Greenbelt well field project starting Monday

Work is expected to begin next week on an $18 million project that will bring new groundwater resources to Greenbelt Municipal & Industrial Water Authority.

Following a preconstruction meeting last week, Greenbelt General Manager Bobbie Kidd told the ENTERPRISE he expects dirt work to begin on Monday, building the roads and clearing well sites to access 2,800 acres of groundwater in northern Donley County.

Kidd said dirt work may take up to 45 days and then the well driller has up to 190 days. Other work also has to be completed to make the project a reality, including construction by Greenbelt Electric Cooperative of a three-phase power line to provide electricity to the well field.

Ultimately, the project will develop four to five wells, which will be connected to the Greenbelt Filter Plant via the construction of a new 12-mile, 16-inch pipeline that will largely follow the State Hwy. 70 right of way.

The project was approved in 2023 but had to be re-bid three times for various reasons. While the project still remains within its budget, there are some items like well-casings and transmission lines that may be impacted by recent tariffs the United States has levied.

The new groundwater is desperately needed to supplement the Greenbelt Reservoir, which is nine percent full and has suffered from a lack of significant rainfall in recent years. Last month, the water authority activated Stage 4 of its drought contingency plan as the lake level fell below an elevation of 2615 feet above sea level.

More rains will help a lot, but part of the basic problem is that Greenbelt historically received much of its water from natural springs that simply aren't flowing anymore.

"It's all changed," Kidd said. When Greenbelt notified its member cities to activate their own Stage 4 plans two weeks ago, the lake's elevation was 2614.67 and had fallen to 2514.55 last Tuesday. But in a show of what even a little precipitation can do, the lake came back up to 2614.67 after last weekend's snow and rain.

"You've just got to get above 2615 for 30 days to get out of Stage 4," Kidd said.

Quanah and Crowell are responding to the drought conditions. Childress implemented its Stage 4 drought plan two weeks ago following Greenbelt's request, and the Childress City Council has had several called meetings since then to discuss the issue further.

Clarendon and Hedley are expected to enact Stage 4 restrictions this week after those city councils review their contingency plans Thursday night.

"The really sad part is I don't think any of our cities are really wasting water," Kidd said. "We don't use near as much water as we used to."

Kidd said it's hard to say how long it will take before water is actually flowing into the system from Greenbelt's new well field. Greenbelt Board President Phillip Self told Childress officials it will likely be one and half to two years before the wells are online.

Measles cases continue rising in West Texas

By Terri Langford, Stephen Simpson and Eleanor Klibanof, Texas Tribune

The number of measles cases has risen to 505, as the historical outbreak continues to spread across West Texas, according to state officials on Tuesday. Of those, 57 patients have been hospitalized.

There have been two deaths involving school-aged children who lived in the outbreak area. Neither child was vaccinated nor did they have any underlying conditions, according to the Texas Department of State Health Services.

As of Tuesday, most of the measles cases reported since January – 328 – were centered in Gaines County, about 90 minutes southwest of Lubbock on the New Mexico border.

Two more counties were added to the latest report. Borden and Randall each reported a case. Randall is located south of Amarillo. Borden, southeast of Lubbock.

State officials have been releasing updated measles numbers every Tuesday and Friday. Last Friday, they reported 73 new cases, the biggest surge in cases over a three-day period since the outbreak started. Of those new cases, most of them, 44, were in Gaines County.

Public health officials have warned that the state could see an increase in measles cases after children have been traveling for spring break.

Currently, the largest demographic of people becoming infected with measles is children under the age of 18, accounting for 351 of the 505 cases.

On Feb. 26, Texas officials reported a 6-year-old unvaccinated, otherwise healthy school-aged child died from measles, the first death from the virus in a decade. The family lives in the outbreak area. On April 3, an unvaccinated 8-year-old girl, who also lived in the outbreak area died of measles, according to hospital officials.

Last month, New Mexico officials said an unvaccinated adult in Lea County, about 50 miles away from Gaines County, died with measles.

Wampler resigns as CCISD AD

Clarendon CISD Athletic Director Aaron Wampler confirmed Friday afternoon, April 4, that he has resigned and has taken a new position at River Road ISD.

Wampler told the ENTERPRISE that he and his family have mixed feelings about leaving Clarendon.

"We're doing a lot of going back and forth from being excited about the future to being sad to leave here," Wampler said.

CCISD Superintendent Jarod Bellar said he appreciates the job Wampler has done here and wishes him and his family the best as they begin their new chapter.

"When I hired him, I knew we probably wouldn't be able to keep him for very long because I feel like he's a rising star in the coaching profession," Bellar said. "I just wish we would have been able to hold onto him a little longer."

The River Road school board was expected to confirm Wampler's hire on Monday, and he said he expected to start his duties there as athletic director and head football coach on Tuesday following a press conference.

Clarendon, Wampler said, has always been very welcoming to his family and he likes the solid people of the community.

"We have enjoyed our time here and have been very happy here," he said. "This has been a very supportive community, and I appreciate the buy-in and the character and the hard work of the kids here."

Bellar said Clarendon is already receiving calls from potential candidates to replace Wampler.

"The search for a new Athletic Director and Head Football Coach began immediately after Coach Wampler informed me he had accepted the job at River Road," Bellar said. "By the end of the day, I had already received interest from potential candidates and that continued over the course of the weekend. Over the next couple of weeks, I will go over resumes and applications to set up interviews. I do not have a hard timeline, but I would like to get someone in as soon as possible so they can get to know the kids and get everything set for summer workouts and activities."

Reviewing the power to impeach

A primary goal of the Founders was to protect the people from a strong federal government. They accomplished this with a series of checks and balances where all three branches received relatively equal strength and gave each branch the ability to check each other’s powers. As an additional check on the power of government, the Founders created impeachment clauses. These clauses were not meant to be used lightly or as weapons against the other branches; they were established to give a degree of protection against impeachment. Initially its power was divided between the two branches of the Legislature.

historically speaking
by dr. james finck

In his defense of the Constitution, Alexander Hamilton wrote in Federalists No. 66, “The division of them between the two branches of the Legislature, assigning to one the right of accusing, to the other the right of judging, avoids the inconvenience of making the same persons both accusers and judges; and guards against the danger of persecution, from the prevalence of a factious spirit in either of those branches. As the concurrence of two thirds of the Senate will be requisite to a condemnation, the security to innocence, from this additional circumstance, will be as complete as itself can desire.”

As we have previously seen, Article I, Section II of the Constitution gives the House of Representatives the power to impeach any government official, but that only means they see enough evidence for a trial. The second part of impeachment — the actual trial — is held in the Senate. With this division, both houses of Congress must be on board in order for any removal from office.

Article I, Section III, Clause VI reads, “The Senate shall have the sole Power to try all Impeachments. When sitting for that Purpose, they shall be on Oath or Affirmation. When the President of the United States is tried, the Chief Justice shall preside: And no Person shall be convicted without the Concurrence of two thirds of the Members present.”

Vesting the impeachment power almost solely in the Legislature shows the importance the Founders placed on this one branch. While the three branches are supposed to be equal, it is clear the Legislature is meant to be a bit more equal. Evidence of this is in practice; the Legislature was clearly the strongest of the branches in the 19th century. It’s not until the 20th century that presidents slowly but surely began to strip away power.

With the current issue of President Trump asking for the impeachment of District Judge James Boasberg, it is worth investigating the intent of the Legislature’s ability to impeach. It would seem to make sense to vest the Judiciary Branch with impeachment, they are judges after all. Yet, as it’s the president who appoints judges, it seemed like a conflict of interest if the Supreme Court had to judge the president or anyone in the Executive Branch. The other issue with the Court is that justices are appointed for life. Senators can be replaced in the next election; judges cannot. Impeachment is the only tool available to remove judges.

Hamilton, in Federalist No. 81, took on the question of how to limit the power of the Judicial Branch. In trying to convince the people of New York to accept the Constitution, he claimed that the Court can occasionally overstep its authority but not to the degree of harming the nation. “Particular misconstructions and contraventions of the will of the Legislature may now and then happen; but they can never be so extensive as to amount to an inconvenience, or in any sensible degree to affect the order of the political system,” he wrote. The reason being that if the judges try to go too far, they can be impeached, “And the inference is greatly fortified by the consideration of the important constitutional check which the power of instituting impeachments in one part of the legislative body, and of determining upon them in the other, would give to that body upon the members of the judicial department. This is alone a complete security. There never can be danger that the judges, by a series of deliberate usurpations on the authority of the legislature, would hazard the united resentment of the body entrusted with it, while this body was possessed of the means of punishing their presumption, by degrading them from their stations.”

In other words, it seems as though Hamilton is suggesting Congress use impeachment as the main check on the courts if justices try to wield too much authority. Would Hamilton apply this to judges blocking President Trump? There is no evidence that he would, and presidents at that time did not use executive orders the way they do now. As already seen, this was meant to build the power of Legislative Branch.

Congress almost has all the power when it comes to impeachment. The one exception is when the president is tried for impeachment, then the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court presides instead of the vice president. It does not make sense to have the vice president preside over a trial that has the ability to make him the next president.

Finally, when it comes to sentencing, Clause VII states, “Judgment in Cases of Impeachment shall not extend further than to removal from Office, and disqualification to hold and enjoy any Office of honor, Trust or Profit under the United States: but the Party convicted shall nevertheless be liable and subject to Indictment, Trial, Judgment and Punishment, according to Law.”

In other words, the most the Senate can do is remove the convicted person from their position and, if they choose, can disqualify them from holding office again. They cannot imprison anyone on criminal changes, but that person can be criminally charged by the proper authorities afterwards.

A couple of important notes. First the courts have, in recent years, ruled that presidents have immunity from criminal acts Trump v. United States, 2024. Secondly, notice that disqualification from future positions is only an option, not a requirement. If the majority of the Senate does not agree on disqualification, the impeached person can run for any office again, including the president.

Katy Railroad’s spectacular collision

The Missouri-Kansas-Texas (Katy) Railroad faced stiff competition as it built southward into Texas. The Santa Fe, Frisco, and Rock Island Railroads were also pursuing the lucrative business of transporting passengers, livestock, and freight between Texas and the eastern markets. In hopes of increasing passenger traffic and revenues, W. G.

Crush, general passenger agent for the Katy, conceived a scheme calculated to attract attention to his line. He would stage a train wreck. And to have a proper place to do it, he would create a town along the line, and excursion trains would bring the people. Thus the town of Crush City, Texas, was born. Restaurants, first aid stations, saloons, and a jail were established. Duly authorized officers of the law were sworn in.

Huge billboards along the Katy’s right-of-way and advertisements in scores of newspapers told of the coming event. The advertising was effective, for on Sept. 15, 1896, Crush City had a population of 30,000 people. The saloons and the jail did a thriving business, and the police officers stayed busy.

The exhibition was to take place in a basin about a quarter of a mile wide. Gently rolling hills on either side made an excellent amphitheater for spectators. The two participating engines were face to face on the main line, each pulling a tender and six box cars. The plan called first for a dry run, and then for the real thing.

The engineers backed their trains up until they were two miles apart, and at the signal, they raced down the track toward each other with whistles blowing. Then the brakes shrieked as steel slid on steel, and the crowd gasped in genuine apprehension as the two trains barely managed to stop with their cow catchers clanking together. For a dry run, it was much too close for comfort.

Now it was time for the real thing. After a lengthy pause for Picture taking, the engineers backed their trains up and again awaited the signal. This time they were going to collide at full speed. Throwing their throttles wide open, the two engineers jumped to safety as the trains gathered speed, and the two trains came together with a mighty crash.

tales of the old west
by george u. hubbard

One of the boilers exploded, clouds of dust enveloped the scene, and broken metal flew everywhere. Two spectators were struck and killed by flying metal, and several others were injured. It was a rather subdued crowd that climbed aboard the excursion trains to return home.

W. G. Crush had to admit that the scheme was not as successful as he had hoped. Although 30,000 passengers in the excursion trains brought good revenue to the Katy, many of them also brought lawsuits. Crush succeeded in getting publicity for the railroad, but most of the publicity was less than favorable.

Despite the tragic results of the Crush City spectacle, train wrecks were also staged on other railroads as publicity stunts.

As far as can be determined, the Katy’s episode was the only time a railroad staged a wreck in the United States and succeeded in continuing in business afterward. The Katy weathered the aftermath of the episode and became a very successful railroad in Texas. George U. Hubbard is an author and former resident of Clarendon. His book, The Humor & Drama of Early Texas, is available at fine booksellers everywhere.

A tradition of holding tight to money

Hailstones and dogs “woofing” bring roofs to mind, and a favorite story my Uncle Mort has repeated so many times that it has grown whiskers.

It’s about a 1950s neighbor who tried fruitlessly to run his household, his hand clutching his pocketbook. He was said to be so frugal, he’d climb over gates to save the hinges.

Typically, he could put aside pleas from his wife and his children, but when they banded against him, he usually gave in, audibly groaning upon finally reaching for his wallet....

Before television came along, there was the push to get a battery-powered radio. “We ain’t doin’ it,” he’d fume, “It would just lead to something else.”

He’d give it his best shot, but soon the family was enjoying its very own radio.

Then, they came out with electrically-powered radios that had pull-out record players. Each time, the “head of the house” would trot out the same expression about purchases “leading to something else.”....

Mama and the kids, all on bended knees, later begged fervently to purchase a television set. “It could be a Christmas gift for all of us,” they whined.

Days became weeks, and the old guy – in a weaker moment – agreed to visit the store to get a first-hand look at

TV sets.

“We’re not buying one, though,” he assured. “It would just lead to something else.”....

The salesman, warning that Christmas shoppers were depleting their TV inventory, reinforced what appeared to be the winning team – Mama and the kids.

“I’m thinking about buying it, since it will be a gift for all of us,” the prospective purchaser finally said, his resistance as depleted as the current stock of TV sets. “But I know it’ll just lead to something else.”

As they loaded the bulky 17-inch TV, the salesman added, “Of course, you’ll need a TV antenna.”....

Startled, the reluctant buyer responded, “Need a what?” Explaining that TV reception in fringe areas required tall antennas, the salesman recommended a 20-foot antenna for placement on the peak of the roof.

“I knew it, I just knew it,” the old man whimpered. “Now we’ve got to get us a roof.”....

the idle american
by don newbury

Finally, though, the TV brought considerable enjoyment, particularly when weather conditions were right for the reception of both pictures and sound. Often as not, only the sound came through, so at such times, it was no better than radio.

The late Bob Murphey, who spoke “perfect East Texas and fair English,” was a world-class storyteller, often speaking to the same audiences repeatedly.

And they always urged him to tell about his neighbor buying his family’s first TV set....

Jerry Clower, late Mississippi comedian, was on par with Murphey in yarn-spinning. He, too, was asked to relate favorite tales, even if audience members knew them by heart. One concerned his first visit to a “kaffay.” (Even then, most patrons called them “restaurants.”)

While paying his tab, Jerry extracted a toothpick from a small glass container, carefully attending to both “uppers and lowers” while the cashier dispensed his change.

Placing the toothpick back in the holder, Jerry said, “I’ll bet you thought I was going to steal that toothpick, didn’t you?”....

Southwestern Electric Power Company (SWEPCO or the Company) publishes this notice that on March 14, 2025, it filed its Application for Approval to Amend Its Transmission Cost Recovery Factor (TCRF) with the Public Utility Commission of Texas (Commission) in Docket No. 57708. The filing was made in accordance with the Public Utility Regulatory Act (PURA) § 36.209 and 16 Tex. Admin. Code (TAC) § 25.239. The TCRF will recover SWEPCO's reasonable and necessary costs for transmission infrastructure improvements as well as changes in wholesale transmission charges under a tariff approved by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) to the extent that the costs or charges have not otherwise been recovered. In this application, SWEPCO seeks to recover its transmission capital investments from August 1, 2023 through December 31, 2024. SWEPCO also seeks to recover through the TCRF approved transmission charges that are not otherwise being recovered through current rates. This notice is being published in accordance with PURA § 36.103 and 16 TAC § 22.51(a)(l).

STATEMENT OF INTENT TO CHANGE RATES

SWEPCO requests that the Commission approve an increase of $11,187,371 above the revenue requirement approved by the Commission in SWEPCO's last TCRF proceeding, Docket No. 55438 for its Texas retail customers. This amounts to a 2.8% percent increase in SWEPCO's overall annualized Texas retail revenue requirement. SWEPCO proposes that its requested rate change become effective 35 days after the filing of the Application. The proposed effective date is subject to suspension and extension by actions that may be taken by the Commission.

All customers in SWEPCO's Texas retail rate classes will be affected by this change. The impact of the rate change on various customer classes will vary from the overall impact described in this notice.

CONTACT INFORMATION

Persons with questions or who want more information on SWEPCO's Application may contact SWEPCO at 428 Travis Street, Shreveport, Louisiana 71101, or call toll-free at (888) 216-3523 during normal business hours. A complete copy of the Application and related filings is available for inspection at the address listed in the previous sentence.

Persons who wish to intervene in or comment upon these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible, as an intervention deadline will be imposed. Facing an Uncertain Return

By Tara Huff, The Eagle Press

Kimberly Snelgrooes, Jared Snelgrooes, Sherlie Joseph, and Kevenson Jean sat around the Snelgrooes kitchen table, each trying to process the looming uncertainty of Sherlie and Kevenson’s future. Sherlie and Kevenson’s lives have been built on a foundation of hope, hard work, and the promise of a better life in the United States. But with the arrival of a letter from Homeland Security, the rug was pulled out from beneath them. They now face an impossible choice: remain in the United States and risk being separated from the life they had built, or return to Haiti, where danger and uncertainty awaits.

Kevenson and his wife Sherlie came to the United States under the CHNV humanitarian parole program, a lifeline offered to people from Haiti, Cuba, Nicaragua, and Venezuela. For the past year and a half, they have worked tirelessly, each holding down two jobs, hoping to one day secure a better future. Kevenson graduated with his CDL from Clarendon College. Since receiving their work permits, Kevenson and Sherlie have paid US Social Security, Medicare, and federal income taxes. They will never be eligible for the benefits they are contributing to.

Kevenson, along with his two jobs, has gone to school and is now a truck driver. His goal is to go back to school for business administration. Sherlie continues to work hard and wants to attend Frank Phillips College to earn a nursing degree. They have their own housing and live modestly without relying on government assistance. It is a life they have worked hard to create, but now that life is on the brink of falling apart.

The news hit them hard. The CHNV parole program was being terminated. The Department of Homeland Security had announced that the program would come to an end, effective immediately, forcing those who had entered under the program to leave the United States or face deportation. United States Secretary of Homeland Security Kristi Noem is quoted to say she has found the program no longer “serve a significant public benefit, are not necessary to reduce levels of illegal immigration, ... and are inconsistent with the Administration’s foreign policy goals.”

Kimberly has spent countless hours navigating the complex bureaucracy to help Kevenson and his family come to the United States. She said that now, the very country they had come to for safety and opportunity was telling them to leave.

“What are we going to do?” Kevenson asked, his voice tinged with disbelief. Two tickets alone will cost approximately $5,000, money this modest family does not have.

The idea of returning to Haiti was a terrifying prospect. Port-au-Prince, the capital, is under gang control. The airport there is closed, and even if they could fly into a different part of the country, they would have nowhere to go. The roads to their families’ homes are also under gang control, leaving them trapped with no safe place to seek refuge.

Sherlie’s voice broke the silence. “If we go back to Haiti, it’s like we’re being sent to die. Port-au-Prince is a war zone, and the rest of the country isn’t much better. I can’t even get to my mom’s house. The roads are controlled by the gangs. They’ll take us, and there’s nothing we can do.”

When asked what they would do after they arrived and how would they survive, Kevenson’s answer was bleak.

Kevenson shook his head. “You get off the plane, and you just don’t know what happens next. You turn left or right and hope for the best. But it’s not safe. We’ll be targets, easy prey. We’ve been to America. We’re marked now.”

None of them had prepared for this reality. They had worked hard to create a life in the United States, and now, it seems as though they have no choice but to go back to a country on the brink of collapse. The fear of what will happen when they get off the plane in Haiti is overwhelming.

Kimberly said, “The government is saying they don’t belong here anymore, but they have followed every rule. They have done everything right. They deserve to stay.”

“We can’t just give up,” Kimberly said, her voice steady but filled with resolve. “We’ll fight this for you, for your family, for everyone who’s in the same situation. We have to try.”

Kimberly pleaded, “We all heard the soundbites about illegal criminals infiltrating our country and how the next four years would be spent expelling them from our communities. But Kevenson and Sherlie are not criminals. They are not a drain on our community. So why are they being targeted? Please contact your U.S. congressional and senate representatives today. Call them, email them, write to them. In the Texas Panhandle, our congressman is Ronny Jackson, and our Senators are Ted Cruz and John Cornyn. Contact them today.”

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:
Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

CALL IN ORDERS WELCOME

The Clarendon Lions Club held its regular Tuesday noon meeting April 8, 2025, with Boss Lion Richard Green in command.

We had fourteen Lions present and Sweetheart Lauren Ceniceros

Lion Roger Estlack gave an update from a brief conversation with the District Governor, there were 50 registrations and 25 attendants for the District Convention in Hereford last Saturday. Weather played a factor in attendance. Shirts have been ordered for those who registered in time to receive a shirt for the 5K, but registrations are still open through race day on April 26.

Boss Lion Richard Green reminded everyone of Palm Sunday Service this coming Sunday at the Community Fellowship Church, and he said and a Meet the Candidate Night will be held April 22 at 6 p.m. for City Council candidates. Prior to that time at 3 p.m., TxDOT will have contractor present to discuss the bridge replacement on US 287 behind the Donley County State Bank and Herring Bank.

The club issued a big thank you to those who participated in the Clarendon College Day of Service last Wednesday and helped clean up parts of town as well as disassemble flags for retirement at the Lions Hall.

Lion Brian Barboza gave an update from the city, which is still taking applications for Lifeguards.

Blue pinwheels were set up in front of the Lions Club building for Child Abuse Awareness Month.

There being no further business, we adjourned to spread Lionism and good cheer throughout our fair county.

Tennis players compete in District meet

By Sandy Anderberg

The Bronco and Lady Bronco tennis players competed in the district meet in Vernon on Monday. Despite playing hard against good competition, the players did not advance to the next level.

According to coach Harley Shafer, Ben Estlack went two straight sets at 4-6, 4-6 before succumbing to his opponent. Dalton Coles stretched out his first set narrowly losing at 5-7 but rebounded nicely in the second ,winning a seven-point tiebreaker to push a last set. Coles gave a good fight but fell short losing 5-7.

Kaleb Mays and Kendon Hanes teamed up in the men’s doubles and were defeated 0-6 in two sets.

On the Lady Bronco side, Lauren Cenicerlos lost in two sets at 1-6 and 1-6, and Gracie Ellis did well in the first set but lost 5-7 and dropped the second set in a 10-point tiebreaker.

Bronco JV runs at district meet

Broncos fall short to Wellington in ten innings

By Sandy Anderberg

The Broncos fought until the very end in their attempt to take out the Wellington Skyrockets last week at home. They gave their all, but the Skyrockets added two runs in the 10th and the game was over.

Wellington jumped out to an early three-run lead after the opening inning and led by six after three. Hayden Moore was on pitching duty for four innings and allowed seven hits, nine runs, and struck out three. Braylon Rice stepped in for the remaining six innings and allowed three hits, two runs, and knocked out six hitters.

The Broncos’ bats were going strong and they were able to add one run in the second inning when Mason Allred scored on an error by the pitcher. But the Rockets had another big inning in the third to go up 9-1 in the top of the fourth.

The momentum swung in the bottom of the fourth when the Broncos were able to add eight runs to tie the score at 9. Hot bats, base on balls, and errors by Wellington gave the Broncos the energy they needed to make a comeback.

They were able to score two runs before receiving their first out and then Allred homered on a fly ball to left field before the final out of the innings.

Both teams went scoreless for five innings until the Rockets earned two runs. They took advantage of a Bronco error in the field and scored one run, then a hard-hit single to third base allows another run for Wellington.

A pop-up fly caught by Kreed Robinson on second base ended the Rockets’ time at the plate. The Broncos had the tying run on second when three outs caught up with them and the game ended at 9-11.

The Broncos will continue their schedule April 11 at home against Memphis at 4:30 p.m. and the Bronco JV will host Sanford-Fritch on April 12 at 11:00 a.m. The Broncos will be at home against Floydada on April 15 as they near the end of their regular season.

Elam records grand slam against Lady Hornets

By Sandy Anderberg

The Lady Broncos had an easy time with the Lady Hornets defeating them 22-0 last week.

Tandie Cummins was on the mound and allowed only two hits and managed seven strike-outs. Cummins threw 67 pitches, 47 of which were strikes, and allowed no walks in her five innings at the helm.

Senior Hayden Elam got things rolling with a double to start things off scoring Kennadie Cummins for the first run of the game. T. Cummins hit a line-drive double to score Elam and Zane Cruse stepped up and slammed a big hit to left field and collect an RBI. K. Cummins brought home two more runs in the first inning on a single to short stop to put the ladies up six to zero.

Elam was able to get the big hit of the game in the second inning that would score four of the eight runs the ladies earned in the second inning and T. Cummins threw down a triple, Elliot Frausto posted a single, but earned three bases on errors before the team ended the next inning with a 19-0 lead. Chelsea Wright and Riley Jantz did a good job in the fourth to help the Lady Broncos in the shut out.

Elam finished with a single, double, and a grand slam, driving in seven runs on three hits. T. Cummins posted a double, triple, and finished with three RBI and as many runs. K. Cummins, Cruse, Jantz, Frausto, and Maloree Wann all had big hits in the game and Shelby Christopher had a single, RBI, and one run, while Williams walked three times and accumulated two runs.

The Lady Broncos will play Memphis at home on Friday, April 11, at 4:00 p.m. and play at Randall on Saturday at 1:00 p.m.
