Mulkey to open for concession sales

Local and area residents are invited to enjoy another Family Movie Night this Friday with refreshments from the Mulkey.

The theatre's ticket window will be open from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. Friday, May 1, to sell delicious Mulkey popcorn along with drinks and snacks. Nachos will be available on the menu as well with the option of adding some awardwinning homemade chili.

Residents can buy their refreshments and then enjoy the movie of their choice at home.

CC rodeo releases final standings

Unfortunately, the State of Wyoming designated the Casper Events Center as a backup to be an overflow hospital, and the rodeo was canceled.

"The regular season for our Southwest Region still had four rodeos left when we went on lockdown," Franks said. "The men's team ended up third in the regional standings, and the women's team was 14th."

Clarendon had two national finals qualifiers, Riggin Smith in the saddle bronc riding and Cole Franks in the bareback riding. Cole Franks also led the region in All-Around points.

CC team members finishing in the top 15 in their events were: Saddle bronc riding - Riggin Smith 2nd, Keene Justesen 4th, Cole Franks 9th, Taylor Russell 10th , Seth Waldron 12th; Bareback riding - Cole Franks 3rd, Justin Opatrny 7th, Josh Green 9th, Trent Dannheim 14th; Bull Riding - Dawson Gleaves 14th; Team Roping (Header) -Rafael Domenigo 14th; and Team Roping (Heeler) - Cole Franks 15th.

Mulkey, local restaurants mull opening

Local restaurants and the Mulkey Theatre are trying to figure out how to comply with Gov. Greg Abbott's guidelines allowing them to open at 25 percent capacity.

JD SteakOut reports that it will open its dining room Friday, May 1, and will resume its regular hours -Tuesday through Friday, 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Saturday from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. However, per the governor's orders, seating will be limited with room for just 36 customers at a time.

The Outpost Diner says it will not be opening its dining room at this time. Managers there say they would rather be cautious and that their dining room is too small to try to meet the state's requirements. The Outpost will continue its call-in and drive-thru ordering.

Jinda Café will also only continue to be open for drive-up and call-in orders at this time.

Pizza Hut has started delivery service in Clarendon and also is continuing its drive-up, call-in, and online ordering. Pizza Hut will make a decision on Thursday about whether to reopen the dining room.

Subway has not made any plans to reopen its dining room as of Tuesday afternoon. The sandwich shop is open for take away orders.

The Buckin' Bean said it would open its door again Friday, but it plans to have a limit of two or three customers inside at one time. The drive-up window is still open.

The Mulkey Theatre is making plans to reopen not this Friday but next Friday, May 8. Managers there are making plans for how the Mulkey can best comply with the state's directives regarding seating and other social distancing issues.

Learning that nature still rules

It is interesting that, with all the advancements today in weaponry and defense, the thing that kills the most people is natural and too small to see with the naked eye. When we put so much emphasis on terrorism and weapons of mass destruction, a virus that we should have prepared for is the thing that most endangers us. The emergence of COVID-19 reminds us again that, if you take on nature, you might end up on the wrong side. Humans certainly are capable of mass destruction; however, historically speaking, we are nothing when compared to disease.

Think of some of the largest events in history. World War II killed around 70 million, the Holocaust around 6 million, and the communists are estimated to have killed around 100 million. Yet, HIV/Aids has killed over 36 million, 1968's guest commentary by dr. james fink

Hong Kong flu 1 million, the Asian flu in 1956-1958 2 million, and finally the Black Plague somewhere between 75-200 million.

In most American wars the total number of deaths is larger from disease than from battlefield wounds, at least before modern medicine. The Mexican American War had 1.733 battlefield deaths and more than 11,000 from disease. The Civil War had more than 140,000 battlefield deaths but more than 224,000 from disease. The Spanish American War only saw 385 battlefield deaths but an additional 2,000 from disease.

The last of the wars where disease claimed more lives than guns is World War I. We lost more than 53,000 men in the trenches of Europe, but another 63,000 men died from disease. However, this did not include the Spanish Flu, one of the worst pandemics in world history that came right on the heels of WWI. The Spanish Flu killed 50-100 million people worldwide and at least 675,000 Americans.

The problem was that we were still a rural society. Most of our men in these wars lived on farms and in isolated communities. You put all these men together from around the country and they bring their diseases with them. For many of these early wars, it was childhood diseases like measles, chicken pox, small pox, and mumps that killed off many. Then of course a bunch of young men came together without mothers and wives and they lived in filth which brought about the greatest killer, dysentery. Finally, there was lack of any knowledge, until after the Civil War, of germs. In that bloodiest war, we could have cut the deaths in half if soldiers had followed the most basic of instructions that is currently being hammered into our heads – wash your hands.

Diseases have always been part of the American story. With first contact, Europeans brought diseases to America that obliterated the native population. Historian Jared Diamond explains in his groundbreaking work, Guns, Germs, and Steel, how this happened. As most of us know by now, diseases come from animals. Swine flu, bird flu, and our current COVID-19 are believed to have come from bats. At the time, Middle Ages Europeans and Native Americans had a very different relationship with animals. Native Americans had only domesticated the dog, whereas Europeans not only had domesticated all of our current barnyard animals but were partially living with them. This close relationship not only spread more diseases to Europeans but eventually made them immune to diseases. However, when they brought these diseases to America, the Natives had no such immunity built up and their populations were devastated.

Europeans also brought over a device of sorts to help new diseases spread. Historian Elliot West in his work, The Last Indian War, demonstrates that it was the horse that helped diseases spread. Without Europeans introducing the horse, in our current language, it would have been easier to flatten the curve. Natives were dying faster than the disease could spread. Yet Natives became such excellent horsemen that they could cover much more ground before they knew they were infected. West shows that the Nez Perce of the Northwest were affected from disease long before they made contact with white men. It is estimated that at least 20 million Natives died from European diseases.

Historically speaking, what we are learning again is that nature is powerful. All of our modern technology can slow down nature, but we have yet to able to conquer it. COVID-19 is not our first pandemic. We know there have been many in history, but what we have learned is that these types of pandemics are not just a thing in our history. We need to study how we got through in the past and find new ways in the future to obliterate them.

Saluting those serving our children

During this tremendously difficult and unprecedented time, I wanted to express my sincere appreciation to the parents and students as well as the faculty and staff of Clarendon CISD.

As we have been navigating this ever changing and uncharted landscape while dealing with an invisible enemy, you have shown great patience and perseverance as we had to modify our traditional delivery of instruction. Without your support and willingness to adapt, the students of Clarendon CISD would suffer in the interim until we can meet again.

I am not saying it has all been perfect, but by focusing on meeting the needs of our students, parents and teachers have forged a path together that will do nothing but benefit our kiddos.

I have a deep respect for the parents who have encouraged the continuation of their children's education during this trying time

commentary by jarod bellar

and have taken on the surrogate role of teacher in the household. Teachers have embarked on instructional methodologies they may not have used in the past because they have remained committed to their students' educational success. This type of teamwork is imperative in order to strive for and maintain the type of excellence we expect at Clarendon

As we continue through the remainder of the school year, I want to encourage you to stay the course and carry on your many good works until the end. I know at times it has been difficult and overwhelming, but your unwavering spirit will see you through. Clarendon CISD will remain focused on serving our students and doing our best to meet their needs.

I am proud to once again be part of a community that supports one another during the good times but binds together into an unstoppable force during times of adversity. Clarendon is truly a small town with a huge heart. Once a Broncho, always a Bronco.

Jarod Bellar is the Superintendent of Clarendon CISD.

When life's wheels seem wobbly

Let's make a worldwide observation.

Man's "inhumanity to man" has been chronicled – as well as played out, unfortunately – across the centuries. (Hev. now. I'm writing in broadest terms that likewise include women, too. They've worked right alongside, and often ahead, but that's a whole 'nuther story.)

In these uncertain days when calendar pages seem to turn ever so slowly, it is heartening to read and hear accounts of folks around the globe demonstrating deep compassion for others. Evidence abounds in both traditional and social media. Indeed, there are heroes at all levels. Hearts are beating for others! Let's pray that this longtime radical shift of "man's inhumanity to man" continues. Yes, we are our brothers' - and sisters' keepers....

Life seems like a barber pole, the red color for the pain, suffering, hunger and despair, with alternating swirls of white, symbolizing light, hope and optimism for better days.

I'll give fulltime media reps their due, but pledge in my weekly space to concentrate on the barber pole's white stripes. It is my intent, whenever possible, to string together a few hundred words that make us smile, or at least think better about ourselves - and

Uncle Mort, my imaginary 107-year-old kin in the thicket, may "cut in" – so to speak – and he's always welcome to do so....

As if on cue, the old gent has arrived! He's saluting with one hand the other one covering his heart. He's offering hearty "amens" to corporations, churches, various organizations and masses of individuals who have stepped up to help fight the virus.

designer shoes, and now – drumroll, please – designer masks! (He says this reminds him of the 1930s, when some well-heeled Ku-Klux-Klanners "tipped their hands" by wearing fitted sheets.)

american

by don newbury

Mort babbled on, citing "a usually reliable source" describing a church in Houston with "drive-through confessionals." He says they're calling it "toot n' tell." Mort also passed along the story of the dim-witted robber who showed up at a bank without a mask, "so they couldn't identify him."...

Millions are relying on videos of staged events to make us smile, even though statistics and assorted grim views stack up fore and aft.

In Paris, nuns gathered on an outdoor basketball court, mostly passing the ball, with occasional close-in shots

The nuns – attired fully in their habits – didn't try any fast breaks, at least I don't think so!...

Closer to home, there's a real happening, rather than one of my frequently suggested "coulda/woulda/ shoulda" accounts.

In Ennis, Texas, lives Caylin Hixson, a lively 10-year-old Miller Elementary School student. She is exemplary by all measures. Active to the max, she's always skating or bouncing on the backyard trampoline. Sheltered in place, though, she has logged tons of hours, and reached the "enough-isenough" stage a while back. "Mom. it's driving me 'spoon crazy'," Caylin moaned. "You know, like you always say."

"Do you mean 'stir crazy'?" her mother Karen (Mrs. Brandon Hixson) quizzed. "Yeah, that's it," Caylin admitted. Laughter abounded, led by Caleb, her 14-year-old brother.... ****

And what about the preschooler who left an ounce or two in her breakfast juice glass? This seemed unlikely, since grape juice is her favorite.

Her mother urged her to "take the last sip."

"No way," the youngster answered. "You're trying to trick me. I know what 'sip' stands for: sheltering in place." I couldn't track down the source of the SIP acronym....

Tracking isn't always a walk in the park. The phrase, "Man's inhumanity to man" is a good example. The words appeared in a Robert Burns poem in Wayda minute! In 1673, Samuel von Pufendorf wrote, "More inhumanity has been done by man himself than any other of nature's causes."

The latter seems exceedingly scholarly, but I like "spoon crazy." And the source's name is more easily spelled....

DHDC needs help naming dinosaurs

The Don Harrington Discovery Center in Amarillo is asking for help with the new animatronic dinosaurs that have been installed in its Outdoor Science Park now under construction.

DHDC is asking the public's help in naming the two dinosaurs. The top five names for each will be chosen by the staff after the submission deadline on Friday, May 1, and then starting next week, a public vote will begin to see which name will be given to each dino. The winner will receive a free DHDC Family Membership for one year, an invitation to attend our unveiling ceremony

Name submissions can be posted in the comments of the DHDC YouTube video or on the Facebook post by Friday afternoon (May 1).

Clarendon College's Russell Harrison was named to the NJCAA Division I All-American Team this season. Harrison, a sophomore forward from Lubbock, was a leader for the Bulldogs as they clinched the titles of the Western Junior College Athletic Conference and the Region V NJCAA tournament. The team would have made Clarendon's first appearance at the national NJCAA tournament in March before the Coronoavirus caused spring sports to be canceled.
