Fierro not guilty in double homicide

The man accused of a 2019 double murder in Howardwick was found not guilty by reason of insanity last week.

Jarvis Fierro, 33, of Amarillo had been charged with capital murder for shooting his own brother, James Fierro, and his brother's girlfriend, Candice Garrett.

District Attorney Luke Inman, along with Assistant District Attorney Harley Caudle, prosecuted the case for the State of Texas, with the Honorable Judge Stuart Messer presiding with the court meeting in Memphis last Thursday, April 21.

Fierro and Garrett were killed by multiple gunshot wounds, at their home in Howardwick late on the evening of February 18, 2019. An investigation by the Donley County Sheriff's Office began immediately after receiving a 911 call from one of the four children in the home where the murders took place.

During last week's hearing, Messer stated that it is hard to imagine what the children went through that night in their house, and what they continue to suffer as a result of Jarvis Fierro's actions.

The Texas Ranger's Division was also utilized to find who was responsible for the murders, arriving at the crime scene within an hour of receiving a request for assistance from the Donley County Sheriff's Office.

After an intensive investigation, Texas Ranger Scott Swick and Donley County Sheriff Butch Blackburn arrested Fierro on February 22, 2019, for the two murders. Fierro has been in Donley County custody since that date.

According to the District Attorney's Office, law enforcement acted swiftly in identifying and arresting the defendant in less than 96 hours from the murders.

An electronic search warrant obtained by Swick determined the defendant was in proximity of victims' home at the time of the crime, which in turn led to all the other pieces falling in place rapidly, according to court documents.

To stand trial for any criminal offense, the defendant must be competent to stand trial and found to be sane at the time of the offense, said Inman.

Fierro was initially found incompetent to stand trial in December of 2019, according to court documents.

"Mental disease, defect and illness plays a major role in our everyday job duties and responsibilities as prosecutors," said Inman. "Defendants raise these types of defenses all the time and there are protocols that the State must follow to seek the fair administration of justice."

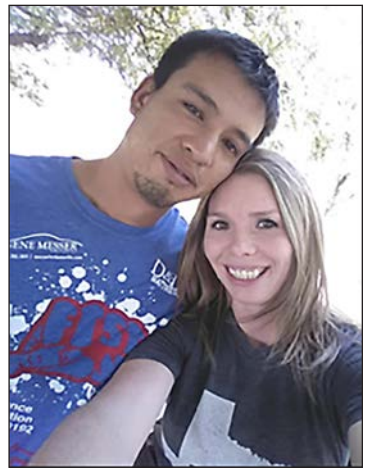

Fierro was ordered to the maximum-security state hospital in Vernon, Texas for possible competency restoration, according to court documents.

After Fierro's competency was restored in March, an insanity examination was performed by two court-appointed psychiatrists.

Both psychiatrists concluded

Jarvis Fierro

James Fierro & Candice Garrett

that Fierro was schizophrenic at the time of the murders, and continues to be so today, according to court documents.

The insanity defense is an affirmative defense that must be proven by the defendant, said Inman.

According to court documents, Fierro was experiencing severe mental delusions at the time the murders took place.

"Once someone is found insane at the time of the offense, there are very strict guidelines and procedures that the court must follow," said Inman. "One specific section in the Texas code of criminal procedure, Chapter 46C, applies in all criminal proceedings when someone is deemed insane. The procedure is the same in a capital murder case, all the

Comptroller asks Texans for broadband input Clarendon representatives meet with Internet providers

As Comptroller Glenn Hegar wraps up his Texas Broadband Listening Tour, the agency is reminding Texans to share their thoughts about broadband services in their communities.

Texas residents input can be shared via this online survey at www.surveymonkey.com/r/Texas-BDO-2022 or by calling 833-3-TEXBDO (839236).

The comptroller's tour is already producing new possibilities for improved broadband access in the City of Clarendon.

Following the comptroller's March meeting in Amarillo, representatives the Clarendon Economic Development Corporation, the City of Clarendon, and Clarendon College have met with two providers interested in bringing faster Internet services to the community.

Both companies are well established in the region and are developing informal proposals which will be presented to the city council in the near future.

The comptroller's tour, which began March 1, is taking Hegar to a dozen communities across the state, helping Comptroller Hegar collect input from Texans to develop the state's first broadband plan.

The broadband plan is due to the state Legislature by June 15, so it is urgent that Texans respond soon to ensure their feedback can be included.

"I find that the key to good communication is to listen more than you talk, and so these townhalls have helped us hear directly from Texans," Hegar said. "So far, the sentiment is consistent — Slow data speed, unreliable access, cost and coordination are critical areas of concern."

The BDO was established during the regular session of the 87th Legislature to award grants, low-interest loans and other financial incentives to expand access to broadband service across the state.

For more information about the Broadband Development Office, go visit the Texas Comptroller's website.

Philanthropy in higher education

By Walter Wendler and Todd W. Rasberry

Higher educational giving is exceeded only by giving to faith-based organizations in our nation. Americans gave $471.44 billion to charitable causes in 2020. Religious giving topped the list with 28% of total giving ($131.08 billion), followed by education with 15% of total giving ($71.34 billion). More impressive is that individuals gave $324.10 billion of the total given in 2020, representing 68.7% of all philanthropic gifts.

Americans are generous. In fact, more generous than any other nation. Regarding the propensity to demonstrate charity toward other people (2009 – 2018), the US tops the list, followed by Myanmar, New Zealand, Australia and Ireland.

Philanthropic giving to private universities is nothing new. The Reverend John Harvard did not invent philanthropy, although his early gift in 1636, which now bears his name, initiated a 400-year trend of giving that led to a fundraising culture that continues to transform higher education. You might say his gift was the precursor of what is now a professional vocation on every campus in this country. The value of his bequest of 300 book titles in 400 volumes to the library was intended to empower Harvard to train ministers of the gospel of Jesus Christ. Best estimates suggest that his gift in today’s dollars would be worth about $2 million. The gift helped create the public-private model that is a hallmark of excellence in higher education. While not public in a contemporary sense, Harvard was as public as any university could be when founded. Interestingly, seven of the ten best global universities are private. Is there a general rule that the more private funding a university receives, the higher the quality?

Compared to private institutions, philanthropic giving to public universities is a recent trend. Today, philanthropic support for public universities is evident everywhere. The five largest public university endowments are The University of Texas System, The Texas A&M University System, the University of Michigan, the University of California and the University of Virginia. The endowments range from $10 billion to some $42 billion. The top five private universities led by Harvard and, concluding with MIT, have endowments ranging from $28 billion to $53 billion. The impact of these ten universities on the American economy—individual Americans in positions of elected, appointed, commercial, humanitarian and cultural leadership—is incalculable and are examples of the impact of the public-private partnerships representing the power of a republican form of government to benefit the human condition.

Reasons for our national philanthropic phenomenon are many. One reason is an abiding sense – embedded in our Constitution, traditions and our nation’s values – of the pervasive power of free moral agency. Even in its manifest imperfections, this enlightenment agency is sustained by “faith” in the positive impacts of public-private partnerships.

Taxes are paid by force of law. Gifts are given by force of soul, mind and spirit. The public-private partnership requires fuel from individuals and organizations outside of governing authorities. The generosity of the heart for those aspiring to a greater society yields progress. History proves that the next generation who seeks to build a greater society has been able to give more than the previous. Will future generations continue the trend, and will the economy favor doing so? The reality is that philanthropy is both present and future-oriented. Philanthropy is an investment in something larger than self. It is in anticipation of excellence and results from resources at work. Giving for religious causes and giving to education are connected and inseparable because both are motivated by donor passion and belief, never by edict.

Commentators argue that American universities are not state-supported but state-assisted. Diminishing appropriations to public universities is a second motivation for donors. Philanthropy fills a void created by pressures on state budgets. Universities have seminar rooms and libraries to support independent thought; they have marching bands, athletic programs and other extracurricular activities to support a sense of belonging. Growing loyal alumni transformed for a brighter future attracts others who yearn for a better way of life through thought, leading to action for a region, a state and a nation.

While a regional research university is not on the top five endowment list, a single gift for a specific purpose has a significant and compelling impact on the institution’s people, programs and places, impacting the region itself. We are experiencing the joy, excitement and benefit of philanthropy at WT.

Watch as WT challenges itself to a regionally robust culture of commitment.

Manitou Springs sacred to natives

In the early 1800s, the Arapahos and the Cheyennes from the plains engaged in frequent warfare with the Utes who lived primarily in Colorado’s mountains. But the several soda springs at the eastern base of Pikes Peak constituted a sacred area where these warring Indian tribes gathered annually in peace and harmony. The area is now part of the city of Manitou Springs.

The word, “Manitou,” refers to the Great Spirit in the Algonquin Indian language.

The Indians regarded with awe the waters of the “Medicine Fountain” (now known as the Soda or Manitou spring) as being the abode of that Great Spirit, and that He created the surrounding area as a place of peace and refuge from the cares and strife of the rest of the world. To the Indians, the area of these springs was a sacred place of restoration and harmonious gathering.

The Indians, even the war-like tribes, came annually--in peace. Each spring, when grass and wildlife abounded, they gathered to hunt, trade, and worship together.

At other times a whole village would visit for the purpose of paying their united regard to the sacred Medicine Fountain.

All the tribes, even the fierce Comanches, laid down their weapons of war when they came to the soda springs. They brought their sick and aged to partake of the health-giving waters. They brought their wounded to be nursed back to health. And together they mingled and made offerings to the Great Spirit, Manitou. But they also made supplication to the Great Spirit of the springs for victory in coming battles.

As offerings, the Indians cast beads and other trinkets into the waters. Rufus Sage reports that these offerings consisted of “robes, blankets, bows, knives, moccasins, &c., which they either throw into the water or hang on the surrounding trees.” In later years children from Colorado City would visit the springs to pick up beads and other things which they knew would be left by the Indians.

Of the several springs in the area, the Soda Spring was the most attractive to visitors, and there is an interesting legend surrounding its origin. This spring took on its sacred nature and chemical composition as the result of an incident between a Comanche and a Shoshone who met at a spring of cool, clear, refreshing water where the Shoshone spring is now located. Both Indians were very thirsty. The Shoshone, who had been successful in hunting deer that day, drank from the spring head. The Comanche, who had been unsuccessful in hunting and who was in a disgruntled mood, drank from the stream flowing from the spring so as not to pollute the water as it issued forth from the opening in the ground. The Comanche shouted insults to the Shoshone whose responses only incited the Comanche to increased hostility until the disappointed and enraged Comanche forced the other Indian’s head into the water of the spring and held it there until the Shoshone drowned. Whereupon the Comanche was filled with instant remorse.

As George F. Ruxton tells the story: Over the body stood the murderer; and no sooner was the deed of blood consummated than bitter remorse took possession of his mind, where before had reigned the fiercest passion and vindictive hate. With hands clasped to his forehead, he stood transfixed with horror; intently gazing on his victim, whose head still remained immersed in the fountain. Mechanically he dragged the body a few paces from the water, which, as soon as the head of the dead Indian was withdrawn, the Comanche saw that the water was suddenly and strangely disturbed. Bubbles sprang up from the bottom, and, rising to the surface, escaped in hissing gas. A thin vapory cloud arose, and, gradually dissolving, displayed to the eyes of the trembling murderer the figure of an aged Indian with long snowy hair and venerable beard.

The apparition was that of Wan-kan-aga, the legendary warrior and father of the Comanche and Shoshone nations, whose tradition had been

Aggies traveling all over the globe

Jennifer Bohac took Aggies all over the world during the twenty years she was the travel director of Texas A&M’s Alumni Association. She always packed two special items: patience and flexibility. When she finished her three degrees at A&M she took a job at the University of Minnesota. Although she grew up I the Houston area and didn’t see much snow or ice, she decided to take up ice-skating in the cold northern state.

“They were shocked to find out that someone my age didn’t know how to skate. Up there they start skating about the time they start walking,” says Jennifer.

One February she got a call from A & M and was offered a job.

“The Traveling Aggies were looking for a director because the previous director was retiring. At the time it was below freezing in Minnesota and it was 82 degrees in College Station. I said I would come down and interview for the job.”

She got the job in 2001, not a good travel year.

“Here I was brand new starting the program and had to deal with the effects of the September 11th attack on New York’s World Trade Center buildings. It took about a year to recover.”

When she took over, the Traveling Aggies were going on about ten trips a year. When she left that position a couple of years ago there were ninety trips a year.

“I was on the road probably 240 days a year and traveled to nearly 100 countries. My house is filled with all kinds of things from my trips. You get on a plane and end up on a river cruise or on a safari in Africa and by the end of that trip people are new lifelong friends. They end up going to each other’s houses, then going on another trip together. Many members of the TAs have been on several overseas jaunts.”

When she took Aggies through the Panama Canal, one of the favorite tours, she and her group got special treatment handed down through the generations by form of hieroglyphics. Stretching out his war-club, the now deified Wan-kan-aga chided the affrighted murderer for the heinous act just committed.

Continuing Ruxton’s account of the legend:

Accursed of my tribe! this day thou hast severed the link between the mightiest nations of the world, while the blood of the brave Shos-shone cries to the Manitou for vengeance. May the water of the tribe be rank and bitter in their throats.” Thus saying and swinging his ponderous war-club (made from the elk’s horn) round his head, he dashed out the brains of the Comanche, who fell head-long into the spring, which, from that day to the present moment, remains rank and nauseous, so that not even when half dead with thirst, can one drink the foul water of that spring.

The good Wan-kan-aga, however, to perpetuate the memory of the Shoshone warrior, who was renowned in his tribe for valor and nobleness of heart, struck with the same avenging club a hard flat rock, which overhanging the rivulet, just out of sight of this scene of blood; and forthwith the rock opened into a round clear basin, which instantly filled with bubbling, sparkling water, than which no thirsty hunter ever drank a sweeter or a cooled draught.

The two springs of this legend, the Shoshone and the Soda Spring are still in existence and are easily located today. Because of its brackish nature, the Shoshone spring is not available to the public for drinking. But the Soda spring (also called the Manitou spring) has become a public favorite throughout the years. It is located in the lobby of the former Manitou Hotel, and for many years its waters were used for both drinking and bathing.

Until recently the springs were virtually ignored and forgotten, but the heritage they represent is again being appreciated. A major restoration project has sponsored beautification projects and is attempting to make the springs more easily accessible to the general public.

WTAMU names recognizes five CC students

Five Clarendon College students were honored by West Texas A&M University for being Community College Scholars recently.

Those receiving the awards were Dawson Gleaves of Amarillo, Kreese Milligan of Hereford, Pake Parkington of Ropesville, Brittany Sotelo of Amarillo, and Autumn Wadsworth of Sparks, Nev.

CC President Tex Buckhaults named the students because their instructors, advisors, and others at the college believe their work merited extra recognition. Each of the students have been identified as motivated, hard-working students of high integrity. The students received an award certificate and an honor cord given only to recipients of this recognition.

In a letter to the award recipients, West Texas A&M President Walter Wendler stated that Clarendon College was allowed to name up to five individuals for this award. The students can be proud that they stand out among their peers for demonstrating critical traits of success.

"I'm very proud of all five of these students because of their continual demonstration of quality academics and personal integrity," Buckhaults said. "Although many students demonstrate successful qualities, the five named for this recognition stood out even more. I have every reason to believe they will continue to excel academically and personally."

Storm presentation

Storm chaser Bary Nusz, Lion Dusty Green, and Pantex Meteorologist Steve Kersh stand outside the Mulkey Theatre following last Thursday’s presentation of “In the Dark of Night.” A special video and narrated statements from survivors and first responders told the story of the 1970 tornado which struck present-day Howardwick, then known as Sherwood Shores. About 150 people attended the presentation to hear stories from that day that had never been told before. The presentation was organized by the Clarendon Lions Club and Lion Mary Green and sponsored by the Saints Roost Expedition Company.

Lions convention makes for fun time

Last weekend, my family and I went to Canyon for the Lions Club district meeting and the Lions Club district Sweetheart presentation.

When we first got there, we got to go to the beginning of the district meeting before we started getting ready for the sweetheart presentation.

There were two import things going on this weekend. The first was that my Dad would be getting voted into office as the District Governor. And second, at the presentation I was going to be an escort to Darcy Grahn, our Lions Club’s Sweetheart.

That morning my dad got voted in unanimously securing his spot as the next district governor in July, so we started getting ready for the presentation.

When we got to the church where we would be doing the presentation, we went through it just to practice then we had a few minutes before it started to hang out and make sure we were ready. Then the presentation went on without a hitch, and Darcy did very well.

We had a couple of hours to kill before we went back to the district meeting and got the results of the presentation.

At the meeting my Dad gave a speech thanking everyone for all that they had done and are doing for the district, and then we got the results of the presentation. Sadly, Darcy didn’t win but she did well, and it was fun.

In all, I had a great time, and I’m ready for next year.

Broncos claim District Title

By Sandy Anderberg

The Broncos have played solid baseball this season and their hard work paid off with a District Championship in their division. Their latest win came in Wellington last week at 5-3.

Behind the pitching of senior Brock Hatley and Harrison Howard behind the plate, the Broncos used their defensive ability to limit the Skyrockets' offensive attack in seven innings. Hatley only allowed seven hits while striking out three.

The Broncos struck first with one run in the first inning and held Wellington scoreless until the third. They held that lead until leaving the fifth inning in a 3-3 tie. Two big runs in the sixth inning gave the Broncos the win as neither team scored in the final inning of play.

The Rockets did not go down without a fight as the Broncos stayed solid and took advantage of two stolen bases by Caulder Havens. Howard slammed two singles in the game, while Hatley, Easton Frausto, Havens each knocked down one single.

Collectively, the Broncos racked up four RBIs, but struck out 13 times while at bat and took advantage of three walks by Wellington's pitcher.

The Broncos have senior night while taking on Kress at home on April 28 beginning at 4:30.

Lady Broncos win with big first inning

The Lady Broncos had their bats on fire the first inning of play against West Texas last week scoring four runs in the first inning of play in their 10-4 win over WT.

Tandie Cummins was on the mound the entire seven innings only allowing seven hits with three strikeouts in the game, and Jentrye Bellar was behind the plate.

Playing a strong offense, the ladies were able to collect nine singles, three doubles, and two huge homeruns by Bellar and Kennadie Cummins. They racked up eight RBIs and only succumbed twice to the WT pitcher while posting seven stolen bases. West Texas did not score a run until the fifth inning, when they put up three runs and added one the final inning.

K. Cummins accounted for four runs, while Bellar posted two, and T. Cummins, Tandy Blacksher, Aleyah Weatheron, and Hayden Elam collected one each. Elam also posted two of the eight total stolen bases and T. Cummins, Blacksher, K. Cummins, and Jayde Gribble each knocked down a double.

The Lady Broncos have finished regular season play, and playoffs will begin with a double header at 4:00 p.m. against Quanah on Friday, April 29, in Childress. Game three will be on Saturday if necessary.

Here's How It Works:
Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Not guilty by reason of insanity:

way down to a class c misdemeanor punishable by fine only.”

After the determination was made by medical professionals that Fierro was insane at the time of the offense, defense counsel for Fierro, Earl Griffin, Jr. and Sage Seal, both of Childress, moved to raise the affirmative defense and their client pleaded not guilty by reason of insanity.

After reviewing the medical reports and opinions from the psychiatrists, the state agreed with the defense, said Inman.

“Candy and James were two caring individuals who liked everyone in their small community, neither one of them deserved to be murdered in such a horrendous way,” said Paige Mitchell, stepmother to three of Garrett’s children. “The last few years since the murder of James and Candy have been hard for all family members left behind. The children try to focus on the good memories they have. Candy was a wonderful mother adored by all of her family and friends, but especially by her children. This verdict is not easy to understand, but we realize there are certain laws in place that we cannot control. He is a monster and should never be able to be in free society again.”

The rules set forth by Chapter 46C control the future of Fierro’s commitment status from this point forward, said Inman.

“We don’t like it, but we don’t make the rules,” said Caudle. “Our office has every confidence in the diagnosis made by the psychiatrists. This is the system the federal and state legislatures have created for criminal prosecution, and this is the only option we have under our system.”

The law requires in-patient or out-patient care once a defendant is found not guilty by reason of insanity, according to Inman.

“Fierro’s actions make him the most dangerous type of individual we unfortunately have to deal with,” said Inman. “We will continue to fight for all the victims of this case and society as a whole that this person remains at a maximum-security in-patient facility for the remainder of his life.”

Fierro will now be sent to the maximum-security state hospital in Vernon for a 30-day evaluation and treatment, at which point Messer will determine if Fierro is a serious danger to others. If he is, Messer can commit Fierro to a state hospital for up to six months and then on a yearly basis thereafter.

The Clarendon Lions Club held its regular Tuesday noon meeting April 26, 2022, with Boss Lion Landon Lambert in charge.

We had ten members, Sweetheart Darcy Grahn, and one guest this week – Ben Estlack, guest of Lion Roger Estlack.

Lion Mary Green reported on the “In the Dark of Night” presentation about the 1970 tornado that struck what is now Howardwick. About 150 people attended this event sponsored by our club with six families taking home disaster preparedness kits and all households attending taking home a dry bag to hold important documents in the event of a disaster.

The Boss Lion congratulated and praised Sweetheart Darcy Grahn for her efforts in the District Sweetheart Presentation last Saturday. He also introduced the idea of having overlapping Sweetheart terms so that Darcy can train whoever her successor will be over the summer.

The Boss Lion also congratulated and recognized District Governor-Elect Roger Estlack for his election at Saturday’s district convention and his successful efforts to help change the operations of the Panhandle Lions Foundation so the organization works better for the district.

The Boss Lion talked about ways to reach out and help the Lions Clubs in Hedley and Memphis, and also asked for and received a vote from our club to help the Wheeler Lions Club with a park project in that community.

Sweetheart Darcy reported on the convention and thanked the club for everything we do in the community. She said Saturday’s meeting allowed her to make many new friends and learn even more about how Lions help their communities.

With no further business, we were adjourned to spread Lionism and good cheer throughout.
