Go, Band!

The Clarendon High School Bronco Band is advancing to the Class 2A Area Marching Contest for the first time since 2002 after receiving a Division One rating at the district contest Saturday in Amarillo. The band last received a Division One in 2013 as a Class 1A band, but that was not an advancing year. Unlike other UIL events, bands can only advance in competition every other year. Clarendon will perform at Lubbock's Lowery Field early Saturday afternoon, November 14. If they make the first cut, they will march again Saturday evening for a chance to advance to state.

COVID, budget deficit to be priorities of next Legislature

A budget shortfall, COVID-19 issues, and the powers of the governor will all be topics for next year's Legislative session, according to State Sen. Kel Seliger (R-Amarillo).

Seliger held a virtual town hall meeting for Donley County residents via Zoom on Monday, November 2.

"I miss our face to face town halls, and will still do them if people ask me to," Seliger said.

The senator began his remarks with an overview of the COVID-19 pandemic's effect on Texas and the number of cases in the Amarillo area, where the hospitalization rate topped 28 percent this week and the state has sent additional resources.

"This thing is bad and is going to get worse," Seliger said.

He said he was not optimistic that a vaccine would be ready soon and suggested that people need to follow the published guidelines for masks and other health precautions.

"I had the virus, and it was no fun," Seliger said, noting that he still has not regained his stamina.

COVID-19 precautions will be seen at the Legislature, Seliger said, in the form of Plexiglass dividers in meeting rooms and a limited number of staff being allowed on the senate floor. Officials are also considering ways to allow people to testify virtually or in limited timeframes on important legislation.

The senate will work hard not to spread the disease, but Seliger was confident that his office will "make it happen" if constituents want to come see their senator in person, even if that means meeting under a tree on the Capitol grounds.

Seliger said the state is forecasting a $4 billion budget shortfall. He is open to using a portion of the state's Rainy Day Fund, which currently has between $8 and $9 billion, he said. But he also said the fund shouldn't be used for ongoing expenses and needs to keep a healthy reserve for the future.

The senator said Texans should expect to see cuts across the board in most areas, but he said he doesn't want to see any cuts to higher education and particularly area community colleges.

Seliger said he expects to see bills designed to limit the power of the governor during emergencies after actions that Gov. Abbott took during COVID-19, although he points out that most people don't have any problem with the governor having those powers during hurricanes.

"I don't think he was right all the time," Seliger said.

Local control will also be a topic that comes up again in the next session. He pointed to efforts in the City of Austin to cut police funding and said he was opposed to the state stepping into that situation.

"I think it would be wrong for the state to try to take control of the Austin police," the senator said. "The citizens there will only take so much of that [cutting the police]."

Seliger ran afoul of Lt. Gov. Dan Patrick in the last legislative session by standing with local governments on a variety of issues, particularly the ability for local boards to set taxes. He told the Enterprise his relationship with Patrick today is "very business-like and that's all," but he took pride in the fact that Patrick has told people "Seliger is the only vote I don't control."

"I don't work for him," Seliger said. "I work for the people of this district."

The senator said local officials need to band together to tell politicians that if they follow the "Empower Texans model" – the far right lobbying group – then they are going to have a tough time getting elected.

"Teachers helped get me elected in the last primary, and that was noticed in Austin," he said.

Seliger also is in favor of setting aside accountability ratings again this year, saying that teachers and administrators have enough to deal with right now. He noted that many schools still want to give the STAAR test for the information they can receive from it but said schools should not be graded on the test this year.

Following the 2020 US Census, redistricting will also be a top priority for Seliger and the senate in the next session. District 31 will have to be enlarged by about 130,000 people, and that will see it expand down through Childress and further south most likely, he said. It currently starts in the Permian Basin and runs north to take in the Panhandle.

Seliger said the Legislature must set new boundaries by June of next year or a five-person committee will take over the job and that committee will have no representation from West Texas.

Going forward, Seliger said he wants to encourage residents to contact him at any time if they have issues that need his attention.

US national unity from a historic view

With the election this week, I want to address an issue I have heard from both sides but which has been much more prominent with Joe Biden. Biden claims that if elected he can unite Americans whereas Trump is dividing us. What Biden and all politicians do not understand is that they can only unite their side. As much as Democrats hate Trump, Republicans disliked Obama and very much dislike Biden. Justified or not, the fear of a Biden presidency is as strong for the right as a second term for Trump is for the left. Historically speaking, there have been attempts to unite the nation politically, but even when presidents have claimed success, we were still divided.

A good attempt at national unity came from Jefferson. After twelve years of basically Federalist control and constant political bickering, Jefferson believed his victory would finally unify us. Fighting had gotten so bad under Washington, and even worse under Adams, that the nation had split into political parties, the Jeffersonian Republicans and the Federalists. Even while claiming that parties were bad, people were saying it from their party meetings. What they really meant was your party is bad, ours is necessary to protect us.

Jefferson, believing he was a man of the people, thought that now the feuding could be over: right had prevailed. In his inaugural address he said, “Let us, then, fellow-citizens, unite with one heart and one mind. Let us restore to social intercourse that harmony and affection without which liberty and even life itself are but dreary things. But every difference of opinion is not a difference of principle. We have called by different names brethren of the same principle. We are all Republicans, we are all Federalists.”

Possibly to his surprise, Jefferson found that political fighting had not passed. For the eight years of his presidency, he had to battle it out with his Federalist opponents. After the passage of the Embargo Act, where trade was cut off from all foreign ports, he especially had to deal with hatred from New Englanders who made much of their living from trade. So even the great Thomas Jefferson could not bring unity to the nation. Federalists hated Jefferson as much as he had hated Adams.

If there was a president who had what seemed a real chance to unite us, it was James Monroe. His very presidency fell during a time called the Era of Good Feelings. During the War of 1812, many Federalists in New England came out against the war and threatened to secede from the Union if certain changes were not made that favored the South; four of the five first presidents were from Virginia. Yet when the war was suddenly over and America could claim a second victory over England, the Federalists looked uncooperative at best, traitorous at worst. Suddenly the Federalist Party was a political liability and it disappeared into history. They did run a candidate against Monroe in 1816, but he ran unopposed in 1820. During his eight years in office, Monroe ran a nation with only one political party: the Republicans had won.

Monroe, like Biden if he wins, claimed national unity. The only problem was unity did not exist. In trying to appease both sides, Monroe even appointed some ex-Federalists into his cabinet. The most notable position was John Q. Adams as Secretary of State, the position held by the last three presidents before they ran for president. Monroe did a good job at traveling the nation trying to show support for all, but nothing mattered. As soon as he was in office, the infighting started. With Adams as Secretary of State, most of the fighting was over who would succeed Monroe. The true Republicans feared a Republican in sheep’s clothing (like Adams) might sneak in.

All the Era of Good Feelings accomplished was a false sense of unity. Men like Martin Van Buren and Andrew Jackson began pushing the idea that parties were necessary and good. With parties you could weed out those unlike you. Eventually the fighting got so strong that the Republican Party was fractured into Republicans v. Democrats and eventually Democrats v. Whigs. During the next couple of years, this also led to some of the most divisive and ugly elections in American history.

Unity is a worthy goal, but it has never really been accomplished. With a Trump win this week, the left will make their unhappiness known. I predict the worst violence this nation has seen since the election of Lincoln. However, don’t mistake the lack of rioting as a sign of unity if Biden wins. The right will react differently but will be no less angry. We have never had true national unity, no matter what the different presidents have said. Historically speaking, in our current climate of hate, both candidates need to understand that their win will bring massive disappointment and stop claiming their win can unite a divided nation.

Vignettes: Drawing a black bean meant death

By George U. Hubbard

A few years after Texas gained its independence at San Jacinto and General Santa Anna was released, the Mexican general again became president of Mexico. Ignoring his promise to refrain from further hostilities, Santa Anna continuously threatened to retake Texas. In September 1842, a Mexican army unit commanded by General Adrain Woll captured San Antonio. Texans immediately rallied to the call and, after intense combat, forced the Mexican army to retreat below the Rio Grande.

The Texans, under the command of General Alexander Somervell, gave chase, marched to the Rio Grande, and captured Laredo. Somervell, however, refused to let his relatively small force cross over into Mexico where a larger enemy force awaited. Three hundred of the pursuing force ignored Somervell’s order to return to their homes, and this small band, under Colonel William S. Fisher, continued down the Rio Grande to the Mexican town of Meir. Crossing the river on Christmas Eve in a driving rain, they entered the town and gave battle to the Mexican contingent camped there. With losses on both sides, heavy fighting continued until the Mexican general, Ampudia, asked for a brief truce.

Ampudia told the Texans that 800 fresh Mexican troops were due to arrive. If the Texans would surrender now, he promised they would soon be on their way home after prisoner exchanges. Colonel Fisher advised the Texans to submit. “Ampudia is a man of his word. He can be trusted.” But Ampudia was not a man of his word, and soon the Texans found themselves embarking on a 1,000-mile march to Mexico City, flanked on either side by Mexican guards with fixed bayonets.

Arriving at the town of Salado on February 10, 1843, the Texans decided to make a break for freedom. The next morning at breakfast they overpowered their guards, captured and mounted horses, and set out for freedom and home. Traveling in unfamiliar and desolate country, they lost their way and ran out of food. They were on the verge of starvation when they found themselves surrounded by a Mexican detachment commanded by General Mexia. The kindly general gave them a few days to recover their strength and then marched them back to Salado.

Word came from Santa Anna that all the prisoners should be put to death. By correspondence, General Mexia pied with Santa Anna to spare and release the Texans. Mexia’s efforts achieved partial results, as Santa Anna softened his orders to the effect that one-tenth of the Texans be shot.

On the appointed day, one of the Mexican officers approached the Texans with an earthen pot containing 159 white beans and 17 black beans. Those Texans drawing the black beans would be the ones to die. The commissioned officers were ordered to draw first, followed by the enlisted men in alphabetic order by last name.

Captain Ewen Cameron, who was to make the initial draw, had noticed that the Mexicans had put the white beans into the pot first and then put the black beans on top without mixing them. He whispered to his fellow officers, “Dig deep, boys.” Cameron drew out a white bean as did every other officer except Captain Eastland.

William A. A. “Bigfoot” Wallace was one of the last to draw a bean, and the remaining whites and blacks were well mixed by that time. Wallace, however, thought he had observed that the black beans were slightly larger than the white. Acting on this assumption, he figured the beans in the jar, and with two remaining in his hand, he drew out the smaller. It was white, and Wallace survived another of many ordeals in his colorful life.

At sundown the selected prisoners were tied, blindfolded, and made to sit down on a log. The fateful command was given, and the deed was done. Sixteen Texans died immediately, and one, Jams L. Shepherd, was merely wounded. Pretending death, Shepherd lay still until after dark when he got up and escaped into the night. A few weeks later he was captured and killed by the Mexicans. Captain Cameron, who had drawn the first white bean, was also executed by the Mexicans following a later escape attempt.

Five years after the black bean episode, the remains of the slaughtered were dug up and reburied at La Grange, Texas, where a large monument erected by the State of Texas marks their last resting place.

Texas veterans need our help now

By Nathan L. Hecht and Terry Tottenham

Texas has the second-highest population of veterans in the country – nearly 1.5 million – and many of these veterans are poor or homeless. While groups around the state are tirelessly working on veterans’ behalf, there is always more to be done to ensure their civil legal needs, like eviction and the inability to access medical care, are being met as they reintegrate back into civilian life – especially during a global pandemic.

Prior to the COVID-19 pandemic, nearly 5.2 million Texans, including a significant number of veterans, qualified for civil legal aid. This number is only expected to increase as we continue to see the devastating financial and economic fallout, unemployment and uncertainty caused by COVID-19. Veterans aren’t exempt from this; they are an already vulnerable group made even more vulnerable by the coronavirus pandemic.

Legal issues amount for five of the top 10 unmet needs of homeless veterans, according to the annual survey of homeless and formerly homeless veterans by the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs. Legal aid programs, local bar associations, law schools and pro bono lawyers all help provide civil legal aid for veterans, but they struggle to meet demand without adequate funding. Veteran legal issues – including credit problems, accessing benefits, landlord/tenant disputes, restoring a driver’s license and denial of critical medical care – are essential legal issues that must be handled in order to keep Texas veterans from falling through the cracks.

The Texas Access to Justice Foundation (TAJF), created in 1984 to provide funding for civil legal aid in Texas, is committed to the vision that all Texans will have equal access to justice, regardless of income. Last year, The Foundation awarded more than $6 million in two-year grants to 13 Texas legal aid providers to provide civil legal services to low-income veterans. This year, in response to the coronavirus pandemic, grantees of the TAJF, the Texas Veterans Legal Aid Coalition pivoted from coordinating in-person veteran legal aid clinics to virtual clinics across the state, along with creating a series of videos about benefits available for veterans.

In an additional show of support for Texas veterans, TAJF established the Joe Jamail Endowment for Veteran Legal Services in 2017 to ensure veterans have fair and equitable access to the justice system. Earlier this year, the Endowment reached a milestone $1 million in donations, which will be used to provide legal representation to veterans throughout the state.

This year is also the 10th anniversary of Texas Lawyers for Texas Veterans, a collaborative effort between local bar associations and legal aid organizations that specifically addresses the need for pro bono civil legal assistance for veterans and their families.

Each year, the week of Veterans Day is designated as Texas Veterans Legal Aid Week (TVLAW). This year from Nov. 9-13, local bar associations, legal aid organizations and law schools across Texas are hosting free, virtual legal clinics to serve veterans with the support and civil legal guidance they need. To find a clinic in your area, visit texaslawhelp.org/tvlaw-2020 or call the statewide hotline at 1-800-622-2520.

Texas veterans are at an increased risk of displacement, unemployment, requiring medical care and other problems arising from the COVID-19 pandemic, and it’s on us to make sure they are adequately being taken care of. We must ensure they can access the resources and services they need to reintegrate back into civilian life and thrive even despite the current public health crisis. Legal aid services can make a real difference in the lives of veterans who qualify, and support for these services ensures that veterans aren’t left behind as the state works toward COVID-19 recovery.

Nathan L. Hecht is chief justice of the Supreme Court of Texas and is a U.S. Navy veteran. Terry Tottenham is on the board of the Texas Access to Justice Foundation, a U.S. Marine Corp veteran, and served as the president of the State Bar of Texas from 2010-2014, during which time he founded Texas Lawyers for Texas Veterans.

Cooking fun with the guys

Last Saturday was Halloween and that morning I went and helped my Grandparents clear out their yard from all the limbs that fell off their trees because of the ice storm we had last week. That took me and my family a while, then we got dressed in our Halloween costumes. I was Bob Ross, Ella was Elle Woods, Matthew was a T-Rex and Monroe was a Tiger. Later that evening we had the Trunk or Treat at the Mulkey and we watched Hocus Pocus, too.

Once we had done all of that I had four of my friends over for a sleepover. The first thing we did when we got back to the house was have some cooking lessons. Me and 2 friends who know how to cook taught the others to cook, and we ended up making pan-seared chicken with mashed potatoes. Later that night we began a game of poker in my room that was super fun and we ended up staying awake until four in the morning playing poker in my room. This was the first time I've ever had that many people over to my house and we had a lot of fun which we sadly had to end the next morning when I went to Amarillo. I can't wait for my next adventure with the guys.

Rose Lee Watson (Casteel), 98, peacefully entered heavenly life in her Clarendon, Texas home on October 29, 2020.

Watson

Services will be held at Community Fellowship Church in Clarendon, Texas at 10:00 a.m. on Saturday, November 7, presided over by pastor Larry Capranica. Burial will follow at Citizen's Cemetery.

Arrangements are under the direction of Robertson Funeral Directors of Clarendon.

She was born to C.I. and Leona Jewell Casteel in Severe County, Arkansas on April 7, 1922. The oldest of twelve children, her descended lineage spanned generations in her lifetime, as did her charming smile and warmth.

Rose Lee met the love of her life, Lawrence Audrey "L.A." Watson of Red River County, working in a cotton patch near Lake View, Texas. They were married in 1938 and later settled in the Martin community near Clarendon, where they lived for many years. She was a proud farmer, homemaker, and world class quilter with a deep affection for singing. Devoted to her lifelong faith, she was baptized at 19 in Deep Lake, Texas and remained a pillar in church communities throughout her life. She cheerfully led the congregation at Martin Baptist Church in singing for many years and led bible studies well into her later years. Of late, Rose Lee was an active member of the Community Fellowship Church in Clarendon and the Donley County Senior Citizens organization.

Among the things she cherished in life were piano playing, Alan Jackson's gospel records, wearing elegant and soft-brimmed rose red hats (her favorite color), and opening her home for family and friends to celebrate holidays. She frequently and generously offered her ever growing family with gifts of hand-made quilts and homemade canned delights. When she was not occupied with her volunteerism and family life, she loved to take in the natural beauty of her garden as she pruned and cared for her plants, giving them safe harbor from the West Texas wind. Even late in life, Rose Lee could be found exercising body and mind with a smile.

To her family, Rose Lee was a brilliant light of unconditional love and dedication. She selflessly poured herself into a life of hospitality and care for her family, community, and friends alike. Her life endeavors and challenges were all met with resilience and cheerfulness. Although mortal coil has been shed, her family will hold a wellspring of reminiscence and admiration for generations to come. Rose Lee left in her life's wake an example of grace, elegance, hard work, and warm heartedness of which the world may take note and benefit.

She was preceded in death by her parents; step-mother Vera Casteel; her brothers Jr., Dwane, Dale, and Jody; her sisters Vera Jean Casteel Stevens, Neita Casteel Draper, Allene Casteel, and Elizabeth Casteel Bohannon; her husband L.A.; her grandchildren Adenia Mills Baird, Terry Cole, and Karla Cole; her great grandchildren Cole Kedane, Adrian Mills; and great-grandchild Faith Sims.

She is survived by her two daughters, Gay Cole and Doris Mills, both of Clarendon; two sons, Faylon Watson and Larry Watson, both of Clarendon; brother, Kenneth Casteel of Houston; her grandchildren Charles and Kent Mills, Annette Bragg, Carl Watson, Tim Cole, Shanna Cole Kadane, Regina Watson Moore, Janet Watson Brown, Renee Watson Allen, Oren Shields, Cael Shields, and Amy Shields. Also surviving are 22 nieces and nephews; 30 great grandchildren; 6 great-great grandchildren; and a host of great and great-great nieces and nephews. The family would like to thank Michael and Suzie Rhinehart for the great care given for the many years there, Kindred Hospice and the Kindred nurses that attended her, and the Memphis convalescent Center for care in her final days.

In lieu of flowers, please consider donations to Donley County Senior Citizens Center, Community Fellowship Church, and Kindred Hospice.

Clara Jo Calhoun, 73, of Hedley went to be with the Lord on Friday, October 30, 2020. Clara Jo was surrounded by her children at the time of her passing.

Graveside services will be held Saturday, November 7, 2020, at 2:00 p.m. in Rowe Cemetery in Hedley. Rev. Bruce Howard is officiating.

Arrangements are under the direction of Robertson Funeral Directors of Clarendon.

Clara Jo was born September 9, 1947, in Wellington to Clarence and Callie Jo Stephens. She spent her early childhood in Pampa before moving to Hedley, where she graduated high school in 1966. Clara Jo was known for her beauty, her sarcastic sense of humor, and most notably her infectious smile. She was loving, humble and kind. Even though she suffered from a lifelong physical disability, she never complained.

In addition to being a mother, she was a cosmetologist and owned her own video game arcade called Clara's Corner, where a whole generation of Hedley kids grew up frequenting. She was a great seamstress, loved Dachshunds, and was known for never missing her kids basketball games or events. She could always be found on the front row, but even if you couldn't see her, you could hear her booming voice above the crowd cheering. She had a way of making every holiday special, because she was happiest when surrounded by her family. Clara Jo's grandkids all have memories of her standing at the stove making her world famous chocolate gravy, which they requested at every gathering. She was the closest thing to perfect that a mother and Nanna could ever be.

She is preceded in death by her father, Clarence Omar Stephens, and mother, Callie Jo Stephens.

She is survived by Gary Calhoun of Lubbock, her 5 children, Stephanie Molloy and husband Mark of Amarillo, Calvin Holland and wife Leanne of Hedley, Scheli Moore and husband Michael of Canyon, Tanya Burton and husband Blain of Hedley, and Rhett Holland and wife Berkley of Amarillo, 20 grandchildren, 21 great-grandchildren and another due in March.

In lieu of flowers, family requests memorials be made to Rowe Cemetery in Hedley or the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

NOTICE OF APPLICATION OF SOUTHWESTERN ELECTRIC POWER COMPANY FOR AUTHORITY TO RECONCILE FUEL COSTS

Southwestern Electric Power Company (SWEPCO) applied to the Public Utility Commission of Texas (Commission) on June 30, 2020, for authority to reconcile its eligible fuel expenses and revenues for the period of March 1, 2017, through December 31, 2019 (Reconciliation Period). SWEPCO's request, if granted, will affect all of SWEPCO's Texas retail customers who pay fixed fuel factors. The request has no effect on SWEPCO's non-fuel base rates.

During the Reconciliation Period, SWEPCO incurred a total of $616,370,432 in eligible fuel, fuel-related expenses, and purchased-power costs to generate and purchase electric energy for its Texas retail customers, as well as expenses associated with environmental consumables and emission allowance costs incurred by SWEPCO and allocated to its Texas retail customers. As of the end of the Reconciliation Period, SWEPCO calculates that it has over-recovered its Texas retail fuel, fuel related, and purchased-power costs by $10,041,895, excluding interest. Including interest, SWEPCO's cumulative over-recovery balance is $10,144,696 as of December 31, 2019. SWEPCO seeks to carry over the cumulative Reconciliation Period fuel over-recovery balance into the next reconciliation period beginning January 1, 2020. SWEPCO also requests a prudence finding for certain fuel-related contracts and arrangements entered into or modified during the Reconciliation Period. Finally, SWEPCO requests recovery of its reasonable rate-case expenses associated with this fuel reconciliation proceeding and a prior fuel refund proceeding, including those expenses paid to reimburse municipalities for their participation.

Persons with questions or who want more information on this petition may contact SWEPCO at 428 Travis Street, Shreveport, Louisiana 71101, or call toll-free at (888) 216-3523 during normal business hours. A complete copy of this application is available for inspection at the address listed above.

Persons who wish to formally participate in this proceeding, or who wish to express their comments concerning this petition should contact the Public Utility Commission of Texas, Office of Customer Protection, at P.O. Box 13326, Austin, Texas 78711-3326, or call (512) 936-7120, or toll free at 1-888-782-8477. Hearing- and speech-impaired individuals with text telephones (TTY) may call (512) 936-7136 or use Relay Texas (toll free) at 1-800-735-2989. A request for intervention or for further information should refer to Docket No. 50997.

Broncos fall short in district game

By Sandy Anderberg

The Broncos struggled early in the game to put points on the board in their 16-27 loss at Wheeler last Friday night.

The Broncos are preparing for their last District game of the season and need a win to assure a good spot in post-season play.

The Broncos racked up 217 total yards in the game with 157 of those coming on the ground. Jordan Herndon tallied 85 yards on 16 carries, and Jmaury Davis averaged nine yards a carry for 72 total yards. Jordan Evans also got his turn running the ball and finished with seven yards on two carries, and Lyric Smith had one carry for six yards. Quarterback Lamarcus Peniger was two of four passing for 50 yards. Koyt Tucek caught the two passes for 50 yards and also posted one touchdown.

Defensively, the Broncos played hard but allowed Wheeler 14 points in the first half.

“We had several guys making tackles,” head coach Clint Conkin said.

Davis led the way with 12 tackles and one interception. Herndon had nine tackles and one quarterback sack, and Rhett Caison finished with eight tackles. Evans had six tackles and one caused fumble, and Ivan Gonzalez grabbed six tackles.

The Broncos will host Shamrock at 7:00 p.m. on Friday, November 6.

Senior night will be held at 6:30 p.m. before the game.

Owl XC team advances to regional competition

Hedley High School had a big day this week with multiple runners and the entire Owl team advancing at the District 1A Cross Country meet in American Legion Burt Woolridge Rodeo Arena in Claude.

The Owls again had the first place team, and Jordan Upton was second overall with a time of 19:18.

Joshua Booth was 3rd at 19:54, and Tyler Harper was 4th at 19:57. Hayden Alston came in 8th at 20:40, and Iziak Weatherread was 9th with a time of 21:07.

Those finishing in the top ten advance to regional, and Astin McAllister, who placed 12th with time of 21:42, will also advance as a member of the first place team.

Running for the Lady Owls, Cara Lambert posted a 7th place finish with a time of 14:32 and advances to regional. Emma Lambert ran 25th with a time of 16:25.

Coach Kim Harper says the runners have improved this season.

“Cross country is one of the hardest, most demanding sports there is, and they have all kept a good attitude and done everything asked of them,” Harper said. “Our goal is to compete at state and we are working very hard to achieve that goal. They continue to make not only myself proud, but their families, this school, and the community proud!”

Smith finishes

10th in District CC

By Sandy Anderberg

Clarendon High School junior runner Madi Smith ran a good race in the District Cross-Country Meet held in Shamrock last week.

Smith ran the two-mile course in a time of 13:15.42 finishing 10th overall. The Lady Broncos tied for third as a team. Smith earned the opportunity to run in the Regional Meet to be held November 9 in Lubbock at Mae Simmons Park. A top-ten placing there will send Smith to the State Meet in Round Rock.

Makenna Shadle finished 19th with a time of 13:53.04, and Aliyah Weatheron was 22nd at 14:32.48. Aubrey Jaramillo finished 30th at 15:31.72, and Maudi Buckhaults was 32nd with a time of 15:37.72. Lacey Rummel crossed the finish line in a time of 16:13.74 for 35th place, and Aleyah Weatheron was 36th at 16:14.65.

Davin Mays was the lone runner for the Broncos and ran the three-mile course in a time of 23:27.40 for 13th place.

Colts drop game to Wheeler at home

The Colts played their last home game against the Wheeler Colts and struggled to make anything work against the big team.

“It was a hard week for our junior high guys,” coach Boston Hudson said. “Really not having one practice this week then stepping out and playing on Thursday. I thought we played much better in the second half, we just had a bad first half and couldn’t ever recover from that. But I thought the effort was great from our kids. We are looking forward to our last week of junior high football and seeing if we can improve in this last week.”

The Colts will travel to Shamrock Thursday, November 5, and play at 5:00 p.m.

Cherokee Nation (Eastern Band)

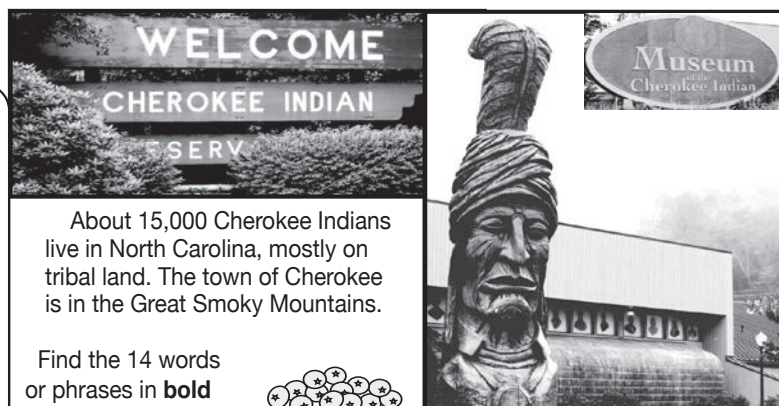

Did you know that archaeologists think the first people to live in North America were the Paleo-Indians?
At the end of the last Ice Age (around 12,000 years ago) these people moved from Asia into North America on a land bridge that existed then. It is believed that they lived in small family groups and moved constantly to hunt animals like the mastodon (an elephant-like animal that is now extinct) and to gather foods like berries and nuts. Arrowheads for spears and other tools mark places where they lived.

In the Archaic period (8,000 to 1,000 BCE), families had homes with wooden poles covered with hides, which could be moved. In the spring they would move to the river valleys to fish and collect shellfish. In the fall they would move to the forest to hunt deer or turkey and gather nuts and berries.
Archaeologists have studied tools, soapstone bowls, burial grounds and pottery to understand these people's ways.

In a more recent period, Woodland Indians, people are thought to have had villages as well as seasonal camps. Corn, a key part of the Indian diet, was introduced. The first evidence for the bow and arrow were found. It is believed that people were trading: salt, beads, shells, fish, pottery and animal skins.

During the next period, Mississippian Indians, settlements became more permanent. Squash, corn and beans, known as the Three Sisters, were important and foods from hunting and gathering were now added to the foods harvested from gardens. Beautiful jewelry and pottery were created too.

After 1650, when Europeans arrived, there were years of both peace and fighting. In 1836, the U.S. Senate accepted a treaty signed by a small group of Cherokee to sell their land and the Cherokee were forced to leave the east to be resettled in Oklahoma. They were expected to walk 1,000 miles to get there!
On this hard walk, now called the "Trail of Tears," an estimated 4,000-8,000 people died. Some Cherokee refused to move and hid in the mountains. Many of their descendants now live on Qualla Boundary, a preserve.

About 15,000 Cherokee Indians live in North Carolina, mostly on tribal land. The town of Cherokee is in the Great Smoky Mountains.
