The Russian War on Ukraine

As I watched the news last night of Russia's invasion of Ukraine, it scared me as it probably has scared many of you wondering what is going to happen next. Not that this helps the larger picture, but I thought I would write about the events to give a bit of historical perspective.

This week started with the invasion of two Ukrainian territories by Russian forces. Putin's justification is that these two sections broke away from Ukraine in 2014 and have been fighting for freedom. Putin claims only to be recognizing their independence and sending in troops for their protection. He is also claiming that, in fact, Ukraine should not be seen as a sovereign nation but is actually part of Russia and the land was stolen from Russia. Given this, Putin claims Russia has the right to reclaim its former lands and people. While some of his claims have validity, historically speaking, this is not the first time a tyrannical leader has used this approach of reunit- speaking ing his people to justify

invasion and conquest. Like all good villains, Putin is not telling a complete lie. He has mingled in some truths to justify and confuse his actions. Where Putin has some justification is this, and I only have room for a very short version. In the Ninth Century, Kyiv, now the capital of Ukraine, was once the capital of the first Slavic state, Kyvian Rusin, that today covers both Russia and Ukraine. This means that Russians have always considered Kyiv as their nation's birthplace. The lands that are Ukraine were then fought over for the next century until 1793 when it was brought into the Russian Empire. Trying to control this new territory, the Czar outlawed speaking Ukrainian but really could only enforce his rulings over the eastern half. So Eastern Ukraine, where Luhansk and Donetsk are located, became very much Russian in both language and Orthodox Christianity while Western Ukraine still tried to retain its language and Catholicism.

During WWI when the new Bolshevik Russian government came to power and signed a treaty with the Central Powers (Germany) to pull out of the war, it agreed to grant Ukraine independence. However, when Germany lost the war in 1918, the Russians reneged on their agreement. There were some Ukraine nationalist movements, especially in the west, but those were crushed by the Russians. By 1922 Ukraine was completely under the control of Russia and the Russian language was enforced.

Ukraine emerged as an independent nation in 1994 with the breakup of the Soviet Union, but the nation has remained somewhat split as the West looked more to Europe and the European Union, while the East remained tied to the Russian Federation. So, the two regions in question, Luhansk and Donetsk, have actually been under the control of Russian-backed separatists since 2014 and consider themselves independent. They have erected statues of Lenin, follow the Russian constitution, and are run by small tyrannical leaders. It is only now that Russia has officially recognized them as independent and moved in troops.

The question now is: will Putin stay put? His actions do not seem to suggest this. The borders of these regions historically have been larger and other areas of eastern Ukraine support Russia. If Putin is not stopped now, he may want to start adding other parts of Ukraine loyal to Russia. I am not sure of Putin's knowledge of history. He may be thinking his plan of consolidating all like-minded peoples into one nation as his own. However, whether he knows it or not, he is simply following the plan of one of Russia's worst enemies, Nazi Germany. When Hitler took over Germany, one of his top priorities was reestablishing German pride to get popular support. One way he did this was to reclaim lost German land taken from them after WWI and, thus, bring all the German-speaking people back into the fold. After World War I ended, Germany lost territory to Poland, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, and France. Then in 1936, Germany invaded the Rhineland, claiming the land belonged to Germany. Neither France nor England wanted to engage Hitler so instead they did nothing, a policy that became known as appeasement, a policy that only emboldened Hitler. Hitler then invaded Czechoslovakia and Austria under the same pretext. There was a Nazi Party in Austria that even welcomed Hitler, not unlike the Russian rebel groups in the Ukraine. Despite both these aggressive moves, England and France continued their policy of diplomacy and appeasement. It was not until Germany's invasion of Poland that the other powers declared war, but by then Hitler was already too powerful to stop. The point of all this rambling is that the situation in Ukraine is complicated. I am in no way agreeing with Putin or Hitler. Putin is an evil tyrant who needs to be stopped. However, we can't ignore the history and history reminds us that German-speaking people from a previous time, who found themselves in a similar situation, considered themselves German and supported the take-over from another country. Today, some Ukrainians support Putin. At the same time, some evidence suggests that some of the support in each case was manufactured from the outside by both dictators. It is also important to remember that most Ukrainians want independence and will fight for their freedom. The other complicated issue is appeasement. Most believe that if England had stopped Hitler when he first got started, the world would have avoided WWII. England only moved on Hitler when Churchill took over and then it was too late. I am by no means saying we should go to war over Ukraine, only that history shows what could happen if tyrants are not stopped. President Biden has some important decisions to make in the coming weeks and hopefully he understands that he can learn from what has happened before.

Were the pigs worth that much?

his linens,

In 1840, the Republic of Texas was hoping to borrow 35,000,000 francs from France until some marauding pigs initiated events that put an end to the negotiations.

Count Alphonse de Saligny came to Texas in 1839 as France's representative to the new Republic. Although he saw the economic potential of this new country, Saligny did not relate well with the rough and crude ways of the frontiersmen with whom he was now associating. And he was especially bothered by a group of pigs belonging to an Austin innkeeper, Richard Bullock.

Although the grounds and gardens of the French embassy were fenced, the pigs frequently forced their way onto the property to eat the corn reserved for the horses. Saligny reported that on one occasion, a dozen pigs burst into the stable and frightened eight horses that completely wrecked the stable in their tales of the old west by george u. hubbard his papers. Saligny further complained that his servants spent two hours every morning repairing the fence and that 140 pounds of nails had thus far been used. But still, the pigs worked their way in.

Finally in desperation, Saligny ordered one of his servants to kill some of the pigs. Upon finding his slain pigs, Bullock became so angered that he physically attacked the servant and pounded him severely with his fists. To Saligny, such an act toward the Charge d'affaires of the King of France and his servants was an "odious violation of the law of nations," and he demanded that Bullock be punished consistently with "the enormity of the offense."

Bullock was arrested and then released on bond, claiming that Saligny should have built a better fence. This hardly satisfied Saligny, and after his further complaints reached the Texas Secretary of State, Bullock was rearrested but again released. Because of his own failure to pay some past debts and the passing of bogus promissory notes, Saligny did not have public opinion on his side.

All this could have passed as a humorous set of occurrences except for one thing. Saligny's brother-in-law was the French Minister of Finance. The loan of 35,000,000 francs that Texas sought was not granted.

The story that's as good as it gets

The former Shelley Cockes – who turned down a "Coke date" offer as a college freshman from the same guy she married a few days after graduation - could not have imagined the "roller coaster" experiences to come during the next three decades.

Now, she's counting the days before leaving a camper trailer where she and her husband, Robert White, have abided for more than 200 days.

Their plight has nothing to do with Krum ISD, where he is high school principal and she's an elementary school music teacher. A camper trailer twenty feet long and seven feet wide is a bit too cozy, however, for a couple and their dog.... ****

Soon, they'll add 2,560 more square feet when they move into their new home. The Whites will have four bedrooms, and kin can make overnight visits again!

Forgive their giddiness about this move. Their three children - daughters Courtney and Addison and son Jaret who recently married - all living in other states. Now they can visit their parents again, as can Shelley's mom and Robert's parents. And their beloved dog, a Vizsla named Jersey, won't feel, uh, so confined.

The couple will have a king-size bed again. Currently, neither Robert nor Shelley can "get up on the wrong side of the bed." It takes considerable maneuvering to exit the bed in any manner....

They mustered even more than "old college tries" to find a home, unsuccessfully bidding a dozen times on homes selling for $10,000-$50,000 above asking prices. That's why they purchased the trailer last July. They expected to "make do" for four to six weeks until an acceptable home could be found in a community the idle where 12,000 new homes are american expected to be by don newbury built in the next decade.

The "make do" arrangement has spanned eight months. They have persevered. Always on the lookout, they walked through a half-finished home in December.

This was the ONE, they believed. They prayed, with their "amen" followed by the slamming of a bedroom door on a day when no breezes blew. Sure enough, their bid was successful and their prayers were answered....

Soon, their "extreme closeness" will be loosened.

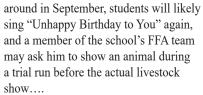

They will no longer trek to the washateria weekly, despite their gratefulness for seeing the world pass them by there.

The camper will be used recreationally in the future. Robert is big on kayak fishing, particularly when their 44-pound dog comes along....

Robert is a favorite of Krum High School students, who have learned that he can "take teases," and dish'em out as well. They've heard him solemnly answer "homeless" when asked where he and Shelley live.

Years ago in Lampasas, he drove a VW into a school building as a prop for an in-service program.

When his fifty-fifth birthday comes

This spring, a freshman girl asked him to show her 200-pound hog named Ginger.

Robert tried to cast an appearance of "know-how" about farm animals, but he failed.

When the judge asked him the location of the ham, Robert answered, "Usually next to the turkey and dressing."... *****

Like his dad, Arlen White of San Angelo, Robert started out teaching and coaching.

He and Shelley love what they do, and they believe deeply in students.

Krum is their thirteenth stop and hopefully, their final one....

Robert's mom, Dolores, understands the "for better, for worse" vow, too. She's been alongside Arlen during his careers in education and public service. He was even elected Crane County Judge!

When they retired to San Angelo, Arlen heard about a basketball coaching job at Cornerstone Christian School. At age 78, he was hired, serving four years before health issues set in.

I can't think of a better example of an acorn falling close to the tree. The Whites are as good as it gets.... ****

SWEPCO's filing reflects a refund of $9.75 million as agreed to in the Unanimous Stipulation and Agreement (Settlement Agreement) of the parties to and as directed by Ordering Paragraph No. 3 of the final order in Docket No. 50997.

SWEPCO proposes that its retail customers be credited the refund through factors to be applied to actual kWh usage of each customer during the month of April 2022. Transmission voltage level, seasonal agricultural, Large Lighting and Power Substation (LLP), and As-Available Standby (AAS) customers will receive a specific dollar amount refund agreed to in the Settlement Agreement approved by the Commission in Docket No. 50997. These refund amounts will be applied as a one-time bill credit also during the month of April 2022.

The effect of the refund on customer bills will vary depending on the rate schedule under which they take service. Based on rates currently in effect, SWEPCO estimates that under its proposed refund, a residential customer using 1,000 kWh would see a decrease of $23.12, or 24.59%, during the refund month of April 2022 on his/her total electric bill if the proposed refund is approved.

How "WE HAVE NOTHING TO EAT"

became "DAD, CAN I BORROW THE CONVERTIBLE?"

Millions of Americans can trace their roots back to an ancestor who came to the new world with a hunger. Metaphorically that with a little hard work, perseverance and good old fashioned gumption, they could achieve a quality of life far beyond what they had known before. They were free to live their own lives and prosper by their own hands, In fact, perhaps the greatest lestament to the

is that, simply by working hard and educating their children,

speaking, it was a desire for freedom, But more often than not, this noble goal was directly tied to a powerful physical need for a good, hot meal, They came from countries around the globe, yet their stories were remarkably similar, They had left behind hard times, oppression and just about everyone they knew and loved to seek out.

a better life in the land of opportunity. And while it wasn't necessarily easy, they found the world's tired, poor and hungry have become the nation with the highest standard of living on earth. To learn more,
