can call their Amarillo office in the morning, and it is their policy to see you that day for relief of pain. That is something I could not do and should be really helpful to the people of Clarendon.

I will personally complete all of the orthodontic cases in progress on the first Friday of each month. None will be rushed to completion.

I am continuing in the practice of dentistry in Booker for the foreseeable future. I've loved Clarendon and most of the people. I will miss you and the aviation opportunities you provided.

Early voting underway in Texas

By Davis Rich, Texas Tribune
With additional reporting by The Clarendon Enterprise

Texas voters are about to weigh in on 10 proposed amendments to the state constitution, which deal with everything from retiring law enforcement animals to the state’s tax code.

Voters in three state House districts will also participate in special elections to fill empty seats.

Early voting runs through Friday, November 1, at the Courthouse Annex. Election Day will be on Tuesday, November 5, with local polling places listed on page one of this week’s Enterprise.

During this year’s legislative session, lawmakers passed several bills that require amendments to the Texas Constitution. A majority of Texas voters must vote to support any change to the state constitution in a statewide referendum. In 2017, all seven constitutional amendments on the ballot passed.

Below are the 10 amendments on the ballot next month. More analysis on each proposition, from the House Research Organization, is available here.

Proposition 1
How it will read on the ballot: “The constitutional amendment permitting a person to hold more than one office as a municipal judge at the same time.”

What it means: Municipal court judges adjudicate city ordinance violations and certain misdemeanor criminal cases. The proposition would permit elected municipal court judges to serve multiple municipalities at the same time. Currently, only appointed municipal court judges – who make up more than 95 percent of the state’s municipal court judges, according to the House Research Organization – can serve multiple jurisdictions at the same time, making it more challenging for small and rural cities to find qualified candidates, some argue.

Proposition 2
How it will read on the ballot: “The constitutional amendment providing for the issuance of additional general obligation bonds by the Texas Water Development Board in an amount not to exceed $200 million to provide financial assistance for the development of certain projects in economically distressed areas.

What it means: This would allow TWDB to issue bonds to fund for water and wastewater infrastructure projects in areas where median household income is at or below 75% of the statewide median income level.

Proposition 3
How it will read on the ballot: “The constitutional amendment authorizing the legislature to provide for a temporary exemption from ad valorem taxation of a portion of the appraised value of certain property damaged by a disaster.”

What it means: This would allow the Legislature to create temporary property tax exemptions for people with property damaged in governor-declared disaster areas. The Legislature would be able to pass laws determining the eligibility requirements for exemptions, as well as the duration and amount of any write-offs.

Proposition 4
How it will read on the ballot: “The constitutional amendment prohibiting the imposition of an individual income tax, including a tax on an individual’s share of partnership and unincorporated association income.”

What it means: This would make it more challenging for future lawmakers to enact a personal income tax, requiring support from two-thirds of the House and Senate and a majority of Texas voters. Currently, the state Constitution requires that any proposal be approved a majority of lawmakers in the House and Senate and a majority of voters in a state-wide referendum.

Proposition 5
How it will read on the ballot: “The constitutional amendment dedicating the revenue received from the existing state sales and use taxes that are imposed on sporting goods to the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department and the Texas Historical Commission to protect Texas’ natural areas, water quality, and history by acquiring, managing, and improving state and local parks and historic sites while not increasing the rate of the state sales and use taxes.”

What it means: It would earmark all revenue from the sporting goods sales tax toward the state parks and wildlife department and historic commission, as intended when the tax was created in 1993. In the past, the Legislature has not appropriated all available tax revenue to TPWD and THC.

Proposition 6
How it will read on the ballot: “The constitutional amendment authorizing the legislature to increase by $3 billion the maximum bond amount authorized for the Cancer Prevention and Research Institute of Texas.”

What it means: This would allow the Legislature to double the maximum amount of bonds it can issue on behalf of the Cancer Prevention and Research Institute of Texas, to $6 billion.

Proposition 7
How it will read on the ballot: “The constitutional amendment allowing increased distributions to the available school fund.”

What it means: This would allow the General Land Office, the State Board of Education and other entities to double the amount of revenue they can provide the Available School Fund each year. The Available School Fund provides classroom materials and funding for Texas schools.

Proposition 8
How it will read on the ballot: “The constitutional amendment providing for the creation of the flood infrastructure fund to assist in the financing of drainage, flood mitigation, and flood control projects.”

What it means: This would create a flood infrastructure fund that the Texas Water Development Board could use to finance projects following a disaster.

Proposition 9
How it will read on the ballot: “The constitutional amendment authorizing the legislature to exempt from ad valorem taxation precious metal held in a precious metal depository located in this state.”

What it means: This would allow the legislature to create a property tax exemption for precious metals held in state depositories – like the Texas Bullion Depository, scheduled to open next year in Leander.

Proposition 10
How it will read on the ballot: “The constitutional amendment to allow the transfer of a law enforcement animal to a qualified caretaker in certain circumstances.”

What it means: It would allow for former handlers or qualified caretakers to adopt retired law enforcement animals without a fee.

Voters elsewhere in Texas will also decide three special elections to fill vacate state House seats. Two of the districts – HD-100 and HD-148 – are reliably Democratic. In HD-28, Democrats are trying to flip a seat that Rep. John Zerwas, R-Richmond, held from 2007 until last month.

USDA seeks comments on conservation updates

USDA’s Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is seeking public comments on 13 conservation practice standards.

Per direction from the 2018 Farm Bill, NRCS will gather feedback on 94 practices over the coming months through posting on the Federal Register.

Comments on these current 13 practice standards are due by Thursday, November 21.

These standards provide guidelines for planning, designing, installing, operating and maintaining conservation practices. The 13 updated conservation practice standards are: Contour Buffer Strips (Code 332); Dam, Diversion (Code 348); Deep Tillage (Code 324); Irrigation and Drainage Tailwater Recovery (Code 447); Irrigation Canal or Lateral (Code 320); Irrigation Ditch Lining (Code 428); Irrigation Field Ditch (Code 388); Irrigation Reservoir (Code 436); Land Clearing (Code 460); Obstruction Removal (Code 500); Surface Roughening (Code 609); Waste Treatment (Code 629); and Waterspreading (Code 640).

NRCS helps America’s farmers, ranchers and forest landowners plan and implement conservation practices to help them meet their business and natural resource needs. Farm Bill-funded programs such as the Environmental Quality Incentives Program help cover the costs for planning and implementing practices.

NRCS enlisted the public’s help and comments on how to improve conservation practice standards back in March of this year. These current updates are based on that valuable feedback and NRCS’s efforts to improve the standards to meet the needs of the nation’s farmers, ranchers and forest landowners.

Improvements to the conservation practice standards include expanding and updating the scope for new technology and increasing opportunities to establish or improve on habitat for pollinators and other beneficial insects. Revisions also involve formatting and writing style updates to meet current agency requirements and editing text to improve clarity.

Copies of the proposed revised standards are available through <http://www.regulations.gov> by accessing Docket No. NRCS-2019-0011. Alternatively, the proposed revised standards can be downloaded or printed from <http://go.usa.gov/TXye>.

When submitting comments, include the volume, date and page number of this issue of the Federal Register. Comments may be submitted by any of the following methods:

Federal eRulemaking Portal: Go to <http://www.regulations.gov> and search for docket ID NRCS-2019-0011. Follow the instructions for submitting comments.

Mail, or Hand Delivery: Mr. Bill Reck, National Environmental Engineer, Conservation Engineering Division, U.S. Department of Agriculture, NRCS, 1400 Independence Avenue, South Building, Room 6136, Washington, D.C. 20250.
