CC reports lower spring enrollment

Clarendon College's spring 2021 numbers show a decrease in overall enrollment compared to one year ago.

CC officials believe that the decrease for the academic year has a strong correlation with the current COVID pandemic.

Headcounts following the 12th day of classes last week on February 3 show total enrollment of 1,279 students, which reflects a 12 percent overall decrease in enrollment compared to spring 2020, according to CC Registrar Brandi Havens.

The college did show an increase in two areas. CC's Amarillo Cosmetology Center is up 23 percent with 53 students. CC is also showing an increase in students choosing to take only Online classes for the current term with an overall increase of six percent going from 133 last spring to 141 currently.

All other CC counts were down. The main campus in Clarendon dropped 13 percent to 233, the Childress Center saw a 19 percent decrease with 34 students, and the Pampa Center dropped 32 percent to 113 this spring compared to 167 a year ago.

Dual credit enrollment, high school students taking college classes, dropped from 647 last spring to 609.

CC saw a decrease in correctional institutions as well with the Jordan unit in Pampa going from 65 to 48 spring over spring, and the Roach unit in Childress going from 76 down to 48.

Total contact hours for Clarendon College for the spring 2021 semester show a decrease of 13.8 percent overall compared to spring 2020.

Texans risk losing public information accessibility

Bold steps nearly 50 years ago created a landmark protection for the people's right to know in

Lawmakers approved the state's open records law, now known as the Texas Public Information Act. Born out of a political financial scandal, the act's aim was to allow citizens to hold public officials account-

For the most part, this Texas transparency law has served us well.

It's essential in many Texans' routine interactions with their government as they request police reports and school budget documents and so much more. It has been used to expose government action - or inaction - in the wake of hurricanes and floods and turbulent economic times.

Now, amid the coronavirus outbreak, the Public Information Act is having another pivotal moment as Texans try to keep a watch on government during a

Where are COVID-19 clusters occurring? Are elderly loved ones safe? What's the latest on COVID testing and vaccine distribution? How are taxpayer dollars being spent on pandemic aid in our communi-

The Texas Public Information Act is supposed to help us answer these questions of life and death and following the money. But in many cases, governments are using the pandemic itself to ignore them.

Some government offices closed their doors to the public to prevent spread of the virus and, citing attorney general guidance, declared this physical office closure doesn't count as business days for responding to Public Information Act requests. That's even if government employees are getting paid to work remotely with electronic access to records. This obstruction could go on indefinitely. It's an outdated approach when much of the work world is operating remotely via email and Zoom meetings.

Clearly, there's a flaw in the interpretation of the law. And it can be repaired.

Today's state legislators, like their predecessors a half century ago, have the chance to take their own historic stand to safeguard the free flow of information for years to come.

The Freedom of Information Foundation of Texas and 20 other diverse organizations have formed the Transparent and Accountable Government Coalition to raise awareness about transparency laws and to support reforms in the 2021 legislative session. Some of these issues already existed, but the pandemic magnified them.

In addition to Public Information Act updates, the virtual meetings provision of the Texas Open Meetings Act needs lawmakers' attention. We must ensure fair rules for public participation in online government meetings, including having a phone call-in line for those without Internet access.

State law also should clarify that the locations of COVID-19 cases in nursing homes and other longterm care facilities are public information. The TAG Coalition is working on these measures and several other open government bills, such as one calling for posting more government contracts online.

On Tuesday, Feb. 9, state Rep. Giovanni Capriglione, R-Southlake, will participate in a webinar about government financial transparency and how we can enhance citizens' ability to obtain information through today's technology. This free program is being hosted by the Texas Association of Broadcasters.

Lawmakers in both political parties are interested in working together to protect and expand public information access. It's a continuous job to make sure Texas laws keep pace with modern times and that governments adhere to the letter and the spirit of our transparency laws.

This pandemic era presents the opportunity to take yet another step on that honorable path.

Memphis family appreciates Clarendon medical facility

On behalf of my father, sisters, and our families, we'd like to thank the doctors, nurses, and staff at the Clarendon Family Medical Center for the wonderfully compassionate and professional care given to our parents in their recent battle with COVID-19.

The doctors and nurses at the center went above and beyond what was expected - seeing them almost every day, making sure they had access to the best treatments, checking on them frequently – and really caring about their recovery. Though Mom passed away after a hard-fought battle, we are grateful to know that she received such good care.

Citizens of this area are truly blessed to have access to this caliber of care so close to home.

Thank you from the bottom of our hearts, The Family of Janice Alexander - Gary Alexander (Memphis, Texas), Sherry Alexander Bingham (Edmond, Okla.), Angie Alexander Monroe (Memphis, Texas), and Donna Alexander Houchins (Buda, Texas).

Texas man was original Maverick

To ranchers, a maverick is an unbranded calf which, in earlier days before fences, could roam anywhere it pleased. To other people, a maverick is also a person, – a non-conformist who does pretty much as he pleases. In both cases, the term "maverick" derives from Samuel A. Maverick, a south Texas rancher and businessman in the 1800s.

Between 1844 and 1847, Samuel Maverick and his family lived near Decros Point on the Gulf Coast, and while there Sam accepted a heard of 400 cattle in lieu of $1,200 that was owed him. The Mavericks then moved to San Antonio, and Samuel, who had little interest in the cattle, left them behind after hiring another family to take care of them. The cattle received minimal care, and they were allowed to roam almost at will. It was not long before residents in the Decros Point area began referring to the unbranded calves as Maverick's calves.

In response to complaints from the Decros Point residents, Maverick sent his sons down to bring the herd to his new property in San Antonio. In their new environment, however, the cattle were again allowed to roam unchecked. Tiring of the whole operation and also wanting to aid the Rebel cause in the Civil War, Maverick sold his herd to the Confederate army. But in order to get the cattle, the Confederate purchasers had to hunt for them on the open range. Again, any unbranded calves encountered were considered to be "Maverick's calves," and they were taken by the Confederates. By 1857, the term "maverick" had become an established term in the San Antonio area referring to unbranded cattle.

Samuel Maverick, successful and wealthy from other business dealings, became a respected philanthropist in San Antonio, but in so doing, he was very much a non-conformist in his activities. For example, although wealthy, Maverick was a humanitarian as well as a philanthropist. He was a slave owner who refused to brand his slaves; to him they were human beings with feelings and passions just like his, and he treated them as such.

Because of his life-style, it was an easy next step to use the term "maverick" to describe people whose life-styles are somewhat different from accepted

The Clarendon Lions Club held its regular Tuesday noon meeting February 9, 2021, with Boss Lion Pro Tem David Dockery in charge.

We had 11 members, Sweetheart Aubrey Jaramillo, and one guest this week - Cindie Miller, guest of Lion Scarlet Estlack.

The Sweetheart reported on the public school and upcoming basketball games, and Lion Tex Buckhaults reported on the college, where the gym has been reopened for 25 percent occupancy, and all teams are on the road.

Lion John Howard reported on the county where COVID relief funds have come in are being dispersed and an election security grant is also being administered. Lion Howard also updated the club on COVID and said the state is not getting vaccines to rural areas but that infections seem to have slowed at the local clinic.

Lion Jacob Fangman reported on the city, where this week's regular meeting has been rescheduled for February 18.

SVDG Roger Estlack reported on the Council of Governors meeting last week in Kerrville and said the Texas Lions Camp will be offering family camps this summer instead of the traditional camps. The free camps will still focus on children with disabilities and diabetes. Registration is expected to open in a couple of weeks.

The Boss Lion encouraged everyone to check on shut-ins and pets this week with cold weather coming and also said everyone should let their water faucets drip to keep pipes from freezing.

There being no further business, we were adjourned to spread Lionism and good cheer throughout our fair county.

Lady Bronco JV finishes season with win over Memphis

The Lady Broncos junior varsity had a great season and finished it off in style with a 39-23 win over Memphis on the road.

The ladies set the stage for a good game early on as they played hard to get a good lead over the Cyclones in the first half of play. Courtlyn Conkin and Aliyah Weatherton finished in double figures with 10 each. The Lady Broncos were completely in charge offensively as they were able to add points to the board at will.

Memphis could do little against the stronger offense and struggled to break Clarendon's momentum. As a team they finished at 60 percent from the bonus line with Conkin hitting two for two.

"We had a great season," coach Kasey Bell said. "We worked hard in practice and came together as a team when it really counted. I'm proud of the girls' effort and look forward to next year."

Finishing off the scoring was Aleyah Weatherton with six, Bayleigh Bruce with four, Jayde Gribble with four, Avery English and Laney Gates with two each, and Eliza Rodriguez with one.

Arts Advocates Launch Arts Edu. Campaign

A group of arts education advocates today announced the formation of a statewide advocacy and grassroots campaign – the Texas Arts Education Campaign (TAEC) txartsed.org.

TAEC will educate Texas voters and lawmakers on the importance of fine arts (music, art, theatre, dance) in preparing K-12 students. It will highlight the workforce skills that students develop through fine arts participation and how these programs address the emotional and mental health concerns resulting from the pandemic.

This campaign will be led by Robert Floyd, Executive Director of the Texas Music Educators Association, and Dr. Joe Clark, President-elect of the Texas Music Administrators Conference (TMAC).

"The need for music and arts education is greater than ever social and emotional learning (SEL) is critical for the well-being of our students," said Floyd. "No other discipline provides both the connectivity eroded by this pandemic as well as the real-world skills that all jobs now require. Fine arts parents, boosters, and businesses know this. The legislature should know it, too," Floyd continued.

According to Clark, "In order to become lifelong learners, students need to develop the creative skills that fine arts programs provide, no matter the profession they ultimately pursue."
