Donley COVID-19 cases total 27 in August

A total of 27 cases of COVID-19 were confirmed in Donley County during the month of August, three times the 9 cases confirmed in July and almost seven times the total of four cases for June.

"Almost all of our new cases are people who are unvaccinated, and some have had COVID before," said Donley County Judge John Howard, MD. "If you are unvaccinated, you are at risk of contracting the disease, spreading the disease, and, under the right circumstances, winding up in the hospital."

Due to the Labor Day holiday, the number of active cases this week was not available from the Clarendon Family Medical Center, but the number of positive tests at the clinic rose by eight from last Tuesday to this Tuesday.

Total positive cases confirmed at the local clinic since the pandemic began last spring now stands at 413 with 1,713 total tests and 1300 negative tests. Again, these numbers only reflect tests conducted at the local clinic and do not include residents who test positive at facilities outside of Donley County.

Howard urges everyone to protect themselves from the virus, which he says can help people keep from catching and spreading the virus.

"My recommendation is that everyone get the vaccine," Howard said. "It is readily available and free."

The Moderna vaccine is available at no charge at the local clinic for everyone ages 18 and over. The Pfizer vaccine is available in Amarillo for children ages 12 and over.

According to the Texas Tribune this week, 29.6 percent of Donley County residents are vaccinated. That represents a total of 989 people, up from 938 as of August 3.

Homecoming candidates

Jentrye Bellar, McKenna Shadle, Brooke McDaniel, and Madison Smith were named as 2021 Clarendon High School Homecoming Candidates last week. One young lady will be crowned the Homecoming Queen Friday night at 6:30 before the game with Bovina in Bronco Stadium.

Jackson amendments good news for District 13

WASHINGTON — Congressman Ronny Jackson (R-Amarillo) championed Texas' defense priorities during the House Armed Services Committee's Fiscal Year 2022 National Defense Authorization Act (NDAA) markup last week.

The legislation passed out of committee by a vote of 57-2. The NDAA will be considered on the House Floor in the coming weeks.

"From serving in the Navy for 29 years to playing a role in military funding and policy decisions, participating in my first NDAA markup was a full circle experience," Jackson said. "Representing our district's defense interests in Congress is a top priority for me, so I am proud to announce that I led and advocated for many legislative victories that will keep our district at the forefront of the national defense conversation for generations to come.

"The full House will soon vote on the 61st consecutive NDAA, and I urge my colleagues to join me in support of this traditionally bipartisan legislation that will ensure America's military readiness and competitiveness on the global stage."

The bill includes several items considered "topline wins" by the congressman, including building on President Trump's work to ensure the US is the most dominant military force in the world, raising pay by 2.7 percent for both military servicemembers and the Department of Defense (DoD) civilian workforce, and authorizing $778 billion in total defense spending, an increase from President Biden's proposed $753 billion which was a budget cut from current spending levels and was rejected on a bipartisan basis.

The NDAA also continues to modernize the US nuclear triad, which is important as every nuclear weapon in the arsenal is assembled at Pantex in Amarillo, one of the most important facilities for national security given its critical mission. Jackson secured funding and legislative authority for the safety, security, and reliability of our nuclear stockpile, delivery systems, and infrastructure.

Pantex has a central role in any modernization effort regarding America's nuclear enterprise, and this NDAA will ensure that is the case for decades to come.

The bill also funds High Explosive Synthesis, Formulation, and Production Facility at Pantex. Jackson worked to include authorization for full, on-schedule funding for a new facility at Pantex to ensure the safety of the nuclear mission that is conducted there. This project will guarantee that Amarillo remains a critical part of the U.S. nuclear security enterprise.

Jackson also authored language to hold the National Nuclear Security Administration accountable for unnecessary delays in management and operation (M&O) contracts. Such delays cause uncertainty in employment status at Pantex, and Jackson's language will prevent this in the future.

And Jackson succeeded in authorizing funds for defense programs conducted in the Texas Panhandle. This funding will prevent layoffs and ensure more projects in the short term so that the 13th District of Texas is competitive for DoD contracts in the long term.

Jackson advocated for funding that was approved for the Army's pursuit of a Future Vertical Lift program to replace some of the Army's existing portfolio of rotary wing assets. He also authored language to ensure that Amarillo is a part of these efforts.

Also included in the FY22 NDAA is critical funding for upgrades and modernization efforts for the Air Force's CV-22 aircraft, specifically for Nacelle Improvements. Jackson authored language to accompany the funding to encourage other military departments to undertake similar efforts, specifically calling on the Secretary of the Navy to brief the House Armed Services

Navigating an impossible 18” distance

By Dr. Walter Wendler

(Editor’s Note: This column by Dr. Wendler was originally published December 11, 2011, in the Chicago Tribune. Slight modifications have been made for this printing.)

As we start the school year, amid a storm of moral relativism, fear and doubt, this may be as appropriate for the autumn and the start of a new year on campus as it was for Christmas, my original intent.

I stood beside a swimming pool in College Station, Texas, two or three times a week for two years, watching my sons flailing at the water, trying to shrink their time in a 25-yard spurt of breaststroke, backstroke, butterfly and free medley.

Next to me, week after week, stood a fellow who became my friend—Mike, an affable guy, ruddy complexion, committed to doing things well, a good scholar and a stunning example of an Irish Catholic. He watched his daughter while I watched my sons. As you might imagine, the nuances of the various swim strokes were quickly vacated for a more engaging chitchat.

Over time, we became friendly, and discussions we had over the din of the children learning and playing turned to topics friends can engage in that acquaintances can’t. Mike was penetrating in his analysis of the human condition.

He also cussed like a sailor and relentlessly and unreservedly voiced his disdain for the Catholic Church. Yet every week, he took his daughter from the swimming pool to catechism class. Never missed a beat.

One day I asked him about the apparent inconsistency between his complaints and his actions. He said without hesitation or apology that his daughter needed something to rebel against, and the Catholic Church was a perfect foil.

I started to object, but he was steadfast. He felt that even though he disagreed with the church’s stance on any number of topics, everyone needed some fixed point from which to navigate—a personal North Star.

I’m not sure he fully believed what he told me; I never could get that out of him despite my best efforts. I know he was sincere about instilling a moral standard, something seemingly sacrificed on an altar of scientific and social sophism, even an inflexible standard that might appear to have imperfections, distortions, defects, tears and stains.

Aside from the fact that my frame of reference was exactly the opposite of his, I agreed with his logic. Informed by my relationship with God, I have found in Christ an example that is perfect, clear, whole, consistent and faultless. I guess you could say I have a different personal star, the one that rose over Bethlehem—not College Station or Dublin, in the eyes of my good friend.

A few years ago, I had the opportunity to start a tradition that included bringing faculty, staff and friends of a university together to wish each other well during the holiday season. After an hour of visiting, a pianist accompanied hundreds of us, physicists and plumbers, teachers and trainers, groundskeepers and geologists, secretaries and scholars as we sang (I may be generous calling it that) Christmas songs. To this day, I think of that noise we made and hear music in my heart—you know—the one that is 18-inches from my head.

It was joyful.

It didn’t mean the same thing to everyone, but I think it meant something to everybody, even if only that we belong to something bigger than just ourselves.

The tree, gifts, families, friends and the other secular trappings touched common memories, and we all knew that we weren’t alone in the dark, cold night. We did not have to share a single meaning to find meaning in the shared experience.

But we could sing, drink coffee, eat cookies and acknowledge each other.

It seems the job of postmodernism is to separate head and heart. This 18-inch distance is wreaking havoc on our social order. Contrary to what some physicists and biologists think, science and ethics can coexist quite nicely. There should be room for this discussion.

Science is not “truth.” Science is a method for finding a particular kind of truth. Other methods let you find truths, and science cannot; truths can lead us to become who we need to be and help us build stronger communities.

When we only accept the icy standards of measurable phenomena, 18-inches becomes an impossible distance.

Thanks for your indulgences. It must be that time of year. I’m convinced that that day reduced the distance between the hearts and heads of hundreds of dedicated servants from 18-inches to zero, if only for an instant. In a sense, like the start of a new school year, even in the midst of public hand-wringing, trepidation and what seems to be abject fear.

Recalling the Miracle of San Miguel

They say that God sometimes works in mysterious ways. This was certainly true in the minds of the villagers of Socorro, Texas, who witnessed what they considered to be a miracle back in 1845.

Socorro, a sleepy Mexican settlement 18 miles southeast of present day El Paso, was settled in 1680 by Spanish refugees and Piro Indians fleeing from the Pueblo Revolt in New Mexico. The settlers gave the new community the same name as the New Mexico community from which they had come. Under the leadership of Governor Don Antonio de Otermin and Father Francisco de Ayeta, the residents founded a mission, and in 1691 they built a permanent adobe church which they dedicated to Nuestra Señora de la Limpia Concepción de los Piro del Socorro (Our Lady of the Immaculate Conception of the Piro of Socorro). In 1829, a flood destroyed the church, but they rebuilt it, completing the task in 1840.

The “miracle” occurred in 1845 when an oxcart carrying a statue of San Miguel (St. Michael) entered Socorro bound from Mexico City to Santa Fe. There had been recent heavy rains in the area, and the streets of Socorro were quagmires of mud. The wheels of the cart sank into the mud, and it was stuck. Although oxen were tugging in front and Indians were pushing in back, the cart refused to move. Despite the best efforts of animals and people, the cart was hopelessly stuck. To the villagers, this was a sign from God that He wanted the statue to stay in Socorro and to serve as a special blessing to the mission there. They uncrated the statue and carried it to the local mission. Thus San Miguel became the unofficial patron saint of Socorro, Texas, one of the oldest continuously occupied settlements in the Southwest. Visitors to the Mission church (now known as Socorro Mission la Purisima) can see the statue prominently located to the left of the altar.

An interesting sidelight about Socorro is that it was originally located to the south of the Rio Grande, but during the flood of 1829, the river changed its course, and Socorro is now north of the river. When the Rio Grande became the official dividing line between Texas and Mexico, the residents of Socorro found themselves to be new citizens of the United States rather than of Mexico.

What’s next for Fredericksburg girl?

In Italian, the word allora is an expression used for calming people. There is a 17-year-old girl who lives near Fredericksburg named Allora and she is definitely living up to her name. She sings, writes and loves to ride horses.

Allora Leonard of Willow City got her first name from her great great grandmother. I interviewed her just after her 17th birthday.

“It was great,” she told me. “I got to hear my new song on the radio for the first time and had a big birthday party. I really enjoyed it.”

Allora is a teenage sensation whose accomplishments rival those of someone much older. She is a singer and songwriter who is in the midst of a 150-performance schedule this year.

“I started performing when I was about 6 years old. I sang the national anthem at some of the rodeos where I used to compete. I would sing to my horses and the staff started hearing me and invited me to sing The Star Spangled Banner at the start of the rodeo and it’s just taken on a life of its own.”

Allora grew up on a ranch and enjoyed hunting rabbits and deer while developing an appreciation and love of the outdoors. She quickly took to riding horses.

“I started barrel racing in local rodeos when I was about 3 years old. I also got my Women’s Pro Rodeo Association card when I was 11.

She competes in reined cowhorse events where horses work a cow in an arena and perform maneuvers such as circling the cow and turning it in a required manner. Her favorite horse is a mare named Mama T.

“She and I were lucky enough to win the national title.”

Allora wrote her first song at age 12 and has written other things besides songs.

“I wrote a couple of children’s stories

by tumbleweed smith

books when I was 8 and 11. I think they’re on Amazon. One of them is titled The Adventures of Pagosa Pete and Jelly Bean. I’ve written a number of poems but never published them. I used to write for a barrel racing publication. Mostly I write songs. I’ve written 35.”

Allora has been home schooled since the first grade. She started singing in church and as she was growing up won several local and area talent contests. Her parents encouraged her to write and sing and her friends are extremely supportive. Although she never met him, she gained inspiration from her dad’s cousin who was a songwriter in Nashville and worked with some big stars.

In addition to guitar Allora plays bass and ukulele. She wears colorful, sparkling outfits when she needs to, but is most comfortable performing in jeans and a t-shirt. She sings country but adds the flavors of blues and soul to her music. She has just recorded her first song in Nashville. It’s called Old Soul Girl. She says it’s going great.

Enterprise columns are refreshing

Reading the Clarendon paper from front to back, even the want ads, is what I enjoy every week. Benjamin and Peggy’s columns are a refreshing diversion from the problems of today!

Peggy’s writing of her days in school brought back memories. I went to Lelia Lake High and also played basketball. In our dark blue suits, we were the Lilia Lake Blue Birds. And yes, you are one year older than me but still in the same generation. They say that I had diphtheria and was in an Amarillo hospital. One of Lelia Lake’s students had polio. But we survived.

Those were happy times even if we did not realize it. Clarendon is a wonderful town.

Things sure have changed since then, and I can’t really say for the better.

PUBLIC NOTICE

Explanatory Statements for the November 2, 2021 Constitutional Amendment Election

Proposition Number 1 (HJR 143)

HJR 143 proposes a constitutional amendment expanding the circumstances in which a professional sports team charitable foundation may conduct raffles to raise money for the foundation’s charitable purposes. The proposed amendment would allow professional sports team charitable foundations of organizations sanctioned by the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association or the Women’s Professional Rodeo Association to hold charitable raffles at rodeo events.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows: “The constitutional amendment authorizing the professional sports team charitable foundations of organizations sanctioned by the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association or the Women’s Professional Rodeo Association to conduct charitable raffles at rodeo venues.”

Proposition Number 2 (HJR 99)

HJR 99 proposes a constitutional amendment allowing the legislature to authorize a county to issue bonds or notes to finance the development or redevelopment of an unproductive, underdeveloped, or blighted area within the county and to pledge for repayment of those bonds or notes increases in property tax revenues imposed on property in the area by the county. The Texas Constitution gives the legislature the power to authorize an incorporated city or town to issue such bonds or notes but does not expressly give the legislature the power to grant that same authority to counties. The proposed amendment also provides that a county that issues bonds or notes for transportation improvements may not pledge for the repayment of those bonds or notes more than 65 percent of the increases in ad valorem tax revenues each year, and a county may not use proceeds from the bonds or notes to finance the construction, operation, maintenance, or acquisition of rights-of-way of a toll road.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows: “The constitutional amendment authorizing a county to finance the development or redevelopment of transportation or infrastructure in unproductive, underdeveloped, or blighted areas in the county.”

Proposition Number 3 (SJR 27)

SJR 27 proposes a constitutional amendment barring the State of Texas or a political subdivision from enacting, adopting, or issuing a statute, order, proclamation, decision, or rule that prohibits or limits religious services. The proposed amendment would apply to religious services, including those conducted in churches, congregations, and places of worship, in the state by a religious organization established to support and serve the propagation of a sincerely held religious belief.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows: “The constitutional amendment to prohibit this state or a political subdivision of this state from prohibiting or limiting religious services of religious organizations.”

Proposition Number 4 (SJR 47)

SJR 47 proposes a constitutional amendment changing certain eligibility requirements for a justice of the Supreme Court, a judge of the Court of Criminal Appeals, a justice of a court of appeals, and a district judge. The proposed amendment provides that a person is eligible to serve on the Supreme Court if the person, among other qualifications, is licensed to practice law in Texas; is a resident of Texas at the time of election; has been either a practicing lawyer licensed in Texas for at least ten years or a practicing lawyer licensed in Texas and a judge of a state court or county court established by the legislature for a combined total of at least ten years; and during that time has not had the person’s license to practice law revoked, suspended, or subject to a probated suspension. The same eligibility requirements would apply to a judge of the Court of Criminal Appeals and to a justice of a court of appeals. The proposed amendment further provides that to be eligible for appointment or election as a district judge, a person must be a resident of Texas; be licensed to practice law in Texas; and have been a practicing lawyer or a judge of a court in Texas, or both combined, for eight years preceding the person’s election, during which time the person’s license to practice law has not been revoked, suspended, or subject to a probated suspension.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows: “The constitutional amendment changing the eligibility requirements for a justice of the supreme court, a judge of the court of criminal appeals, a justice of a court of appeals, and a district judge.”

Proposition Number 5 (HJR 165)

HJR 165 proposes a constitutional amendment allowing the State Commission on Judicial Conduct (SCJC) to accept complaints or reports, conduct investigations, and take any other authorized action with respect to a candidate for a state judicial office. Currently, the Texas Constitution only permits the SCJC to take such actions as to persons holding a judicial office.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows: “The constitutional amendment providing additional powers to the State Commission on Judicial Conduct with respect to candidates for judicial office.”

Proposition Number 6 (SJR 19)

SJR 19 proposes a constitutional amendment establishing that residents of certain facilities have the right to designate an essential caregiver with whom the facility may not prohibit in-person visitation. The proposed amendment would apply to a nursing facility, assisted living facility, intermediate care facility for individuals with an intellectual disability, residence providing home and community-based services, or state supported living center. The proposed amendment also would authorize the legislature to provide guidelines for these facilities to follow in establishing essential caregiver visitation policies and procedures.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows: “The constitutional amendment establishing a right for residents of certain facilities to designate an essential caregiver for in-person visitation.”

Proposition Number 7 (HJR 125)

HJR 125 proposes a constitutional amendment permitting a person who is 55 years of age or older at the time of death of their spouse who is receiving a limitation on school district property taxes on their residence homestead on the basis of a disability to continue receiving the limitation while the property remains the surviving spouse’s residence homestead.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows: “The constitutional amendment to allow the surviving spouse of a person who is disabled to receive a limitation on the school district ad valorem taxes on the spouse’s residence homestead if the spouse is 55 years of age or older at the time of the person’s death.”

Proposition Number 8 (SJR 35)

SJR 35 proposes a constitutional amendment authorizing the legislature to exempt from ad valorem taxation all or part of the market value of the residence homestead of the surviving spouse of a member of the United States armed services who is killed or fatally injured in the line of duty. The Texas Constitution provides a property tax exemption to the surviving spouse of a member of the armed services who is killed in action, but the current exemption does not include members of the military who die during their service due to injuries sustained that are not combat-related.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows: “The constitutional amendment authorizing the legislature to provide for an exemption from ad valorem taxation of all or part of the market value of the residence homestead of the surviving spouse of a member of the armed services of the United States who is killed or fatally injured in the line of duty.”

9/11: As America Watched

As each September comes, I am transported back to 2001, the day America watched as we were under attack. I offer a reprint of "While America Watched." I can't do any better.

I poured my first cup of coffee and strolled outside toward the patio to enjoy it, looking at the beautiful blue sky with a hint of fall in the air that Tuesday, September 11, 2001. My husband, Jim, frantically called me back inside and pointed to the television tuned to the Today Show with Katie Couric and Matt Lauer. The cameras of NBC were pointed at the Twin Towers in New York City black smoke billowing from one tower, and as we watched a large passenger airplane crashed into the middle of the second tower which immediately caught fire.

The newscasters were speechless. This was unbelievable, the horror of the event unfolding in front of millions of Americans. We were under attack!

We watched as people, unable to face certain death by fire, chose to jump, their bodies tumbling in air from the Towers. We watched the South Tower collapse followed closely by the North Tower, a huge cloud of smoke and debris coming down the street with people running to escape the cloud. We watched people emerge from the cloud, unrecognizable, covered with ash but alive.

Our brains still unable to process the event, suddenly the cameras were on Washington, DC, the Pentagon had been hit by a plane and the most secure building in the world was in flames. It was soon announced a fourth passenger plane headed for California was not responding and appeared headed toward Washington, DC. Suddenly it disappeared somewhere over Pennsylvania. On the road with the Bronco Band

Last Friday, I got to go on my first away game with the Bronco Band. Band is something that I really enjoy and something I get to do with my friends.

When we got there, we just got to hangout and eat dinner before starting our warmups. We did some tuning, and then when the game started, we got to play.

At that point, we hadn't learned our marching for our halftime show, but we knew the music.

We went out onto the field and played our music, and then we marched off playing the Fight Song. It was really fun.

Beforehand, I thought that I wasn't going to do good, and I was really nervous. But when I got out on the field, with my friends, it was fun, and I wasn't nervous at all. We finished playing the rest of the game then we got to ride home and

Committee on these upgrades. This work will be conducted in Amarillo.

"Representative Jackson has continually shown strong support for Amarillo's defense programs and their positive impact on our local economy," Amarillo Mayor Ginger Nelson said. "His work here includes full, on-schedule funding for a new facility at Pantex, ensuring employees at Pantex have stability and assurances anytime there is a transition of their M&O contract, and the modernization of rotary aircraft across the Department of Defense. These projects make certain that work is coming to Amarillo now and for years to come. I am grateful to him for ensuring that Amarillo's contribution to the defense of our great nation is both recognized and secure."

Amarillo Chamber of Commerce President and CEO Jason Harrison said Jackson's efforts will help to grow and build the local economy.

"We want to thank Congressman Jackson for his continued support of Amarillo by championing for our entire business community, but specifically for some of our largest employers and partners like Pantex and Bell that are not only critical to the Panhandle's workforce, but also the security of the country as a whole," Harrison said. "It is through his hard work that we are able to continue to grow and build a successful community for everyone."

Jackson has also worked on several individual bills in addition to the NDAA to benefit the Wichita Falls area and support Sheppard Air Force Base.

Jackson amendments to the NDAA also address key national security concerns. In Afghanistan, where Americans are now concerned that President Biden will continue to utilize American resources to support the Taliban, Jackson authored an amendment to prohibit the transport of currency or any item of value to the Taliban. This amendment was adopted unanimously.

Jackson also authored language to help provide oversight of the Department of Defense when withdrawing troops from a country by women aboard had prevented the crash into the capital.

We watched as President Bush sat in a first grade classroom in Florida, his press secretary whispering in his ear. He carried on the program, thanked them, and left to emerge into a different world.

What was happening? Was this the end? Jim and I sat huddled in front of the television, the children all called, we cried. Prayer vigils were held, and so much blood was donated the Red Cross had to stop donations.

American flags were flying, congress stood on the steps of the Capital and sang, "God Bless America." We were a country united.

It was a day that changed America forever, a day I won't forget.

That day 2,977 died in the attacks and more than 6,000 were injured. People are battling cancer caused by toxic fumes.

Will I ever forget? No, I watched it unfold and prayed, and 20 years later I watch and pray. God Bless America.

on the way home we sang songs and talked.

On Saturday, my family and I went to my cousin Nathan's Eagle Scout banquet. Which is a celebration of a scout reaching the final rank of the Eagle scout. Nathan along with Phineas, Jacob, and Steven got their Eagle. We got to hear all of their speeches, and they got to award a person as their mentor. Congratulations, guys!

Emergency personnel responded to a single-vehicle accident east of Clarendon on US 287 on the afternoon of August 24. DPS Trooper Lynn Mays said Brian Spagnola of Los Lunas, New Mexico, fell asleep at the wheel, ran off the road, and rolled his vehicle. Spagnola was not injured in the accident thanks to the air bags in his car and the seat belt he was wearing, Mays said.

Avoid infections from backyard poultry

For those with backyard poultry, like chickens or ducks, a Texas A&M AgriLife expert encourages taking precautions against salmonella exposure as cases spike across the U.S.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reported an uptick in salmonella cases, 672, with 157 hospitalizations and two deaths in 47 states, including 12 cases in Texas. There have been 198 new cases since June 24.

One in four cases involved children under age 5, according to the report.

Craig Coufal, Ph.D., Texas A&M AgriLife Extension Service poultry specialist and associate professor in the Texas A&M College of Agriculture and Life Sciences Department of Poultry Science, Bryan-College Station, said a recent increase in salmonella cases serves as a reminder that people should take simple sanitation precautions after visiting or cleaning their chicken coop or even simply handling the birds, eggs and meat.

“Some outbreaks are worse than others, but hundreds of infections happen every year,” he said. “Many people, especially new producers who are unfamiliar with poultry, don’t take simple steps to prevent exposure.”

Getting salmonella from backyard chickens

The popularity of backyard chicken flocks has increased over the last several years, Coufal said. The rising number of salmonella outbreaks shows there is continued need for public education about ways to avoid exposure through basic hygiene.

The true number of sick people in any salmonella outbreak is likely much higher than reported because many people recover without medical care and are not tested, according to the report. Among 423 people interviewed, 292, or 69 percent, reported contact with backyard poultry before getting sick.

Most chickens, ducks and turkeys carry some form of the more than 2,000 types of salmonella, Coufal said. It’s a naturally occurring part of their microbial flora. Birds are carriers so they typically don’t show signs of the bacteria.

Coufal said unusually high number of infections in 2020 likely correlated with the increased number of new backyard flocks established during the pandemic.

The CDC reported more than 1,700 cases, including one death, in 2020 and more than 1,100 cases in 2019, including two deaths.

More than 30 percent of those cases resulted in hospitalizations.

“The numbers can fluctuate, but every infection is preventable as long as people are mindful when they handle the birds or fresh eggs and meat,” he said.

Prevent salmonella with smarts, soap and warm water

Despite salmonella’s presence, residents with backyard chicken flocks can greatly reduce the risk of infection by taking simple precautions, Coufal said. Petting or holding live birds, handling farm fresh eggs or working in areas frequented by birds, such as the coop, can expose people to salmonella.

Coufal said toddlers should never be allowed to handle poultry because of the likelihood of exposure. And adults and children should never kiss a chicken or baby chick or duckling.

“The number of children under age 5 being infected always jumps out at me,” he said. “But the data makes sense because parents think it is cute for the kids to hold or pet the birds, but then the child puts their fingers in their mouth and are potentially infected. It’s playing with fire.”

Coufal said the key to avoiding exposure is preventative hygiene, including hand washing with water as warm as you can tolerate and preventing salmonella from entering the home.

Routine precautions like removing clothes worn in the coop or while handling birds, especially shoes, before entering the home can also reduce chances of exposure, he said.

Fresh eggs should be washed thoroughly with warm, running water, then dried with paper or cloth towels that will not come in contact with your hands or kitchen surfaces before storing in the refrigerator. Sanitizing wipes are also a good option.

How to prevent and treat salmonella in poultry

Practicing good hygiene at the coop can also help protect backyard flocks from exposure to salmonella and other bacteria and viruses, Coufal said. Poultry producers should not share equipment or materials with other producers. If sharing equipment, such as a coop, is necessary, it should be cleaned thoroughly and sanitized with a bleach-based cleaner.

Similarly, visiting neighboring poultry production areas or neighbor’s coops could also lead to transfer of pathogens if precautions, such as changing shoes or clothes, are not taken to prevent transmission, he said.

Coufal also recommends backyard producers purchase their chicks, ducklings and other fowl from reputable sources.

“When you buy birds at a flea market or in the want ads, you really don’t know where they are coming from,” he said. “There are no assurances of testing for diseases or the health status of the bird.”

Coufal recommends purchasing birds from hatcheries or breeders certified through the National Poultry Improvement Plan, NPIP. NPIP certification ensures birds are from healthy breeder flocks tested for severe diseases.

However, NPIP certification does not guarantee birds are completely free of salmonella.

Salmonella symptoms Handling poultry is not the only way salmonella is spread, but according to the CDC, it is the most likely way to be exposed. Symptoms including fever, stomach cramps and diarrhea typically emerge six hours to six days after exposure Illness typically lasts up to a week, and most people recover without treatment. But salmonella infections can spread to the intestine and bloodstream in severe cases that require hospitalization.

Children under the age of 5 and older adults or those with compromised immune systems may be more susceptible to salmonella infections, according to the CDC.

“Salmonella recalls on poultry products or in lettuce, tomatoes or peaches pop up from time to time, and that’s due to testing requirements,” he said. “Testing in backyard flocks is not prevalent, so again the focus needs to be on hygiene and exposure prevention, especially for those with weaker immune systems.”

Owls beat Silvertown 39-37

The Hedley Owls defeated Silvertown on the road last Friday, 39-37.

Elijah Booth and Izaik Weatherhead led the scoring for Hedley, finding the endzone twice each. Elijah caught the ball eight times for 124 total yards. Weatherhead had five carries on passes for 66 yards and one touchdown rushed for 15 yards on ten carries and one touchdown.

Also receiving passes and scoring once was Hayden Alston with four carries for 49 yards.

Cody Bond also caught a pass and gained seven yards, while Nick Clark caught one and picked up a yard.

Nick Clark led Hedley in rushing with ten carries, 39 total yards, and one touchdown. Braden Bond rushed for two yards, and Cody Bond rushed for three yards.

Josh Booth was 19 for 28 with his passes resulting in 257 total yards gained with four touchdowns and had one interception.

“We were very proud of the boys and the effort they gave,” Head Coach Eric Miller said. “We were able to sneak out a win at the end. Adversity creates character, and these boys showed a lot of character all night long.”

The Owls will be on the road again this Friday night as they take on Vernon Northside. Game time is 7:30 p.m.

Broncos bring home another win over Ralls

By Sandy Anderberg

The Broncos have begun their season with two wins, the second of which came last Friday night in Ralls with the Broncos' hard-fought win over the Jackrabbits 12-8.

The Broncos set up a successful offense and finished with 204 total yards. Quarterback Brock Hatley accounted for 35 of those yards through the air after combining with Lamarus Penigar for 22 yards and Josiah Howard for 13 yards.

The yards on the ground came fairly easy for the Bronco backfield. Led by Penigar, who posted 73 yards rushing on 10 carries, the Broncos used their quickness to get by the Jackrabbits to find the end-zone twice in the 48 minutes. Jordan Herndon made one touchdown and went 58 yards on 14 carries, while Hatley posted the other TD and carried the ball five times for 12 yards. Jmaury Davis carried seven times for 19 yards, and Jordan Evans posted seven yards on two carries.

"Our defense played great," head coach Clint Conkin said. "We had several guys making tackles." Leading the way was Koyt Tucek who finished with 11 tackles, one QB sack, one caused fumble, and one fumble recovery. Lyric Smith posted 10 tackles, and Davis had nine tackles and two sacks. Hatley turned in six tackles and one sack, and Rhett Caison ended the game with six tackles. Herndon came in with eight tackles, and Evan had eight.

The Broncos will play Bovina Friday night in Bronco Stadium for the Homecoming game beginning at 7:00 p.m.

The junior varsity Broncos moved things around after their first game and shut out Ralls at home 24-0 on Thursday. Grant Haynes, Anthony Brown, and Tommy Tabor found the end zone for the Broncos. The JV Broncos will travel to Bovina on Thursday, September 9.

On Thursday, Sept. 29 at 9 p.m. officers responded to a complaint about loud noises in a small suburban kitchen.

On Friday, Mr. James Smith, owner of the home, explained what had happened.
"There was a rustling noise in the kitchen. I got up to check on it and, to my surprise, one of the dishes was running away with a spoon," he said.
Eyewitnesses included forks and knives. Most occupants, except the kitchen sink, claimed to have been thrilled by the daring escape.

Abbott extends SNAP benefits

Governor Greg Abbott today announced that the Texas Health and Human Services Commission (HHSC) is providing approximately $286 million in emergency Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP) food benefits for the month of September as the state continues its response to the COVID-19 pandemic.

“Millions of Texans have looked to Emergency SNAP benefits to keep food at home throughout the pandemic, and I am happy to work alongside HHSC to continue providing this critical resource to those who need it,” said Governor Abbott. “Thank you to HHSC and USDA for continuing to work together to secure these benefits for Texas families.”

“As we continue to navigate through the pandemic, we are pleased to provide this additional support to ensure Texans will be able to keep food on their table for themselves and their families,” said Texas HHS Access and Eligibility Services Deputy Executive Commissioner Wayne Salter.

HHSC received federal approval from the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) to extend the maximum, allowable amount of SNAP benefits to recipients based on family size, and all SNAP households will receive a minimum of $95 in emergency allotments.

The emergency September allotments are in addition to the more than $3.2 billion in benefits previously provided to Texans since April 2020.

Recipients will also continue to receive a 15 percent increase in their total benefits, which will continue monthly until September 2021. This 15 percent increase and the additional emergency allotment amount should appear in recipients’ accounts by September 30.

Administered by HHSC, SNAP is a federal program that provides food assistance to approximately 1.4 million eligible low-income families and individuals in Texas. Texans in need can apply for benefits, including SNAP and Medicaid, at Your-TexasBenefits.com or use the Your Texas Benefits mobile app to manage their benefits.
