Consider our progress when casting votes

It's election time again, and voters will be casting their ballots Saturday to determine who will make decisions on their behalf for Clarendon CISD and the City of Clarendon.

Voters across Texas are also casting ballots on two proposed state constitutional amendments, which each promise to reduce your property taxes in some form or fashion. That's a recurring theme of our state leaders – cut local property taxes. Your editor is all for lower taxes, but he's also for educated children so that hopefully society will be run by people smarter than we are in a few years. Cuts in property taxes although always accompanied by pie in the sky talk of the state helping out more – almost always ends up with our schools and local governments having their hands tied. And of course, cutting your tax rate is of little consequence if your appraised values eat up your savings, and our fearless leaders in Austin do nothing about that except perhaps encourage it.

But I digress. The point of this column was not to wax forlornly about our pitiful state "leaders" but to instead discuss the local issues on the city front.

Regardless of the outcome of Saturday's election, change is coming to City Hall. Mayor Sandy Skelton has been pretty upfront that his days in office are coming to an end with the pending sale of his home and plans to move out of state. And then at the last city meeting, City Administrator David Dockery announced his intention to retire next April.

Starting back in 2015, Dockery has served Clarendon as its administrator longer than any other person. In fact, when Dockery retires next year, he will have served longer than the previous three administrators combined and four times longer than any one of them. There are several factors that have led to this longevity; most of which will be saved for discussion at a later date. But without a doubt, one of the biggest secrets to his success has been the presence of Mayor Skelton and the general support of the city council through the years.

There will be time for tributes later, but for this week, it is important that voters consider what has been accomplished since 2015 and that list is considerable.

For starters, the city's water infrastructure is vastly improved thanks in part to long-range planning and studies that actually began while Lambert Little was city administrator from 2010-2012. Those early efforts led directly to the city successfully securing and carrying out a $4 million project largely funded by the US Department of Agriculture, which led to about five miles of new waterlines being installed and a new standpipe being erected on the east side of town. This took care of dirty or stained water that some citizens had been dealing with for years and also helped replace some of the oldest water lines in the city.

The USDA project had the unintended consequence of bringing to light the old City Hall's shortcomings with regards to accessibility under the Americans with Disabilities Act. Ultimately, city leaders decided to purchase and move into a new location on the Courthouse Square. The new City Hall provides employees with more space to work, is more accommodating, and provides a better venue for public meetings. It was a move that will serve Clarendon well for many years to come.

Some limited paving was accomplished in the last eight years and measures were taken to preserve and protect the city's best streets. An election that would have paved most of the streets in town about 20 years ago failed at the time by 25 votes with the "Nays" most vocal about the need to replace old water lines before doing paving. It took some time, but now that's been done. The city is now working on plans with an engineer to try again for another big project to pave streets. Time – and this election – will tell if Clarendon residents really want that kind of progress.

The professionalism exhibited by the current council and administration likely helped prompt the anonymous benefactor to offer half a million dollars towards building a city pool. It wasn't offered for any other purpose, and city officials would have been fools to turn it down. Working together over six years, Skelton, Dockery, and the members of the city council helped raise money and ultimately saw the wisdom in committing public funds to close the gap at make the Clarendon Aquatic Center a reality.

Coupled with the final completion of renovations to the Mulkey Theatre, the aquatic center has helped bring new "quality of life" attractiveness to Clarendon and downtown in particular. Both those features as well as downtown merchants will benefit from the city's next big project – downtown revitalization. Grant funds will pay the largest part of new sidewalks and new lighting that will make our city prettier, more accessible, and more appealing.

All this has been done while our property tax rate has actually gone down quite a bit over the last eight years. The city has zero control over your appraisals, so talk to your state leaders if you're upset about that. Yes, some utility charges have gone up; but on the whole, this city is much better off than it was in 2015. It's in a better financial position, it's planning for more improvements, and it's better prepared for the future. Is everyone happy? No, but when has everyone ever been happy? A look at the big picture though shows Clarendon making progress. Our challenge is to keep that progress going.

The 1906 face in the train window

The rains came down heavily on the morning of September 18, 1906, in central Oklahoma. It had also rained during the preceding night, the Cimarron River was flooded, and its waters were rushing violently. Still, Claude "Red" Ives, engineer on Rock Island's No. 12 passenger train running from Dallas to Chicago, saw no cause for alarm. When he crossed the Cimarron the preceding day going south to Dallas, the river was dry. And a south bound freight train had safely crossed less than an hour before Ives and his No. 12 passenger train arrived at the now-flooded river. But when Ives and his train were halfway across the river, the flood-battered bridge collapsed, sending the engine and its cars into the rushing torrent.

Passengers in the first passenger car managed to kick out the windows and drag other passengers out. A man from the 4-Paw-Sells Circus stood outside in the water, and as a passenger was freed, would lead the person to the safety of the riv-erbank. Preston Love, sheriff of Kingfisher, was a passenger in the train's smoker by george u. hubbard car which was filled halfway with water. Love, who survived the wreck, relates his harrowing experience.

"I tried to get out the vestibule but couldn't break the window glass. The next thing I knew the water was over my head, and I felt my face strike the ceiling. In desperation I broke the side of the vestibule and got out into the flood."

Having freed himself, Love was swept to an adjoining car lying on its side. Climbing onto the side (now the top) of the car, Love looked into one of its windows.

"I will never forget the face of a a look of death stamped on her face. I kicked in the glass and reached in for and saw that she had a baby tightly

The rescued lady was Mrs. Frank Ryel, but the baby in her hand was not hers. The rushing water in the car had swept the child out of the arms of its mother and into the grasp of Mrs. Ryel. Fortunately, the mother was also rescued and reunited with her child.

Miraculously, only four lives were officially reported lost. With the exception of the porter, all the train crew survived and continued railroading until much later in their lives.

woman peering from beneath a windowpane at me, the water up to her neck, and the woman. My leg and both arms were cut by glass from the window. I finally managed to drag her through the window clutched in one hand."

Raising bar for Texas higher ed

By Harrison Keller

More than two years after COVID-19 began to disrupt our lives and livelihoods, Texas is moving forward. Our state's economy has come roaring back, and our thriving business climate continues to be an asset and point of pride. Our population also continues to grow, attracting talented individuals from across the nation and around the world. Texas colleges and universities have mostly recovered from the impacts of the pandemic, which caused the most significant disruptions to their operations since World War II. Today, university enrollments are higher than in 2019.

Yet, most community college enrollments have remained down, especially because their enrollments tend to track closely with local labor markets. When unemployment goes up, more people tend to enroll in local colleges. When unemployment falls, community college enrollments usually drop.

While we're fortunate our diverse economy and growing population have helped accelerate the pace of economic recovery for our great state, it's important to acknowledge things haven't really gotten back to our old normal, because we didn't move backwards. Across the state, Texans kept moving forward, and the new normal we're experiencing is just different from what we knew and how we lived pre-pandemic.

One of the most significant differences is the pace of change in our economy. Trends in remote work, e-commerce, and automation accelerated faster than anyone anticipated. Texas has more jobs today than pre-pandemic, and the vast majority of those jobs require education beyond high school. It's now much harder to get a good job and advance in your career without a degree, certificate, skilled apprenticeship, or other credential beyond a high school our economy increasingly depends on knowledge, information, and technology, and our competitive position increasingly relies on how we develop Texas talent. We need to provide opportunities for more Texans to acquire the education and credentials good jobs require.

Seeing these changes afoot, the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board has been working with employers, higher education leaders, policymakers, and other stakeholders to update the state's higher education goals. In January, the board of the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board approved the updated state plan, which we're calling Building a Talent Strong Texas. The plan will serve as the primary roadmap for Texas higher education through 2030.

Building A Talent Strong Texas The new plan is bold and widens the lens on who we're committed to serve through Texas' colleges and universities, recognizing that working adults need to continually build their knowledge and skills to stay competitive throughout their careers.

Building a Talent Strong Texas also broadens the scope of credentials we're focused on. Historically, the state only focused on traditional degrees and technical certificates. Today, a wide range of industry-recognized credentials play an increasingly vital role in our economy. Some short-term programs and skilled apprenticeships can transform individuals' job opportunities in just a few months. Short-term, workforce-aligned credentials can also be combined with more traditional programs, from high school diplomas through bachelor's and graduate degrees.

We also putting down an important new marker: that all the higher education credentials we focus on should be credentials of value, defined in terms of typical earnings in our Texas economy. Texas is the first state to tie its goals for higher education credentials to individuals' earnings. This summer, we will release dashboards that tie information about degrees and other credentials to information about earnings, to help Texans make informed decisions about their educational and career plans.

Another important goal focuses on student debt: by 2030, 95% of Texas students should be able to complete undergraduate degrees or other credentials with no or low debt. Students and their families need to know - and colleges and universities need to monitor — whether students are taking on more debt than they should. Keeping higher education affordable and debt low should be a shared responsibility among policymakers, higher education institutions, and students themselves.

Building a Talent Strong Texas also includes broad goals for strengthening our colleges' and universities' roles in promoting research, development, and innovation, to propel our state's competitiveness well into the future.

Across every goal, the updated state plan emphasizes the importance of renewing our commitment to equity. Over the past decade, Texas has added more people than any other state in the nation, and 95% of our growth was in communities of color. If we're not advancing our goals equitably, we cannot achieve our goals.

We're committed to advancing new strategies — and holding higher education accountable — so all Texans have opportunities to participate in, contribute to, and benefit from our world-class economy. So much has changed since 2020.

But we're pushing forward. Through our commitment to Building a Talent Strong Texas, we are raising the bar for higher education, to expand opportunity for all Texans and ensure Texas remains competitive well into the future.

Harrison Keller is Commissioner of Higher Education and chief executive officer of the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board.

Clarendon Scouts BSA working on an Eagle Scout project in Groom Monday afternoon.

Keeping busy with 4-H, Scouts

Boy Scouts. Last Friday, I went to the 4-H district archery meet. I was competing the barebow division, and I ended up getting is the first time to Groom to help one of our fellow another Eagle Scout in our troop.

Over the past couple of days, Scouts, Kacie Eugea, with her Eagle I've been doing a lot with my two Scout project. Her project is building favorite activities – 4-H archery and a take some / leave some cabinet at her local food pantry.

The first thing we did was dig the hole for the concrete slab to go. So, we got to work and made ourselves a six-inch-deep hole. Then we used a hand auger to dig two deeper holes for the two poles that would hold up the cabinet. Then we went and dumped all the dirt from the hole while the other Scouts poured the concrete.

After that we cleaned up and we finished pour part.

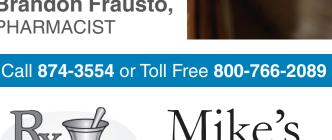

I really enjoy Scouting and helping other Scouts. It was fun to Then, on Monday me along help with the project, and it makes with my other fellow Scouts went me glad that we will soon have medicine to vitamins, we provide everything you need, along with best wishes for a speedy recovery.

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Lady Broncos win Bi-District Championship

The Lady Broncos stepped into the Area round with a big win over Quanah in two games. They will take on Forsan in the Area game that will take place in Littlefield on Thursday, May 5, at 6:30 p.m.

The Lady Broncos ousted Quanah in a big way in the best two out of three series last week. They blasted Quanah 23-0 in the first game and won 22-3 in the second.

According to head coach Brad Elam, the ladies did not have a lot of chances to hit the ball but were able to bring runs home. Senior Jentrye Bellar racked up 6 RBIs and two runs, and Hayden Elam helped with two runs and two RBIs. Kennadie Cummins posted three runs, Tandie Cummins added three runs, and Madie Smith had two. Bayleigh Bruce, Elyza Rodriguez, and Avery Sawyer had two runs each. Senior Madie Smith was on the mound and pitched four good innings giving up only one hit while striking out seven batters.

Game two was much the same for the ladies behind the pitching of Tandie and Kennadie who struck out seven in their time on the mound.

Bellar has played strong all season and this game was no different as she slammed her fourth home run of the season and added a double with four runs and four RBIs. Bruce knocked down a big triple and drove in four runners while Elam went two for three with two triples, two RBIs, and three runs. T. Cummins had a double and two runs, while Smith went two for two from the plate with two RBIs and three runs. Jayde Griband scored all three times.

Broncos hustle up a win over Memphis 8-3

The Broncos used strong offense and defense to get by Memphis 8-3 last week in one of their last regular season games. Senior strongarm Brock Hatley was on the mound for six innings and was able to throw pitches that the Cyclones struggled to hit. Hatley only allowed two runs and managed 10 strikeouts. Fellow Senior Aiden Caudle came in as relief for one inning and struck out two hitters while allowing one run.

The Broncos were sharp on the offensive side and posted seven hits and seven RBIs with nine stolen Tyler Harper connected for one double and one run while Hatley had one single and two RBI. Easton Frausto posted a hit for two bases, two runs, and two stolen bases and Caudle had one single, three RBIs, and one stolen base. Harrison Howard, Caulder Havens, and Britton Cottrell each had a single and runs. Lyric Smith had a single, one run, and two stolen bases and Jodee Pig had two RBIs. Harper and Smith were spot on with two double plays.

The District Champion Broncos are awaiting post-season play.

Ballard runs at well at Regional track meet By Sandy Anderberg

Clarendon's Kimbrasia Ballard competed in the Regional Track Meet last week; and even though she did not advance in the 100m race, she was able to run a personal best in that event.

Ballard finished ninth with a time of 13.19. The winner of the 100m ran the race in a time of 12.60.

Track coach Korey Conkin was complimentary of Ballard's performance.

"We are very proud of Kimbrasia for advancing to the Regional Meet. She worked hard and improved her time each time she ran. We are looking forward to seeing much more success from her in the future.'
