DPS says waiver still in effect for CDLs

The Texas Department of Public Safety (DPS) is reminding the public that the State of Disaster Declaration in response to COVID-19 remains in effect, and includes the waiver of expiration dates for commercial driver licenses (CDL).

If your Texas CDL, driver license (DL), identification card (ID) or election identification certificate (EIC) expires on or after March 13, 2020, it is covered by the Disaster Declaration waiver, and will remain valid for 60 days after DPS issues public notice that normal operations have resumed. At this time, the 60-day notice has not been issued, and Texans still have time to conduct their renewal transactions.

Jones 5K part of Lions Day October 3

Clarendon will observe Lions Day this Saturday, October 3, with a gathering of district Lions Clubs and the eighth annual Chance Mark Jones Roar & Run 5K.

Clarendon Mayor Sandy Skelton has proclaimed October 3 to be Lions International Centennial Celebration Day in the city, in observance of the more than 100 years that the organization has provided service to communities around the globe and of the local club's service since 1922.

The day will start with the Lions District 2-T1 fall cabinet meeting at the Mulkey Theatre with donuts and coffee at 8:30, a business meeting, and lunch at noon.

Afterwards, runners and walkers will gather at the Clarendon Aquatic Center to raise awareness about child abuse during the Chance

Mark Jones Roar & Run 5K.

This year's 5K has 65 registered participants, although many of those have chosen the "sleep in" or "sit it out" options as opposed to traversing the 3.1 miles of the route.

Sign-ins start at 1 p.m. at the new aquatic center at Fourth and Kearney. The race will start from that point at 1:30 p.m. and commence south on Kearney Street to Prospect Park – the site of the Chance Mark Jones Memorial Playground – then west on Seventh Street with runners making their way by the college, the First Baptist Church, the public school, several historic homes, the First United Methodist Church, and the Donley County Courthouse before ending just past the aquatic center at the bridge at Fifth and Kearney.

Race packets will be available for pick-up all day this Friday, October 2, at the Clarendon Visitor Center.

Proceeds from the race will benefit the charitable community activities of the Clarendon Lions Club. The race honors the life of four-year-old Chance Mark Jones, who died from abuse in 2011. For more information about this weekend's Chance Mark Jones Memorial 5K, contact Lion Ashlee Estlack at 806-662-4687 or Lion Roger Estlack at 874-2259.

To close out Lions Day, the Clarendon Lions Club will hold its 98th annual Charter Banquet at 6 p.m. in the Lions Hall, recognizing service milestones for individual Lions and presenting the Lion of the Year Award.

Crosstimmer team wins 26th cookoff

The Crosstimmer Ranch team from Mustang, Okla., was the overall champion of the 26th annual Col. Charles Goodnight Chuckwagon Cookoff last Saturday, September 26, at the Saints' Roost Museum.

Fifteen wagons prepared food for the event, which served more than 615 people. Crosstimmer placed in three out of five food judging categories and placed first in Overall Cooking and second in Wagon & Camp to take home the custom cutting board designed by Clarendon artist Jack Craft.

The 13th annual Junior Cookoff the day before the big event drew six contestants, who were paired with experienced wagon teams to prepare potatoes for the cooks' dinner Friday night. Henry Bivens from Clarendon won first place and was teamed with the Crosstimmer Ranch wagon.

Kaston Snyder of Amarillo was second, working with the Lazy M Cookers of Lamar, Colo.; and Jaythan Green of Clarendon was third and worked with the Camp Cookie team from Germantown, Tennessee.

Other junior participants included Haughton Bivens and Haylin Bivens, both of Clarendon, Blake Boedecker of Canyon, and Gus Boedecker of Lockney. The respectively were teamed up with the Double Nickle Wagon of Amarillo, The Honey-Do Spoiler wagon of Pampa, the Cocklebur Camp wagon of Odessa, and the Robertson Chuckwagon of Granbury. The Junior Cookoff is sponsored each year by the American Chuckwagon Association.

Due to COVID-19 restrictions, there was no dinner with the cooks for Museum members this year following the Junior Cookoff.

The trade show was held throughout the day Saturday, and live entertainment was provided. Relatives of Chuckwagon inventor Charles Goodnight also were present for their annual reunion.

Competing wagons served a menu of chicken fried steak, mashed potatoes, gravy, biscuits, beans, and cobbler. Wagons came from as far as Tennessee and Colorado to attend

Big Daddy Weave to perform live at Sandell

Christian band Big Daddy Weave will perform live on stage at Clarendon's Sandell Drive-In Theatre next Friday, October 9, as the 2020 music series continues here.

Casting Crowns set the drive-in's attendance record in July, and Sandell owner John Morrow says tickets are already selling fast for next week's concert.

The Big Daddy Weave concert will also feature Grammy-winner Zach Williams in the latest of the critically acclaimed Drive-In Theater Tour series, produced by Awakening Events. Tickets are available at driveintheatertour.com.

"It has been truly amazing to see the impact of these drive-in theater concerts. Fans and theater owners alike have all told us how much this was needed in their communities, and how much they appreciate us being there, providing this message of hope through music," said Dan Fife, Founder and President of Awakening Events.

Known for honest songs that tell personal stories of freedom in Christ, Big Daddy Weave fans have long admired the band for their particular brand of real-life, real-person openness. With songs like "My Story," "The Lion and the Lamb," "Overwhelmed," "I Know," and "Redeemed," Big Daddy Weave has cemented its status as one of the most beloved bands in Christian music. Millions have taken their anthems of Jesus's chainbreaking love as their own and sung along to songs about the radical act of redemption.

But while creating their latest album, When the Light Comes, the men of Big Daddy Weave, Mike Weaver (lead vocals, guitar), Jay Weaver (bass, vocals), Jeremy Redmon (guitar, vocals), Joe Shirk (saxophone, keys, vocals) and Brian Beihl (drums), found themselves working from a new and unfamiliar place. The inspirational themes and uplifting messages many find in the group's music were desperately needed by the members themselves.

Tickets for the tour will again be sold by the car load at $100 per car. For more information, visit the Sandell's Facebook page.

City council contracts trash service

The City of Clarendon is out of the trash collection business following last week's city council meeting at which Diversified Waste Management of Amarillo was given a five-year franchise for those services.

With one motion September 24, the council approved a series of agreements with Diversified that was the culmination of months of negotiations between the company and City Hall.

Mayor Sandy Skelton said only one citizen had complained about the proposed deal at a city council meeting since The Clarendon Enterprise first reported the details of the negotiations with Diversified on July 30, and he said it had been a pleasure working with Brandon Brown on behalf of the company.

Brown, who has a weekend home near Brice, said he looks forward to becoming more involved with Clarendon.

"I want to thank the city for the time spent on this agreement," Brown said. "I really would like to become part of the community. This is home for me. It's my backyard. We will go above and beyond with service and community involvement."

In the deal which took effect this week, Diversified Waste agreed to purchase all of the city's sanitation vehicles and equipment as well as the city's Dumpsters. The company will retain all the city's sanitation workers, other than sanitation director Joe Shadle, who is retiring; and Diversified will provide the service at a rate equal to or lower than what the city is currently paying. Diversified will also continue to service several grass and leaf Dumpsters that are also located around town.

Brown again said last week that he felt like the local employees were incredible assets and that he hopes to let them be models for how employees are expected to be in his company.

The agreement also outlines how Diversified might lower or raise sanitation rates based on the cost of diesel if it exceeds $3.25 per gallon or drops below $1.65 per gallon.

"I know everyone fears price increases, and I'll let my actions speak for themselves," he said and drew attention to the service he provides in Claude, where he says rates have not gone up in three years.

In addition to providing sanitation services to the city and several accounts in rural Donley County, Diversified also will lease the city's facilities on Front Street to base his sanitation service locally and use that potentially as a hub to service other nearby cities or accounts.

Billing for sanitation service will still go through the city, and the city will be the point of contact for residents who have questions or concerns about their trash service. To pay for that service, the city will receive a portion of Diversified's fee.

Chili season is upon us

I met H. Allen Smith at his home in Alpine in 1969. He was a big deal celebrity: Hollywood screen writer, nationally syndicated newspaper columnist, an author of magazine articles in Esquire and similar magazines and a frequent guest on television talk shows. His books stayed on the bestseller list a hundred days at a time. He was profiled by Edward R. Murrow. H. Allen was a humorist. He coined the phrase “To Hell in a Handbasket.” Once when he looked up a word in a dictionary he discovered the example of how the word was used happened to be something he had written. He moved to Alpine from Mt. Kisco, New York in 1967. I went to interview him about chili.

stories of texas
by tumbleweed smith

H. Allen is responsible for our Texas Chili Culture that began after he wrote a magazine article stating he made the best chili in the world. The Austin chili maker Wick Fowler challenged H. Allen’s claim and they staged the world’s first chili cook-off in Terlingua in the fall of 1967. It ended in a tie.

H. Allen judged various cook-offs all over the country where cooks prepared items like sausage, tamales, menudo and barbeque. “Some of it not fit to serve to a starving jackal,” he said. He turned down the chance to sample Goat Gut Tacos in Laredo. He commented on the Texans’ love of beef. “Some Texans hate to even say the word pig.” He has judged such chili entries as Mouth of Hell Chili, Cedar Rat Chili, Crawfish Chili, Jackrabbitt Chili, Coyote Short Ribs Chili, Cabrito Chili, Armadillo Chili, Javelina Knuckles Chili, Buffalo Hump Chili, Roadrunner Chili, Raccoon Chili and Gator Tail Chili. Some cooks spice up the chili with mescal or other drinks made from desert plants. “It’ll grow hair on anvil. A man could get more flavor from a set of stewed piano keys. Some chili cooks know less about a good bowl of chili than a pregnant sow knows about Neiman Marcus. Sometimes when I even get a whiff of some types of chili, I make a noise like when you pour hot butter into a panther’s ear.”

H. Allen and I became close friends. I interviewed him many times after we had enjoyed a bowl of red at his table. The first time I met him I was working at a radio station. The second time we visited I had just been fired. He was most encouraging and told me, “Now you can do something.”

We corresponded over the years and I treasure his letters. When he died in 1976 his widow Nelle told me I could have anything in his office. I took 2 photographs and the typewriter he had used to produce 43 novels. The photographs are on the wall of my studio and I donated the typewriter to Sul Ross State University in Alpine, which has the H. Allen Smith achieves.

The first Thanksgiving after H. Allen passed away, Nelle came to our house near Fort Davis for dinner. We kept up with her after she moved to Florida. We visited her there. H. Allen wrote about people named Smith. “If your last name is Smith, you need to have some kind of catchy first name. “He liked calling me Tumbleweed. I have several of his books and read them often.

An era gone by way too soon

The day’s twilight came with September at its best. My wife urged me to take Sailor, our rescue dog, on a walk around the block.

So away we went, thankful for a cool breeze, gorgeous sunset and side-walks.

We chanced to walk alongside a next-block neighbor who posed a random-as-it-gets question: “Do you remember anything from 75 years ago?”...

I’d already shut down deep-thinking, but memories bubbling near the top sprang forth with the ease of humming-birds flitting to – then fro – in a well-tended flower garden.

The year was 1945. World War II was finally over. My war memories were foggy, so I answered as randomly as he asked, “Saturday mornings.”

In our “land before Legos,” Lincoln Logs provided our “go to” activity if we didn’t have a dime. If we did, we’d meet friends at the picture show for a double feature (almost always westerns), a news reel, cartoon and an adventure serial “to be continued next week.” (For 20 cents, we got four hours of entertainment, a fountain drink and a sack of popcorn.)...

He remembered, too, so our common topic was set. Each of us offered trivia bits about Roy Rogers, “King of the Cowboys” and Dale Evans, his real-life wife.

Roy’s real name was Leonard Slye, and his “break” came when he joined a musical group called “The Sons of the Pioneers.” His horse’s name was Trigger, a beautiful palomino; his dog was Bullet, a sleek German shepherd.

Rogers starred also on radio and television, lived the good life, as did his steed and dog. He had serious-looking silver spurs, but Trigger never felt them, it is told, not even once....

He had several “sidekicks” to provide comic relief, including the likes of Gabby Hayes, Andy Devine and Pat Brady. Gabby’s flowing beard never saw scissors, Devine’s voice erupted as if careening off walls of sandpaper and Pat showed up in his 1946 Jeep, “Nellybelle.”

Every “flick” seemed to be set where “bad people” abided, and it was Roy’s lot to take them all on and win every time.

In virtually every movie, Roy was bound to utter the same line, hiding behind a huge boulder as darkness set in. “It’s awful quiet out here, Gabby.” His sidekick’s invariable answer was, “Maybe too quiet.” And then mayhem ensued....

Roy and Dale’s TV show was Christian to the core. It’s theme song (written by Dale) was “Happy Trails to You.” It always ended with Roy’s three-fold wish to viewers: “Good night, good luck and may the good Lord take a liking to you.”

The “Cowboy King” found Trigger on a farm owned by movie great Bing Crosby. The price was $2,500, which he paid on the installment plan. The man and his horse made 188 movies together. One of them (Trigger) won an Academy Award for performing in Bob Hope’s 1953 movie, “Son of Paleface.”

the idle american
by don newbury

Both Trigger and Bullet were viewed in museums for years, thanks to taxidermy....

Museums featuring Rogers’ memorabilia began in California, then moved a few years later to Branson, MO. He decreed that if the museum ever lost money, items would be sold at auction. His son honored that wish about a decade ago.

Winning auction bids included $16,259 for one of his many shirts; $17,500 each for cowboy hats; set of boot spurs, $10,625; guitars, $27,500 each; Nellybelle, $116,500; Dale’s parade saddle, $104,500, and the Bible used at the dinner table every night, $8,750.

Trigger fetched $266,500, and Bullet (their real pet), $35,000....

Roy died in 1998 at age 87; Dale, born in Uvalde, TX, 1912, was christened Lucille Wood Smith, but her name was later changed to Frances Octavia Smith.

Their marriage spanned 51 years. He was 87 years old when he died in 1998; Dale 89 upon her death three years later. They are buried in Apple Valley, CA.

Saturday mornings, and much of yesteryear, are worth remembering....

Taking historical look at boycotts

It is often said that words matter. Historically speaking, this is often seen by using a particular word to connect to the past. The Whig Party chose that name because in the 1830s everyone knew that the Whigs in England were the ones who had opposed the King. By calling themselves the Whigs, they were criticizing Andrew Jackson by implying he wanted to be a monarch.

Recently this idea has played out with a Twitter beef between certain sports writers and LeBron James. After the shooting of Jacob Blake, the Milwaukee Bucks announced they would not play their opening round game against the Orlando Magic. Quickly the rest of the NBA games were canceled as players refused to play in light of the most recent shooting. The NBA came out in support of the cancellations and announced the games would be played at a later date in the near future. In writing about the games, many writers referred to the canceled games as postponements. It was at that time that LeBron James tweeted, “Boycotted not postponed.”

Why does the name make a difference? Either way, postponed or boycotted, the games were all held two days later and the playoffs continued. May I suggest that James, understanding the historical significance of boycotts, wanted to connect his actions to the past. By insisting what he did was a boycott, the current movement could be seen in a similar light as, say, the Montgomery Bus Boycott. James did not articulate his reasons for his Tweet, but there must have been a reason for his insistence he was boycotting.

To be fair to the journalists, they had reasons for their word choice. First, traditionally in sports a boycott has referred to players skipping a game or event while the game went on without them. When past NBA All-Stars like Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Elgin Baylor boycotted games because of racial injustice, the games were still played but without them. So when the NBA rescheduled the recent playoff games, to many it seemed more like a postponement.

Secondly, though not required, to make a good sports boycott story, some amount of sacrifice is usually made. There are some excellent examples in history. In 1936, the Olympic Games were held in Hitler’s Germany. Hitler planned to use the games as a showcase for his achievements and show off he did. He built amazing venues and used the world’s captured attention to turn everything into a pageant of Nazi propaganda. He also showed off his nation’s athleticism by dominating the games and winning the most medals. Even while cautious of Hitler, most of the world arrived in Berlin anyway, not wanting to let politics ruin the games. However, there were some athletes who just could not bring themselves to ignore Hitler’s treatment of the Jews.

One such athlete was Albert Wolff, a French fencer. Though Wolff had a chance to medal in the Olympics, as a Jew he simply could not tolerate Hitler’s Jewish views. Instead of competing, he gave up any chance of Olympic glory and remained at home. He never gave up on his Olympic dreams, however. In 1948, twelve years later, when the games commenced again after WWII, the now 42-year-old athlete finally got his chance to compete. Much older now and out of his prime, this time he represented his new home of America and had the honor to carry the flag in the Opening Ceremonies. It’s worth noting how Wolff spent his time between the two Olympics. Instead of sitting in his hotel suite for a few days, eating room service, he decided to enlist with the French army and left for the front, willing to die for his beliefs. He did not just fight; he earned his nation’s highest honor for bravery. Eventually, he was captured by the Germans and sent to a Jewish war camp. He managed to escape the camp and made his way to Portugal and then eventually the U.S. Once in America, he enlisted in the American Army and was sent back to the front in Africa to fight again.

There are other famous boycotts. The U.S. boycotted the 1980 Summer Olympics in Russia because of Russia’s invasion of Afghanistan. Many athletes who had trained for years for this one event were forced to give up their only opportunity to ever win a medal. There was some satisfaction for America, not the summer athletes, but for the winter ones. Later that year America did play in the winter games. That was the year when the American hockey team beat the Russians during the “Miracle On Ice” game, arguably the most inspirational American Olympic game ever. By not sacrificing even one game, James’ boycott does not seem to measure up for many.

In the end it really does not matter what the game stoppage was called, the playoffs have continued and James looks poised to win his fourth championship. James wants to be seen as fighting for social justice like those who came before him. However, maybe it is the very fact that he might win that fourth title that some have questioned his choice of words and have denied what he did was a boycott.

Leading the Owls, Joshua Booth was second at 20:40.54 followed by Iziak Weatherread in eighth place at 22:19.93. Hayden Alston was 14th at 23:34.94, and Astin McAllister was 15th with a time of 23:37.77.

The Clarendon Lions Club held its regular Tuesday noon meeting September 29, 2020, with Boss Lion Landon Lambert wielding the gavel.

We had 12 members and Sweet-heart Aubrey Jaramillo present this week.

The sweetheart reported on the public school where the Broncos will take on Vega this Friday at home and the student council will hold a corn-hole tournament at Prospect Park Saturday afternoon.

Lion Jacob Fangman reported on the city and said the city council approved its new tax rate last week, the pool project is winding down, and the mayor issued a proclamation naming October 3 as Lions International Centennial Celebration Day in Clarendon.

The Boss Lion reported this are going well at the courthouse and promoted the live Christian concert with Big Daddy Weave next Friday at the Sandell Drive-In. He also recognized Lions Chuck Robertson, Russell Estlack, and Roger Estlack along with the Boss himself for working to replace the lights in the Lions Hall last weekend.

Lion Bobbie Thornberry said the chuckwagon cookoff served more than 600 tickets and was very well attended and successful last Saturday.

The club discussed Lions events this coming weekend with the District 2-T1 fall cabinet meeting being held at the Mulkey Theatre on Saturday morning beginning at 8:30 followed by the Chance Mark Jones 5K Roar & Run at 1:30 p.m. at the aquatic center. The club's 98th annual Charter Banquet will be at 6:00 p.m. at the Lions Hall.

There being no further business, we were adjourned to spread Lionism and good cheer throughout our fair county.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Family time in Oklahoma

As September winds down, Mother Nature reminds us cold weather will soon be here. As I have said repeatedly, fall is my favorite time of year with changing colors of the trees and flowers. What I don't like is the pollen which causes the sinus tog crazy.

Several family members and I made a trip to Lake Texoma, visiting my nephew who lives on the Oklahoma side. The lake is surrounded by trees with narrow, winding, hilly roads. The only place to see the sunrise-sunset is at the lake because of the trees. The grass was all lush and green and the weather was cool, making outdoor activities and cooking perfect. I enjoyed seeing my Oklahoma family and was treated like a queen. Sometimes you've just gotta get away.

Unless you are living in an underground cave you know a presidential election is coming up November 3 and everyone is urged to vote that day.

There are many laws regarding voting and they begin with registering to vote. There are 3 basic requirements to registering to vote which are; you must be a citizen of the United States, be a resident of the county you are registering to vote and be 18 years of age on election

STUCO campaigning in full swing

So, this week I've began to run for Student Council President in the Junior High.

I started out the week by passing out shirts and buttons, which I ran out of by lunch.

At lunch, I left to get a whole cooler full of water, which had chilled waters with labels that said "Vote Ben for STUCO President." Under that, it had the President Donald Trump-style logo but instead of saying "Trump 2020 Keep America Great," mine said "Ben 2020 Keep CJH Great."

I decided to run for student council president last week when I thought about all of the things

AgriLife study tracking down cause, transmission of Covid in food processing

From live cattle entering a packing plant to the consumer's kitchen table, a Texas A&M AgriLife-led research project aims to develop an accurate way to predict potential contamination with SARS-CoV-2, the virus that causes COVID-19, throughout the food supply chain.

Sapna Chitlapilly Dass, Ph.D., a meat science research assistant professor in the Texas A&M College of Agricultural and Life Sciences Department of Animal Science, will lead the two-year, $1 million U.S. Department of Agriculture National Institute of Food and Agriculture grant project.

The project is a collaboration among Texas A&M AgriLife Research; Texas A&M Veterinary Medical Diagnostic Laboratory, TVMDL; Texas A&M AgriLife Extension Service; the USDA-Agricultural Research Service's U.S. Meat Animal Research Center, Nebraska; and University of Pennsylvania.

"This research is an example of how Texas A&M is addressing SARS-CoV-2 issues throughout the food chain to improve agriculture and human health," said Patrick J. Stover, Ph.D., vice chancellor of Texas A&M AgriLife, dean of the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences and director of AgriLife Research. "Upon completion of this research, each segment of the supply chain will know where the virus hot spots might lie and how best to mitigate them. By bringing together our agencies and the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences, AgriLife can address these issues as comprehensively as possible."

To date, most studies on deciphering the cause and transmission of SARS-CoV-2 in meat production have based their understanding on just one aspect of the meat processing chain, Dass said.

"We want to look at the whole picture, not just beginning at the processor level, but start with animals coming in and then tracing it all the way to the consumer level. We'll analyze what happens to the meat from the processor to distributor to retailer to the consumer, determining where the exposure occurs and whether the virus is surviving."

Sapna Chitlapilly Dass, Ph.D., a meat science research assistant professor in the Texas A&M College of Agricultural and Life Sciences Department of Animal Science

Now, the team of researchers will investigate the susceptibility to and transmission of SARS-CoV-2 in beef cattle, identify the impact of the virus on different phases of meat processing and packaging, and follow up to determine the virus's survival rate on meat and packaging material during transportation and in retail conditions.

Beef cattle investigation of

SARS-CoV-2

"Ultimately it is the safety of all the people along the food chain that matters," said Cliff Lamb, Ph.D., head of the Texas A&M Department of Animal Science, who will provide guidance on the live animal experiments. "We need to know if these animals can contract the virus, whether they show symptoms or not, whether they can shed it and spread to other animals, and whether they can spread it to humans."

Because other mammals have tested positive for COVID-19, and because cattle have been known to contract a different coronavirus strain, testing is crucial, Lamb said.

"We need to determine if cattle would actually contract it and if they would be able to spread it from animal to animal," he said. "We don't think they will contract the disease or spread it, but at the same time, we want to rule that out."

Lamb said once the research is complete, a farm-to-plate education program through AgriLife Extension will be led by Jason Smith, Ph.D., beef cattle specialist in Amarillo.

Smith and his team will work on ensuring instructional videos, fact sheets and other educational materials are distributed to all stakeholders along the farm-to-plate food chain.

"We want to educate everyone – from the cow/calf owner to the stocker operator to the packing plant to the retail store – and make them aware of where the hotspots are and how the virus can be spread," he said. "Our ultimate goal with this research is to educate people on how to reduce their risk of contracting the virus."

Addressing the biggest bottleneck with science

Early in the pandemic, the meat industry's production suffered bottlenecks as health and industry officials tried to grasp where and how workers were contracting the virus and whether that might impact the facility's products.

"COVID hit meat processing plants hard, with many workers affected and plants closed," said Amanda Brown, Ph.D., an associate professor for research who holds a joint position with TVMDL and the Department of Animal Science, Bryan-College Station.

"This resulted in concerns regarding the supply of meat, with some stores implementing sales limits. There have also been stories in the national and international press concerning the potential of the virus surviving on food and food packaging – especially meat," Brown said. "Our hope is this project will lead to practical methods of ensuring our nation's meat supply is stable and sustainable."

Dass said the concern is that microorganisms are keeping the virus alive in hot spots and circu-day. The last requirement applies to my oldest great grandchild who will be 18 on November 3. You must be registered to vote 30 days before election, this year that day is October 5. If you have moved to another county in Texas, you must re-register, if you moved to another precinct you must change your address. The tax-assessor collector is also in charge of voter registration in Donley county and if you have moved, I would suggest you stop by that office to fill out the appropriate papers. Take this constitutional right very seriously, every vote counts. Next week I will explain why our election is held on the 1st Tuesday after the 1st Monday in November. In the meantime, keep our leaders in your prayers and God bless America.

we could do at the school to make our lives as the students better. So I signed up and heard that my friends Bryce and Maloree were both running as well for STUCO President. This led me to talk to my family, and we decided to go all out and make buttons, shirts and waters.

I want to end by wishing everyone good luck and thanking my family for helping me make all the stuff.

lating as super spreaders. Different microbial communities within the processing plant can either encourage or inhibit the virus particle to be part of a sanitizer-tolerant biofilm and contribute to recurrent contamination.

Further research is needed to understand SARS-CoV-2 survival and transmission in the beef supply chain, she said. This will help develop effective intervention strategies as well as educate livestock producers, food handlers and consumers on safe food-handling practices.

Employing high-containment diagnostics facilities

The project will rely on TVMDL's Biological Safety Level-3, or BSL-3, virus propagation expertise and high-containment facilities, in addition to projects currently underway in TVMDL's research and development section.

"The research and development section is excited to further the practicality of our current research interests," Brown said. "By incorporating our current interests with those this new project aims to address, we are hopeful our work can assist a broader scope of individuals and allow for a better understanding of COVID-19."

A comprehensive examination of SARS-CoV-2

Dass said her research will include the use of live virus in the new Texas A&M University Global Health Research Complex on the Texas A&M campus. This complex was created to combat emerging disease threats, and is an $86 million, 102,000 sq. ft. state-of-the-art, nationally distinct facility and core laboratory. This facility has Institutional Animal Care and Use Committee, or IACUC, approval.

In partnership with the Massachusetts Institute of Technology's, MIT, STOPCovid initiative, the team will utilize CRISPR-based diagnostics for COVID-19, with the initiative's newly established SHERLOCK research protocol. SHERLOCK-Covid is a research-use-only assay that has been made available to researchers via STOPCovid. With SHERLOCK, a strip of paper can now indicate presence of pathogens or any genetic signature of interest.

Dass said the team also includes biophysicist Arnold Mathijssen, Ph.D., assistant professor in the Department of Physics and Astronomy at University of Pennsylvania. Mathijssen will help develop the mathematical modeling and study the transmission dynamics of SARS-CoV-2.

Following the data gathering steps, the researchers plan to develop a mathematical model to predict the potential for food contamination with SARS-CoV-2, Dass said.

This will also put benchmarks on the risk of SARS-CoV-2 infection to farm personnel, Dass said.

Burton Library hosting Scarecrow Contest

By Eulaine McIntosh

When was the last time you visited the library? What? You didn't know we were open? Yes! G.B. Burton Memorial Library is open Monday through Friday from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. We are located at 217 S. Kearney.

The Friends of the Library are also back in business with a fun event to boost morale and give you something fun to do. During the month of October, we are hosting a "Scarecrow Contest."

Citizens will be able to vote for their favorite Scarecrow the last week of the month between October 21 and 29. The winner will be announced on October 30. There will be three ways to view the scarecrow entries: view them on our library Facebook page, facebook.com/BurtonMemorialLibrary, where you can also vote for your favorite; or come view the tri-board in the library where we will display photos of all the entries; or thirdly, make a family outing by driving around town to see the entries first hand.

We will have an address list available for you to pick up and will also post it on Facebook. Come by the library and vote for your favorite or vote on the Facebook page once you've seen them all.

To submit an entry, you can be an individual, family group, business, or organization. Entries will be accepted from October 1 through October 20. Fill out an entry form at the library, pick up a yard sign to display with your scarecrow, pay the $10 fee, which helps cover the prize, then design and make your scarecrow. Entries should be ready to display on Oct. 21, the first day of the contest voting. Scarecrows should remain on display through Halloween, October 31st.

Display the scarecrow outdoors at the address you submit on your entry form. It can be the front yard of your home, outside a business, or anywhere in town that you have permission to use. Please help us get the word out about this fun Fall event.

Share our Facebook posts on your Facebook and Instagram pages and make copies of the flyers to share. We want the whole town to join in on the fun!

For more information or questions, call the library at (806) 874-3685 or Eulaine McIntosh at (806)822-0199.

Broncos in a good place at 5-0

By Sandy Anderberg

The Broncos rolled over a big Quanah team last Friday night on the road, handing the Indians a 30-19 loss. With only one game left before the District opener, the Broncos are looking to go in at 6-0.

The Broncos posted 201 total yards in the win with 122 of those coming from quarterback Brock Hatley, who went five for eleven in the air with one touchdown. Hatley threw the strike to Jmaury Davis who had a catch for 90 yards. Lamarus Penigar had three catches for 28 yards, and Koyt Tucek had one catch for six yards.

The Broncos were successful on the ground as well and seven different Broncos accounted for 79 yards. Antwan Bassett carried 12 times for 44 yards, and Davis carried three times for 15 yards. Sylvester Ballard had 14 yards on six carries, and Jordan Herndon had one carry for five yards. Rhett Caison saw some action from the backfield and went four yards on one carry, Peniger had one carry for two yards and Hatley carried twice for five yards.

“We had several guys making tackles and our defense played really well,” head coach Clint Conkin said.

The Broncos will play at home Friday, October 2, against Vega.

The Bronco junior varsity jumped all over the Indians and defeated them 14-6 at home last Thursday night. The JV Broncos came out looking for a fight and took the lead in the first quarter of play as Lyric Smith earned both Bronco touchdowns on runs. Quanah was able to put six points on the board in the third quarter.

CJH runners win at Greenbelt

The Clarendon Junior High Lady Colt cross-country team put another championship on the books when they won the Greenbelt Gallop last week at Greenbelt Lake, and Bryce Williams got another first place win for the Colts.

Lady Colts Presley Smith and Tandie Cummins led the way finishing first and second with times of 16.01 and 16.05 respectively.

Madi Benson was third at 16.37, Kimbrasia Ballard was fifth at 16.37, and Berkley Moore ran seventh with a time of 16.47. Kenidee Hayes was right behind Moore in eighth place with a 16.49, Maloree Wann was ninth at 17.13, Gracie Clark ran a 17.50, and Kyndall Osburn was 11th with a time of 17.57.

Gracie Ellis was 12th at 17.58, Whitney Williams 13th at 18.00, Gracie Wilkins was 15th at 18.25, and Elliot Frausto was 17th with a time of 19.03. Kennadie Cummins was 19th at 19.45, Kashlyn Conkin 20th at 19.48, Lauren Cenicerros 23rd at 21.37, and Shelbi Coles 24th at 21.45.

For the Colts, eighth grader Bryce Williams love to run and give his all in everything he does. That all paid off when Williams took first in the Greenbelt Gallop. Williams’ time was 13.44 which was two seconds in front of the second place finisher. John Weatherton came in second at 15.42.

Kaleb Mays was third at 16.27, Anthony Brown was fourth at 18.21, Aiden Word was fifth at 18.42, and Tyler Cavanaugh was seventh with a time of 20.14.

Colts fight hard against Quanah

Despite losing to a strong Quanah team, the Clarendon Junior High Colts played with grit with a final score of 14-30 last Thursday.

According to Coach Boston Hudson, the Colts’ plan is to keep getting better throughout the season.

“Our Junior High took a tough loss to a talented Quanah team this week,” Boston said. “Again, I thought our kids played hard. We improved as a group, and that’s what we asked of these guys was to just improve every week. We will do the same this week and just try to get better every day; and if we do that, I think we will start seeing some of those close losses turn into wins.”

STAY CLOSE. GO FAR.

Fire Prevention and Safety!

We are your community's firefighters. We visit schools to talk to students about fire prevention and safety. We show the special clothing we wear to protect us from the smoke and heat of fire. We may look a bit scary, but we are not. We are here to help you.

This is a chart for you to use to talk with your family about fire prevention and safety. Cut it out and hang it on your refrigerator!

Family Fire Safety Checklist

- ☐ Only cook in the kitchen when an adult is helping you.
- ☐ Don't touch matches, lighters or candles. They are for adult use only.
- ☐ Do you have smoke detectors on every level of your home? Test them monthly and change the batteries at least once a year.
- ☐ Do you know two or more ways out of the house?
- ☐ Never use elevators (stairs are much safer) if there is a fire.
- ☐ Smoke rises, so if there is a fire, stay low: crawl under the smoke.
- ☐ Have you picked a place to meet the rest of your family once you are all out of the house?
- ☐ Once you are out of the house, stay out of the house.

Find the 12 "fire safety" words or phrases in bold to the left, then place them into the puzzle!

We're learning to climb to new heights by practicing our duties every day.

SWEPCO brings electrical safety to students

Southwestern Electric Power Co. (SWEPCO), an American Electric Power company, has partnered with The National Theatre for Children (NTC) to educate students and their families about electrical safety. The livestream program is available for grades K-5 in SWEPCO's three-state service territory.

While SWEPCO and NTC have partnered to bring in-person theatrical performances into schools for many years, this fall the program has been adapted into an all-digital alternative as schools switch to a combination of classroom instruction and distance learning from home.

"Given the unpredictability of the current school year, e-learning programs that can be delivered remotely to teachers and students are an important way to reinforce the curriculum and form connections in this time of social distancing," said Carey Sullivan, SWEPCO director of communications. "'The livestream event, called 'The Safety Circus,' allows SWEPCO to bring vital electrical safety information to schools and families.'"

The program focuses on: How electricity is made; The uses of electricity; Identifying dangerous electrical situations; and Ways to stay safe around electricity.

The livestream features a live host who introduces the program, sets up and recaps a series of four educational videos, and leads a Q&A in which students and teachers can submit questions for the host to answer live in real time. The four comedic, educational videos feature a variety of characters in humorous situations revolving around electricity.

The livestream events are supplemented by student playbooks (both print and online versions) as well as a full digital curriculum including games, activities, e-books, hands-on lessons, assessments for educators and smart speaker apps. SWEPCO sponsors every aspect of the program, making the livestream event and supplemental curriculum a cost-free addition to lessons in science, literacy and the arts.

For more information about "The Safety Circus" livestream event, visit <https://nationaltheatre.com/Program/the-safety-circus-livestream-special/>.
