Clinic reports more COVID-19 cases

The Clarendon Family Medical Center reported an uptick in COVID-19 infections Tuesday morning as the number of active cases rose from 12 to 15.

"Yesterday (Monday) we had eight positives as opposed to four positives all last week," clinic spokesperson Marsha Bruce said.

The total number of tests given by the clinic since the pandemic began now stands at 1,121 with 788 of those being negative, and 333 being positive. Combined with the known cases of local residents with COVID-19 confirmed at facilities outside the county, the total number of cases is now 376.

Bruce said the clinic still doesn't know when its next allotment of COVID-19 vaccine will arrive. Those interested in being vaccinated should call the clinic to get on the waiting list.

Boards seek candidates for nineteen local offices

Citizens wishing to serve their community can now sign up for positions at seven local governments that are scheduled to hold elections this spring.

The cities of Clarendon, Hedley, and Howardwick; the Clarendon and Hedley school districts; and the Donley County Hospital District all have a total of 19 local positions available this year.

In Clarendon, the two-year terms of Mayor Sandy Skelton and Aldermen Nathan Floyd and Jacob Fangman are up this year. Skelton has filed to run again, and Floyd resigned his seat last week.

Hedley has three aldermen's seats up this year. Those are twoyear terms and are currently held by Aldermen Tonya Metcalf, Alicia Hanes, and Trisha Chambless.

In Howardwick the terms of Mayor Tony Clemishire and Aldermen Jerry Mullanax and Johnny Floyd are expiring. Those are all two-year terms, and Clemishire and Floyd have filed to run again. Jada Murray has also filed to run for alderman.

Clarendon ISD Trustees serve three years, and the terms of Wayne Hardin and Wes Hatley are expiring this year. Hardin has filed for re-election

Hedley ISD has two full three-year terms and two unexpired terms up this year. The full terms are those seats currently held by Dana Bell and Carole Ward. One year is remaining on the seat formerly held by Billy Hall and currently held by Bruce Howard, and two years remain on the seat formerly held by Susan Cosby, which is now held by Shauna Herbert. Ward, Howard, and Herbert have all filed for this WW84 will also be showing Friday at 7:30 and Sunday at 2:00, but Pizza Nomad will only be there on Saturday.

Funding awarded to battle feral swine

The USDA has announced it is awarding approximately $1.5 million to the Texas State Soil and Water Conservation Board (TSSWCB) to fund three additional pilot projects to control feral swine in Texas.

Feral swine cause a high level of economic, biologic and natural resource damage.

This round of funding will focus on three additional project areas in the following counties: Dallam, Hartley, Nueces, San Patricio, Bee, Williamson and Milam.

Through the first and second rounds, there will be a total of 34 active projects across 12 states. Projects are planned to conclude at the end of September 2023.

The spectre of fraud in US elections

It was a dark day on January 6, 2021, as Congress planned to confirm the Electoral College vote for the next president. Around 1 p.m. a group of pro-Trump protesters pushed their way into the Capitol building, disrupting the official count as Congress was forced into lock down. The issue at hand was the President's claims of voter fraud and a stolen election.

This was by no means the first contested election in the US. The 1800 and 1824 elections were both decided in Congress. The 1876 and 2000 elections were both decided in the courts. Let's also not forget the South seceded from the nation in 1860 because of Lincoln's election. In fact, in 2001, 2005 and 2017 some Democrats protested the final confirmation vote the same way some Republicans did this year. In these cases, the Vice Presidents acted like Mike Pence this year and did their duty and confirmed the vote even with political pressure not to do so.

historically speaking

by dr. james fink The differences between this current election and the past ones were that the controversies did not involve a sitting president. They were always between two new candidates. 1800 did have an incumbent president in the race, but the controversy was between Thomas Jefferson and Aaron Burr. Trump is the first sitting president to contest his defeat. The other more important difference was those election controversies were all handled peacefully, except 1860. Yes, there have been many protests over elections, but trying to take the Capitol to obstruct the vote is unprecedented.

There have been other elections with fraud claims, most recently, the 2016 election that Democrats claimed foul because of Russian influence. Yet, the one I think is important because of the behavior of the candidates is not remembered today as controversial but at the time was called out by many as fraudulent.

Today, when discussing the 1960 election, most think of the young charismatic John F. Kennedy manhandling and crushing the much older Richard Nixon in the first televised debates. I would argue this is a false memory. For one, Nixon was only four years older than Kennedy and, two, this was one of the closest elections in history. The closeness of the election meant that several states were swing states and just one or two of them going the other way meant a difference in the president.

Two of the states that could have gone either direction were Texas and Illinois. Both ultimately voted for JFK, but not without some controversy. In Texas it was claimed that JFK's V.P., Lyndon Johnson, used undue influence and fraud to guarantee a Democratic win. Yet it was Illinois that captured the nation's attention, especially the mayor of Chicago, Richard Daley. Daley is one of the men credited with the quote, "Vote early and vote often." On election night, he called JFK to tell him basically that, with a little luck and some help from some friends, he would win the state. Daley was a mayor either loved or despised, depending on your political leaning, but no one questioned his power over the city and even the state. Daley was rumored to be involved in ballot stuffing, especially in Cook County, that turned the state towards Kennedy. The cries of corruption were minimal on election night and ultimately JFK was the victor. It was after the election that the rumors began to build. The man more than any other who began to beat the drum of fraud was a reporter and friend of Nixon, Earl Mazo. He began to investigate the rumors and wrote a series of articles detailing his evidence. He had found graveyards in Chicago where all the permanent residences had voted. The story that most stuck out was the 56 voters whose residences all turned out to be the same abandoned house. Yet as interesting as these stories were, most were never published at the insistence of Nixon. Nixon asked his friend to stop running the stories. His request was not because he felt they were untrue. In fact, Nixon, for the rest of his life, privately insisted the election was stolen from him, and many from his administration insisted they had evidence of fraud. What Nixon believed, however, was that in the midst of the Cold War his nation could not afford a challenge to democracy. Recounts were requested, but after a couple of legal challenges failed, Nixon did what was best for the nation and stepped aside. It was Nixon's job as sitting Vice President to confirm the votes for Kennedy in the same ceremony that was interrupted Jan. 6 with Pence. Nixon did what Trump could not. Whether or not there was fraud, Nixon believed there was. But he put his ego aside for the good of the nation and did not resist. While all of Trump's court challenges were completely legal, almost all of them were found by several courts to be without merit. We have seen similar actions in many elections. Where Trump will be remembered with infamy was his refusal to accept the outcome even after the courts rejected him. The difference may be this: eight years later Nixon ran a second time and won. However, after January 6, even Trump's staunchest supporters turned on him, making any effort for a second run obsolete.

Going in search of modern Camelot

As a rider, I'd want a camel with two humps, thus improving my chances to avoid injury. I might fall left or right, but not forward or back.

The Geico insurance people had the chance to keep camels in front of folks but lost 15 percent of their credibility when they chose a gecko instead of a camel for their mascot several years ago. I thought their ad showing Caleb the Camel clopping through the office to ask workers if they could guess "which day is it" to be pure advertising genius. It made us smile, and had tens of millions of "hits" on the Internet.

Caleb "yucked" it up, announcing Wednesdays to be "hump day." (My guess is that most Americans clearly remember the commercials, but not necessarily what the dromedary was promoting.)... *****

Millions have seen the Facebook picture showing a horse with two saddles-a "camel stand-in," if you willstanding near a church altar.

Like the Hee Haw characters who said they repeated gossip because they didn't know what else to do with it, I'm stuck between the "dilemma horns" of "maybe" and "no way."

And all this because the camel owner allegedly got sick, thus was unable to deliver the animal cigarette that smokers would walk a mile for a half-century ago. Ah, yes, many smokers would walk a mile-or even more-for a Camel cigarette

* I do know this: Rental camels cost a pretty penny in December. There's not much call for camels in the other months, but they eat the same amount of first Christmas Pageant in the 1980s. It's a spectacular production, expensive to produce and attended by thousands of persons annually.

Upon retirement, Dick said he'd sleep better in Decembers without the dratted middle-of-the-night calls from Dallas Police saying things like, "Dick, your camels are out again, weaving their way through traffic on Arapaho."... ****

Years ago, a fellow university administrator asked if I knew how camels came into being. I answered that I figured they lumbered onto the ark, "two by two," like the rest of the animals.

That didn't shut him up. "No, they are hybrids, the result of a committee charged with drawing a picture of a horse."... *****

Most of us have seen camels at circuses and zoos. I know that some camels have one hump and some have two.

As a rider, I'd want the latter, thus improving my chances to avoid injury. I might fall left or right, but not forward or back.

Little did I know that during a Mediterranean cruise ship stop in Algiers that having zero dollars in my pocket likely saved me from considerable embarrassment... *****

They had a "camel ride" operation, and my wife and I saw-and smelled them-up close. These were "camels on steroids," too tall to enter most church doorways.

I was shocked that Brenda wanted to ride. She had two dollars, however, the exact amount needed for one rider.

I told her I'd "just watch," secretly delighted with my observer status. I mean it was "way up there" to reach the wobbly saddle. I wouldn't want to ride such a tall animal without an oxygen mask, as well as "beefed up" travel insurance. (It's a colossal understatement that her wanting to ride a camel seemed out of character for a woman who, in pre-school years, chose not to ride a carnival "hobby horse" because she might get dizzy.) ****

She has surprised me in dozens of ways across the years.

I wouldn't have guessed she would "kiss a dolphin" or "swim with the stingrays." She was not surprised that I preferred cuddling baby sloths at a Costa Rican preserve.

If anyone knows IF a Christmas Pageant somewhere that a horse "stood in" for a camel, please let me know. If so, I'd like to know if the preacher still has his job. Maybe only the three wise men know for sure... *****

The Chinese tragedy at Sanderson

The Chinese Tragedy at Sanderson After completing their work on the Central Pacific portion of America's first transcontinental railroad, hundreds of Chinese laborers were brought to Texas for further railroad construction. The Chinese were wonderful workers, and they were willing to work for very low wages. Liking the opportunities in America, many of the Chinese chose to remain in Texas and earn their subsistence as best they could. Initially, however, they were restricted to operating laundries, restaurants, and grocery stores.

The treatment of the Chinese by the Caucasians, and also by the United States government, was less than desirable. With restrictions on immigration and on attaining citizenship, the federal government did not want the Chinese laborers to become permanent work contracts, they were loaded into trains and vignettes shipped to tales of the old west by george u. hubbard California for deportation back to China. One of these shipments of human beings ended in pathetic tragedy.

Sanderson, Texas was, and still is, a major railroad town on the Southern Pacific line between San Antonio and El Paso. Many Chinese laborers had been employed in constructing the roadbed from San Antonio to Sanderson, and when their work was completed in 1905, the government rounded up about 700 Chinese workers and put them on a train to San Francisco.

It should have been a routine operation, but the engineer of the train was intoxicated. Having brought the train into Sanderson late and at too fast a rate of speed, he was furious about having been thoroughly reprimanded by the train's conductor. When the train pulled out of Sanderson for the next leg of its journey, the engineer was still intoxicated and still angry. Racing to the next town of Hammond with the throttle wide open, the engineer attempted to round a curve at full speed. He didn't make it. The entire train jumped the tracks; the wooden cars were smashed and caught fire; and all aboard were killed.

It was a terrible tragedy - one that should not be forgotten. George U. Hubbard is an author and resident of Clarendon.

Cooking fun with Friends

Last week me and my two friends, Mason and Bryce, thought it would be fun to come to my house and cook something to eat.

So, after school last week we came over to my house and we originally wanted to make bread, but since our friend Bryce wouldn't be there for very long we decided it would be better to make some ramen. The first thing we did was make the noodles, and that was very messy which resulted in Bryce getting came out of the oven, and then Bryce noodle dough stuck to his hands.

But after we began proofing broth which fell to me. So I started

SWEPCO's digital payment options help customers stay on track

Southwestern Electric Power Co. (SWEPCO) bills are sometimes being delivered past their due dates because of unprecedented delays in mail delivery. As a result, customers may be at risk for late fees, additional deposits and possible disconnections.

"SWEPCO offers a variety of digital payment options so that customers can stay on track with bill payments," said Paul Pratt, director of Customer Services and Marketing. "These options can help you keep tabs on due dates and amounts, and make timely payments, even if mail is running late."

Pratt advises customers to make a list of monthly bills, including the date each usually is due.

"Marking these dates on a calendar, and when possible, setting up online payments and alerts, is one way to ensure bills are paid on time," said Pratt.

SWEPCO's digital payment options include:

Paperless Billing: Enroll in Paperless Billing at SWEPCO.com/ Paperless to have SWEPCO bills delivered by email. Customers can view their accounts securely with 24/7 access. Billing Alerts: Customers enrolled in billing alerts will receive a text or email alert with a bill's due date and when payment is received. Once the alert is received, customers can visit SWEPCO.com/Account and view the month's bill. Mobile App: Through the SWEPCO mobile app, customers can make a bill payment using a bank account, credit or debit card, or find an in-person payment center. A service fee of $1.85 is collected by BillMatrix when payment is made with a credit or debit card. Immediate One-Time Payment: Customers can pay a bill by phone or online using a credit card, debit card, ATM card or checking account. A service fee of $1.85 is collected by BillMatrix when payment is made with a credit or debit card. Checkless Payment: This payment option is available for qualifying residential and commercial customers with satisfactory credit history. The amount owed is automatically transferred to SWEPCO from a checking or savings account on each bill's due date. Customers receive the bill beforehand, allowing time to review it before payment is deducted.

Jaramillo competes in first Powerlifting meet of season By Sandy Anderberg

Clarendon High School senior lifter Aubrey Jaramillo competed in her first powerlifting meet of the season in Childress last week.

Jaramillo was able to squat 155 pounds and bench press 90 pounds. She also was able to deadlift 180 pounds for a total of 425 pounds.

"She competed well and is ahead of where we were at this time last year," coach Johnny Nino said.

The Broncos will compete in their first meet on Thursday, January 21, in Childress. The Lady Broncos' next meet will be January 28 also in Childress.

The Clarendon Lions Club held its regular Tuesday noon meeting January 19, 2021, with Boss Lion Landon Lambert in charge.

We had ten members and Sweetheart Aubrey Jaramillo present this week

Lion Scarlet Estlack reported on the college where classes have started and students are learning how to wear masks effectively.

Lion David Dockery reported on the city, which is applying for grants for a waste water system project and downtown revitalization, and he also reported that he will be picking up limbs around the Lions Hall Saturday morning if any member would like to help.

The Boss Lion reported on the county, and Lion Sandy Childress reported on the new addition to the City of Howardwick Volunteer Fire Department building.

The Sweetheart reported she placed first in her weight class at the powerlifting meet in Childress last weekend and is ranked fourth in the area. Lion Sandy presented her with a gift for representing the club well. Second Vice District Governor Roger Estlack reported on the upcoming mid-winter district meeting Saturday in Lake Tanglewood.

Lion Ashlee Estlack reported on the Chamber of Commerce's re-branded Shop Donley County campaign (formerly Totally Locally) that gives shoppers the opportunity Moving? Selling? Buying?

Lion Steve Hall moved to purchase a programmable thermostat for the Lions Hall, and the members roared in agreement.

In this week's Main Event, Sweetheart Aubrey drew for the membership drive contest winner. Lion Scarlet was the winner of the super nice outdoor loveseat and donated it back to the club to continue the membership drive. Since October, we have added four new members - Lions Cameron Word, Corey Blaise, Anndria Newhouse, and Sandy Childress. All Lions are encouraged to bring a guest and/or prospective member to be registered in the next drawing!

There being no further business, we were adjourned to spread Lionism and good cheer throughout our fair county.
